FRESH REVOLT IN MEXICO

BRITISH SEEK AIR CONTROL OF AMERICA

$20,000,000 Company to Back Venture.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—Establishment in the United States of a British built air service, controlled by Great Britain in the same way that the merchant marine was dominated prior to the war with Germany, is foreseen by military and commercial airmen in this country as a result of the extended visit here of Handley-Page, the famous English airplane builder, and the incorporation of a $20,000,000 company under the laws of Delaware.

Rumor has been busy for several weeks with the presence of Handley-Page on these shores, and his recent visit to Cleveland, O., was followed by reports that that city was to be made a great "air port." In the meantime he has opened a suite of offices in New York, which he occupied with W. H. Workman, his American representative, and from that place the project for an American aerial transport under British control is being directed.

Capital Twenty Millions.

The new corporation is known as the Aerial Transport company, and Judge Gray of Niagara Falls is its temporary president. Its capital is fixed at $20,000,000, and it is understood that a special company had been organized to handle the securities and underwrite the stock. This latter company is called the Aerial Securities company and W. L. Bracket of Kansas City is its president. As the Aerial Transport company is expected to purchase a large number of planes from Handley-Page, the British manufacturer, according to information which has reached Washington, has invested heavily in its stock, and has arranged to turn over to its airplanes valued at $2,500,000, in payment for such stock.

Owns Majority of Stock.

The Handley-Page, Ltd., of England, owns 51 per cent of the syndicate which bought from the British government all of its old war supplies for aeronautics, such as airplanes, motors, spares, etc., at very low prices. Some of these planes are now being shipped to this country for use by the new company, which will open its air routes with this equipment, which has become obsolete for military purposes. The all-metal planes, first developed by the Germans, are coming into general use as fighting machines, relegating the wood and fabric machines to commercial purposes.

Within a year, or less, it is planned to have ten trunk lines in operation in the United States, reaching from New York to San Francisco and branching off to the north and south to important centers. For the first year it is planned to carry express only, and it is believed in Washington that British interests connected with the American Express company are directly concerned in the new plan to carry express by air. After the air express routes have been well established and their operation standardized, it is expected that a passenger carrying service will be started.

Personnel of Company.

Col. Halsey Dunwoody, assistant chief of air service, is expected to be manager of one of the departments of the new company, and Commander P. N. Bellinger of NC-3 fame, is secretary. Former Lieut. Col. Hartz, who flew "around the rim" of the United States in a Martin bomber a few weeks ago, is to be in charge of the traffic department, and Charles H. Day, former consulting engineer of the Standard Aircraft company, has charge of the motor department. The remainder of the personnel, it is stated on good authority, comes from England and from the American Express company.

John A. Jordan, formerly connected with the United States aerial mail service, is connected with the company.

The activities of Mr. Handley-Page in this country are viewed in many quarters as only a part of a well defined program. A few months after the armistice a conference was held in London between high government officials and British aircraft manufacturers, resulting in the organization of the syndicate which Mr. Handley-Page controls. The program agreed on had three main features. First, the establishment of a civil department of aviation to encourage commercial flying; second, employment of aviators of the royal flying corps in such work so they would always be in training; and,

FRENCH LEADER MADE APPEAL TO OUST PERSHING

Writer Tells Pleas Given to Foch.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, May 22.—A direct statement that "The American high command" during the Argonne battle was personally discussed by Gen. Foch and a high member of the French government with a view to recommending that President Wilson "take radical steps" is made by Raymond Recouly, a prominent French writer who is known in France as the man close in touch with Marshal Fouch.

The intimation throughout Recouly's article in today's Figaro is that Clemenceau discussed with Marshal Foch the proposition of having Gen. Pershing relieved of command of the American forces, which at that time had been held up and were suffering heavy losses in the Argonne.

Based on Foch's Diary.

M. Recouly attributes his startling information to Gen. Foch's diary and personal correspondence and also to heretofore unpublished documents which he alone was allowed to consult. The revelations are made in Recouly's book, entitled "Foch's Battle, Covering the Period from the Doullens Conference, in March, 1918, to the Armistice."

Discussing Gen. Foch as a strategist, Recouly writes the marshal's capacity in that direction is not superseded by his ability as a diplomat.

Asked Appeal to Wilson.

To explain this he writes: "One day—it was after the Americans had got tied up east of the Argonne—one of our statesmen, of whom patience is not a dominant quality, said to Marshal Foch: 'If matters continue like this, the American army is not likely to render us all of the services which we are entitled to expect from them. This is not the fault of the American soldiers and officers, who fought admirably.'

"'You have done your best to make their high command realize the situation. Now, however, the matter must be brought to President Wilson's notice.'

Foch Opposes Plan.

"Gen. Foch, after having reflected twenty-four hours, gave his answer. He showed himself opposed to all radical measures. He opposed any outburst which, far from improving the situation, would on the contrary only aggravate it. He said it would be best to perservere in being conciliatory as heretofore.

"'The help given by the Americans,' he said, 'has been most precious for us. Their army had to undergo its apprenticeship in war. That is what it is doing now day by day and the progress is noticeable. The part it will play in the victory cannot fail to be larger every day.'"

There can be no doubt that the French "statesmen of whom patience is not the dominant quality" was Clemenceau.

BAKER DOUBTS THE STORY.

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—Secretary of War Baker today was questioned in regard to the Recouly statement that a high French official had planned to ask a change in the American high command during the battle in the Argonne.

"I never heard of it," he said. "Nothing like that ever was called to my attention."

MILADY'S "FAGS" DRAW FIRE OF WOMEN'S CLUBS

Support of Ald. Max Adamowski's proposed ordinance to prohibit women smoking in public was pledged yesterday by the League of Cook County Women's Clubs at a meeting in the Fine Arts building. A resolution presented by Lucy Page Gaston read in part:

"The cigaret habit has assumed alarming proportions among women and girls as well as among men and boys, thereby menacing not only the well being of the individual, but threatening serious race deterioration."

Miss Gaston declared that if "95 per cent of the women as well as the men become smokers there will be no element left in society to maintain the single standard of virtue." She believed that if necessary, the men themselves would dispense with the cigaret in public in order to safeguard women.

The resolution, which was unanimously adopted, will be presented to the various women's clubs of the city for adoption.

French Railway Workers to Continue on Strike

PARIS, May 22.—The Federal Council of Railway Workers decided at a meeting this evening to continue the strike. The railway workers, it is asserted, will be supported by all unions following upon the decision of the national council of the labor confederation.

TWO POLICEMEN NAMED IN BOOZE MYSTERY THEFT

Raid "Covered Up"; Driver Tells All.

Two plain clothes policemen were identified yesterday as participants in that mysterious $30,000 whisky robbery which the police know nothing about.

They are Joseph Pijonowski of 2726 South Crawford avenue, and Fred Krause of 3701 South Winchester avenue. Both are assigned to Maxwell street station. But they deny they had anything to do with the robbery.

Four policemen are said to have "diverted" the whisky in this manner:

A ten ton red truck was sliding north in the shadows of Halsted street at 1:30 o'clock Saturday morning, loaded with twelve barrels of Kentucky's best. It was going to the Rainbo Gardens at 4814 North Clark street.

Rum Runner Commandeered.

Fred Wolf of 2464 North Lincoln avenue, a teaming contractor, the owner of the truck, was driving. His helper, Frank, was with him. At Twenty-first street the four policemen, drawing their revolvers and showing their stars, stopped the red rum runner and got aboard.

Half a block north they directed Wolf and Frank to get off and stay off, and forget all about it. They rolled merrily on with the truck. Wolf didn't report the matter to the police. Not Wolf. He called up Fred Mann of 1214 Glenlake avenue, manager of the Rainbo, and one of its owners.

Mann didn't notify the police—not officially. He got quietly in touch with Detectives Kelley and Allen of Summerdale station. Kelley and Allen made an unofficial investigation which didn't get far.

The story was told to a city hall official nameless for the present. The official communicated with Capt. William F. Russell of Maxwell street station without taking Chief of Police Garrity into his confidence, and ordered Russell to have a "show up" of all his men at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Two Identified at "Review."

This "show up" was managed with great secrecy. The detectives and plain clothes men came in pairs, to be viewed by Wolf, Frank, Mann, Capt. Russell, and Lieut. Sylvester Cotter. Wolf identified Pijanowski and Krause.

The detectives say they were not told they had been identified. There was no move to suspend them. They were not even questioned by their superiors.

Capt. Russell denied there was any show up or that anybody had been identified. Cotter didn't know much about it. Mann denied he was there.

Mann also denies that he knows the least thing about the robbery or that it would interest him if he did. But Wolf admitted everything. He said he had identified the two policemen. He said he had driven the truck. He said he was taking the liquor to the Rainbo gardens. He said Russell knew all about the affair, as did the city hall official.

Truck Found, Empty.

The red truck was discovered by Detective Sergeants Neary and Vaughan at Van Buren street and Sacramento avenue. It was as empty as that other truck that was stolen en route to the Rainbo gardens a few months ago—the one owned by the Retzke Express and Moving company which contained $5,000 worth of booze, consigned by a Lake street liquor firm.

Detectives Kelley and Allen of Summerdale learned the truck had been found, and Allen asked Neary and Vaughan to turn it over to Wolf. The truck hadn't been reported stolen, Allen pointed out, so it wasn't really necessary to make a record of it. Couldn't it be turned over quietly and with no fuss?

Neary and Vaughan told Allen they weren't "covering up anything for anybody." They recorded the finding of the truck. Allen couldn't be located last night, nor the city official, nor Capt. Russell, nor the twelve barrels of booze.

After "Million Dollar Syndicate."

Some of the liquor stolen by the "million dollar whisky syndicate" may be located by the federal agents, for seven members of the syndicate have confessed and warrants have been issued for the search of at least one private home and several saloons. Warrants will be issued also for the search of a prominent south side club and several "gold coast" mansions, if the agents can confirm certain information they have received.

Four saloonkeepers have been arrested. Each is said to have bought twenty-five cases from the whisky ring. Two are said to have confessed.

OUR 'HORRIBLE' SPEECH SOON IS TO BE 'LOVELY'

Woman's Club Trails Erring Tongues.

Tatterdemalion.

Know how to pronounce it? Know what it means? Well, you're one in a hundred if you do, according to statements made yesterday by the Chicago Woman's club.

Do you use the words "horrible," "terrible," "lovely" often? Has your use of them made their utterance so common that their true value has been lost? If your answer is "yes," you are one of the thousands the woman's club will attempt to educate.

How often do use the words "gentlewoman" or "high bred"? Not so very often, eh? Another reason why the woman's club will give you attention.

Will Nimble Youthful Tongues.

Have your children fewer than 500 words in their vocabularies when they graduate from the eighth grade? The club will look after your children, too.

In fact, the Chicago Woman's club has been studying the question of language as used by Americans for the last three years and they say we're all wrong. In fact, so far wrong that the club has turned to Elizabethan literature and has decided to form an Elizabethan society in Chicago. The new society will be patterened after the one in London.

"Certain feminized words have become so common that they take the place of more expressive phrases," said Mrs. Katharine Knowles Robbins, chairman of the better speech committee of the club, yesterday. "Our women use the same words over and over again and it would be safe to say that the same word used thirty times a day was not used properly more than once."

What's Your Definition?

Then Mrs. Robbins announced that not one in ten knew what "tatterdemalion" meant.

Mrs. de Gusman Garrison of London, a member of the London Elizabethan society, the Authors' society, and the Lyceum club, was the guest of the luncheon the Chicago Woman's club gave yesterday in the clubrooms.

"English women like to express themselves simply," she said. "Americans prefer a more involved manner of speech, I believe. A good vocabulary is the best aid to simple expression and the works of the Elizabethan authors, necessarily expurgated, should help."

JOHN M. GLENN'S LIQUOR TAKEN TO PAY POKER LOSS

John M. Glenn, secretary of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, learned yesterday who it was that stole the twenty-two bottles of gin and the nine bottles of bourbon from his Evanston cellar—all that was left.

His chauffeur, Lonney Buford, confessed to the theft, saying he had lost at poker and thought to make it up. He sold all the liquor, he said, to a Chicagoan for $125.

Detective Sergeant Andrew Johnston solved the puzzle. He believed an automobile was used in hauling the liquor away, so he questioned the chauffeur. Then he went to every place the chauffeur said he had been. At one place he found a bottle of gin—empty. So Buford was arrested.

JOHNSON HOLDS LEAD OVER WOOD IN OREGON VOTE

Portland, Ore., May 22.—Senator Hiram W. Johnson was leading Maj. Gen. Wood by 569 votes at 9 o'clock tonight, with half the precincts of the state heard from, according to returns from yesterday's presidential preference primary compiled by the Portland Oregonian and the Portland Telegram. The ballots counted showed:

Johnson	23,117
Wood	22,548
Lowden	8,410
Hoover	7,913

In the Democratic senatorial contest United States Senator George E. Chamberlain was leading Harvey G. Starkweather by 1,737 votes. This count was from nineteen counties. In the contest for the Republican nomination for United States senator, R. N. Stanfield had a majority over Albert Abraham.

Dr. Esther Pohl Lovejoy, candidate for the Democratic congressional nomination in the Third district, was leading her opponent, Mrs. Alexander Thompson, by 213 votes, based on compilation of 101 precincts.

Auto Thieves Ring Seen in Capture of Suspect

A police flivver was wrecked, a stolen car recovered, and a clew to a ring of auto thieves found when detectives arrested Robert La Mar, 24 years old, 1518 Washburn avenue, last night. La Mar was driving a car stolen from M. R. Plotke, 750 Brompton place, by holdup men Friday night, at West Grand and Talman avenues, when arrested. Police are looking for a partner who escaped.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 22.—[Special.]—A flip from an aeroplane wing at 110 miles an hour, 2,000 feet above ground, was made today to test a new aerial life preserver. Sergt. Maj. Brotwell, from McCook field, at Dayton, made the jump as part of the aerial safety device competition at the third Pan-American Aeronautic congress here.

Play Guitars in Long Wait in Bread Line in Madrid

MADRID, May 22.—The scarcity of bread in Madrid continues. Great numbers of the people today waited, sometimes fourteen hours, before the depots to receive a loaf. Few disturbances are reported in the various districts, the people apparently accepting the situation with rather good humor, some of them playing guitars while in line and chanting: "We want bread."

KAISER'S EAGLES 'KNOCKED DOWN'

Beer Mug, Swiss Birds, Sell for More.

New York, May 22.—In the home of the former Arion club, one of the foremost American German societies before the war, gold embroidered, velvet hangings from the throne room of the imperial palace at Berlin were "knocked down" here today for $35 to $75 each, or about $5.65 for each Prussian eagle on them.

In an hour and a half sixty-five groups of things the ex-kaiser and kaiserin had owned, valued at not less than $50,000, sold for a total of $7,877.50.

A piece of mahogany furniture in the style of Louis XVI. of France was sold at $1,100.

A carved ivory beer mug from the ex-kaiser's Munich palace, where it had held, it was rumored, good Bavarian beer, sold for $200.

Two Swiss silver gilt music boxes, containing mechanical birds that popped out, in the good old cuckoo clock way, and whistled little tunes, then popped out of sight, brought $330 and $210.

A French empire style mahogany couch brought $170.

A carved and gilded sofa, upholstered with silk tapestry, made for former Queen Elizabeth of Prussia, with her initials woven into the back and seat, went for $145.

Voters of Oregon Favor Revival of Death Penalty

Portland, Ore., May 22.—The people of Oregon have tried the abolition of capital punishment and are ready to abandon the experiment. Returns from seventeen counties, including 162 precincts complete in Portland, on a referendum proposition to restore capital punishment were: Yes, 15,827; no, 13,525.

Wolcott the Victor in Primaries in Delaware

Wilmington, Del., May 22.—Returns from the Democratic primary election in Delaware today indicate that United States Senator Wolcott will control the Democratic state convention in Dover next Tuesday. Supporters of Senator Wolcott claim ninety-seven delegates, while former United States Senator Saulsbury is credited with seventy-five.

BALTIMORE BATTING LIKE OLD ORIOLE IN POPULATION LEAGUE

Washington, D. C., May 22.—The following population figures are given out today by the census bureau:

	Population.	Inc.	Pct.
Baltimore, Md.	733,826	175,341	31.4
Jersey City, N. J.	297,864	30,085	11.2
Portland, Ore.	258,288	51,074	24.6
Oakland, Cal.	216,361	66,187	44.1
Lowell, Mass.	112,479	6,185	5.8
Lawrence, Kas.	12,456	82	0.7
Tampa, Fla.	51,252	13,470	35.7
Wakefield, Mass.	13,010	1,696	14.1
Bridgeton, N. J.	14,323	114	0.8
Berwyn, Ill.	14,150	8,309	142.3

Baltimore ranked as the seventh most populous city in the United States in 1910 with 558,485 inhabitants. It was about 2,000 smaller than Cleveland, sixth city, whose 1920 population has not been announced, and 24,000 larger than Pittsburgh, eighth city, whose 1920 census is 588,193. Baltimore's growth in the decade ending with 1910 was 49,528, or 9.7 per cent, the smallest percentage of increase in its history.

LOSS BY STORMS IN MINNESOTA AND NEBRASKA

Minneapolis, Minn., May 22.—[Special.]—A tornado hit parts of this state and of Nebraska, killing a child, injuring many other persons, and damaging buildings.

At Red Wing, Minn., the 11 months old daughter of Godfrey Swanson was killed and several persons hurt. Others are said to have been hurt at Castle Rock. Northfield also was storm swept.

Buildings were damaged at Sidney, Neb., and a famer injured. Two persons were injured at Pender, Neb., and windows smashed at Thurston Hall and heavy rain storms were felt in northeast and southeast portions of the state.

Paris to Lift Gayety Lid for Yankee Tourists

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, May 22.—It is reported the lid will be taken off in Paris on June 1 owing to the complaint of amusement proprietors that American tourists are dissatisfied with everything closing up at 10 o'clock. Restaurants and dance halls will be permitted to stay open until 2 o'clock in the morning and Montmartre can stay open all night.

STRIFE AMONG OBREGON AIDS PERILS ALIENS

New Rulers Disavow Carranza's Death.

The eighth article of the remarkable series on Mexico by Blasco Ibanez is published on page 2.

BULLETIN.

Vera Cruz, May 22.—(Special.)—Conditions are bad in the states of Campeche and Tabasco. The revolutionists are fighting among themselves, and the lives of foreigners are in danger. This information is authentic. Americans here think the Washington government should send warships to Frontera, Tabasco, and Carmen, Campeche.

BY GEN. ALVARO OBREGON.

[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright by the New York Tribune, Inc.]

Mexico City, May 22.—We have appointed a committee made up of two high military officers and two prominent attorneys who immediately will go to the place where Carranza was killed and will report in detail.

The body of Senor Carranza will arrive in this city at 7 o'clock tonight and will be delivered to the former president's family in accordance with their wishes.

On several occasions every kind of guarantee and consideration was offered Senor Carranza to induce him to withdraw from the belligerent zone, but he refused to accept the propositions.

DISAVOW KILLING

Mexico City, May 22.—[Special.]—Although disavowing all responsibility for the death of Venustiano Carranza, the revolutionary leaders here are admittedly uneasy concerning its probable effect on their chances of obtaining recognition from the United States. They recall the attitude of President Wilson toward Huerta after the killing of Madero and are making every effort to convince the United States and the rest of the world that they had no hand in the death of the deposed president.

On the contrary, they say, Carranza was the victim of an assassin, whose motive may be traced to private revenge.

Herrera an Old Enemy.

They point out that Carranza was slain far from the area of activities of the revolutionary armies; that Gen. Rodolfo Herrera, whose troops killed Carranza, had long been an outlaw and had only recently obtained amnesty from Carranza; that he did not align himself in any manner with the revolution, but was in command of some of the troops of Carranza's body guard.

Gen. Obregon has denounced the slaying of Carranza as a "cowardly assassination," has scored the officers who were with Carranza at the time as "cowards," and has intimated that he will not only fix the responsibility for the ex-dictator's death, but will punish those responsible.

The body of Carranza is on its way to Mexico City and will be turned over to his daughters.

In some quarters there is a feeling that the passing of Carranza simplifies the job of getting recognition from the United States and foreign governments—provided of course that President Wilson can be convinced the hands of the Obregonists are free of stain in the killing of Carranza.

Obregon Assails Guards.

El Paso, Tex., May 22.—Carranza's followers, who were with him when he was killed, addressed a message to Gen. Pablo Gonzalez protesting against the assassination of their chief. This message was transmitted here today by Obregon with his answer.

The messages from Carranza's followers said Carranza was made a prisoner and cowardly assassinated at the cry of "Vive Obregon!" by Col. Rodolfo

Herrera and his men, violating the hospitality that had been offered him by Herrera.

"The undersigned of this message," said the Carrancistas, "protest with all their energy, honor, and loyalty to the entire world this new stain which has been thrown upon our country."

Obregon, in his answer to this message, scathingly arraigned Carranza's followers for allowing him to be assassinated.

A message received here this afternoon by Luis Montes de Oca, commercial agent for the new de facto government, from the department of propaganda and information at Nogales, told him to give the information of the assassination of Carranza to the press, "laying particular stress on the fact that the happening occurred far away from the field of operation of our armies."

Protest Against Killing.

Gen. Obregon's message to Roberto Pasqueira, financial agent of the de facto government here, said:

"I am transmitting the following message received yesterday from Saxa:

"'We are wiring today Gen. Pablo Gonzalez the following:

"'Early this morning at the town of Tlaxcaltenango the president of the republic, Venustiano Carranza, was made a prisoner and cowardly assassinated at the cry of 'Viva Obregon' by Col. Rodolfo Herrero and his men, violating the hospitality that had been offered him by Herrero.

"'The undersigned of this message protest with all their energy, honor, and loyalty to the entire world this new stain which has been thrown upon our country. After having complied with our duty, which our honor as soldiers and friends of Carranza imposed on us, we are at your service and we ask only permission to allow us to take the body of our worthy chief to its last dwelling place at the capital city, requesting you to order a special train for this purpose to Beristain.

"'Respectfully,

"'GENS. JUAN BARRAGAN, F. DE P. MARIEL, FEDERICO MONTES, MARCIANO GONZALEZ, YGNACIO BONILLAS, LIEUT. COL. D. M. FERNANDEZ, COL. F. LIMA, AND OTHER OFFICERS.'

"Why Did You Run Away?"

"I have answered, the foregoing message as follows:

"'Your wire to Gen. Pablo Gonzalez. It is very strange that a group of officers who are vouching their loyalty and honor like yourselves, and were accompanying President Carranza with the unfaltering duty of protecting him, should have allowed him to be assassinated without complying with your duty as it will be viewed by the people of the republic and the people of the world—that you should have shared his fate. More so when the whole nation is aware that you are the only ones responsible for the unfortunate happenings of the last few weeks, and which had such a regrettable finale in the death of Venustiano Carranza, which found him abandoned by his closest friends, who at the critical moment failed in their duty to protect him.

Tribute to Carranza.

"'On repeated occasions President Carranza was notified that every guarantee would be given him if he would be willing to leave the danger zone, but he refused to accept this offer because he undoubtedly considered it an undignified act of a man of honor to save himself, leaving his companions in danger; this act of Carranza revealed the dignity and good fellowship which you failed to appreciate.

"'There are signed to the message the names of thirty-two officers and one civilian, which is more than sufficient in number, if they would have done their duty, to have saved Carranza's life, if, as you state, he was assassinated.

"'I have the right to suppose that you ran away at the critical moment without having even made use of your arms, as none of you was wounded. If you had died defending the life of your chief and friend, who had showered so many favors upon you, you would have been honored by public opinion and would be at rest with your conscience and would have escaped the shame of your cowardice.'"

U. S. Problem Simplified.

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—The death of Venustiano Carranza, which was reported to the state department today from the American embassy in Mexico City, will simplify the problem of this government, it is believed in many quarters, regarding the recognition of a new government in Mexico.

Representatives of the revolutionists have been prompt to deny that they were responsible for the killing of the former president. Dr. Alvaro Torre Diaz, confidential agent of the provisional government of Mexico, today stated that "the killing of the ex-president was due in no way to any of the troops of the revolution, whose orders were limited to making him prisoner and seeing that he was safely conducted to the coast for embarkation." This agrees with previous statements by representatives of the revolutionists, all of which were to the effect that they would be perfectly satisfied to have Carranza escape from the country.

Death Guilt to Be Fixed.

While there was no official statement on the subject, it was the general opinion in well informed circles here today that recognition by the United States of a de facto government in Mexico would be facilitated by the fact that Carranza had been removed as a factor in consideration of this problem. The only question which might be involved, it was pointed out, was as to whether the revolutionists were responsible for the death of Carranza. If it can be proved to the satisfaction of this government that the heads of the revolutionary movement in Mexico did not connive in any way in the killing, it was said, there would be no good ground for withholding recognition from the new government as soon as it has shown its ability to function.

The death of Carranza, it was stated, would terminate automatically the authority of Senor Salvador Diego Fernandez, who has been chargé d'affaires of the Mexican embassy here.

Bonillas Reported Safe.

An official dispatch received tonight by a member of the diplomatic corps said Ygnacio Bonillas, former Mexican ambassador to Washington, was safe. The recipient of the message was an intimate friend of the former ambassador.

Dr. Alvaro Torre Diaz, confidential agent here of the provisional government, tonight declared that the death of Carranza "is very much to be regretted."

Court of Diaz, Aped by Carranza, Aristocrat, Lover of Power, Failure

The following article on Carranza's personality and his official family was written previous to the death of the "first chief" and consequently deals with affairs in the present tense.

ARTICLE VIII.

Of all the men who figured prominently in Mexico during the last years of the Carranza's regimé—including those who remained faithful to the first chief and those who rebelled against him—Carranza came originally from the highest social station.

While the present generals and ministers of the republic were still humble laborers, petty merchants, obscure lawyers, or simply loafers, without visible means of support, Carranza had already been, first, a senator and, later, a state governor.

A silent and reserved man who seemed to foresee his future greatness, Don Venustiano moved for many years in Gen. Diaz's entourage which eventually came to have all the characteristics of a real court.

Diaz Improved with Age.

It is interesting to study the portraits of Porfirio Diaz at the various periods of his career. In the earliest ones he looks like an Indian with sharp pointed pyramidal skull, coarse hair, and rough features.

As the thirty years of his rule wear on, he shows gradual but constant improvement. At the end the Indian had turned white. He always wore a simple but elegant uniform. It was common gossip that he employed expert Parisian specialists to paint his lips and whiten his cheeks.

The society that surrounded Don Porfirio underwent a similar transformation. The official functions given during Diaz's regimé eventually became as important and ostentatious as those given in some of the regal courts of Europe. A Mexican aristocracy grew around President Diaz.

Like a Real Sovereign.

In diplomatic circles the balls held in the Mexican capital were reputed to be the best given in America. I met in Paris the owner of a famous restaurant who had at one time been Porfirio's chef.

"He is a real sovereign," the old chef told me. "I don't believe there has been since the days of Napoleon III. a ruler able to give a banquet as well as he, or with as much pomp and ceremony."

Carranza's association with this republican court had its effect on him, as it did on so many other political personages whom Diaz converted into barons, as it were, of his empire.

Carranza at Home in Parlor.

Don Venustiano is a man from the country, a rancher, but despite this origin he has a noble bearing and easy and distinguished manners which show that he is used to moving in good society. He always dresses in black, and goes about from the early morning hours in a frock coat.

Although this gives him the appearance of a magistrate or a professor, he looks more distinguished than all the young men around him, who affect the latest fashions with all the exaggeration and riot of color characteristic of the Creole.

The figure of Don Venustiano helps to create this good impression. He is majestically tall, muscular, and strong, despite his years; and, above all, he is white, pure white. His Spanish ancestors came from the Basque province, and from the Basques he inherited the vigorous health and the silent tenacity of that race.

As I have already stated, there is one somewhat grotesque detail in his face—a swollen nose with a network of multicolored veins. But this does not show at a distance.

The majesty of his white, flowing beard and the vigor of his splendid stature, which gives him the appearance of an old warrior, seem to hide the defect. He reminds you of the conquerors who, three centuries ago, after the conquest of Mexico, laid aside their armor to devote themselves to the development of the mines and the tilling of the soil.

When the revolution made this frock-coated man take the field and assume command of troops, he turned out to be a first class strategist, from the standpoint of Mexican conditions. He always refused to be a general, but the boys whom he elevated to that rank never failed to ask for his advice or to follow his suggestions.

Always Foiled the Enemy.

I have heard many of them tell of the military talent of the man whom they called the first chief. In the middle of the night, when they were fast asleep, he would order them, swearing and protesting, to break camp and take up another position. He had suspected a move from the enemy, and sure enough the enemy would come; but, instead of surprising Carranza, it would be surprised by the first chief.

Like all men born in the country who have made long journeys on horseback driving herds of cattle, he can tell time by the stars and predict the weather. He knows every irregularity in the ground of the whole territory.

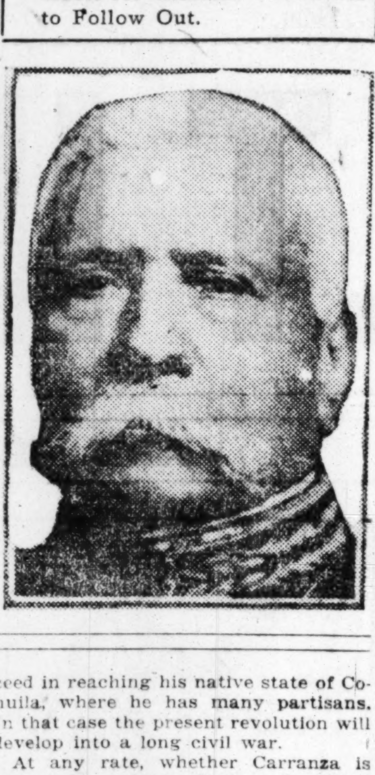
Has Tenacity of Bulldog.

As I write these lines Carranza is giving proof of his qualities as a mountain fighter. Betrayed by almost all his old friends, surrounded by enemy forces, his retreat to Vera Cruz completely cut off, and the last remnants of his loyal troops dispersed, any other man would have surrendered resignedly to his fate.

But the principal virtue of Carranza is his tenacity. A tenacity that conquers time and space and mocks fate. It is more than probable that his enemies, infinitely more numerous than his escort, will eventually capture him. But it is also possible that this Mexican guerrillero, who knows his country better than any other man, may succeed in reaching his native state of Cohuila, where he has many partisans. In that case the present revolution will develop into a long civil war.

MODEL OF THEM ALL

Porfirio Diaz, Who Set the Habit for Mexican Presidents to Follow Out.



At any rate, whether Carranza is captured, or succeeds in breaking through the ring which his enemies have thrown around him, we have to admit that he has defended himself against ill luck in a heroic manner.

This man of 64, his followers reduced to a mere handful, can ride whole days without yielding to the exhaustion of age. He will fight at odds of a hundred to one. If his horse is killed under him, he immediately mounts another, calmly facing a rain of bullets fired by the very men who swore loyalty to him. The days are passing and his enemies have not yet succeeded in capturing him.

However great his mistakes may have been, we must concede that Carranza is a man of extraordinary energy and determination.

Had One Big Family.

What we might call Carranza's court, his intimate circle, had a rather informal and familiar aspect. It was something like the coterie of a provincial governor who has become president, without giving up his old habits of country life.

Next to Gen. Barragan, youthful and debonair, the man whom Don Venustiano treated with great intimacy was the major domo of his palaces, Don Pancho Serna.

This Don Pancho, like nearly all the men of the revolutionary epoch, was of very humble origin. He had a small popular restaurant in the outskirts of Mexico City, and, overnight, Don Venustiano made him governor of the presidential mansion, of the palace of Chapultepec, and of a third residence located in the fortress of San Juan De Ulua, in Vera Cruz.

The former restaurant keeper, a jovial man, accustomed to flattering his patrons, kept his old good humor, changing only his manner of dress to meet the demands of his new dignity.

Every morning the minute he tumbled out of bed, he put on his frock coat. His position did not permit him to dress in any other way. The only garment that he varied with any frequency was his vest, of silk or velvet, as the case might be, but always in brilliantly colored checks. Over it he always wore a rich gold chain.

As long as Señora Carranza lived, Don Pablo Serna's star did not rise to its full glory. The first lady of the land had no use for the major domo.

But when Don Venustiano's wife died eight months ago the major domo became the absolute master of the presidential palaces and of the president's affection.

Was a Good Listener.

The former restaurateur always sat at the presidential table no matter how formal the banquet might be, and we must confess that he did not look out of place among the guests; because he confined himself to smiling discreetly and nodding his approval to everything that was said.

After the dinner, prompted by professional instinct, as if he were still in charge of his old restaurant, he would always try to find out if the guests were satisfied with the service. I remember that on one occasion at the end of a luncheon I attended with President Carranza in the palace of Chapultepec, Don Pancho led me aside to ask me what I thought of the luncheon. His was the anxiety of an artist who fears for the success of his work with a critic come from foreign parts.

"It was splendid, Don Pancho," I replied. "The best restaurants on the Parisian boulevards cannot put up a better meal."

Picks Self as Author's Guide.

You should have seen the seraphic smile of Don Pancho! At that moment I must have seemed to him the most agreeable man on earth.

After that he showed me the rooms of the Chapultepec palace furnished during Emperor Maximilian's reign. As the monarch's reign was very brief, there is nothing extraordinary about the furnishings. All they have are a few porcelains and pieces of furniture given by Napoleon III. But Don Pancho has never been outside of Mexico and he asked me, with a doubtful air, if the palaces of Europe had rooms as beautiful as those of Chapultepec.

"I am dying to go to Madrid to see its museums and to admire the pictures of the famous painter, Belasco."

Don Pancho spoke to me frequently about this unknown painter with enthusiasm.

"Who the deuce can this man Belasco be?" I asked myself. And it was long afterward that it dawned on me that Don Pancho was thinking of Velasquez.

There is no doubt, however, that Don Venustiano's major domo is a man of exquisite taste. Everybody in Mexico City talked to me about the residence he is building for himself in the most handsome part in the capital. It is a house in colonial style of very considerable proportions. Such are the mysteriees of Mexico!

Six years ago this man was nothing but the keepeer of a popular restaurant on the outskirts of the city. Now he owns an artistic mansion in a location corresponding to Central park in New York.

His enemies explain the transformation by the fact that the president had given him monopoly of all the meals served in the dining cars on the Mexican railways. The privilege, certainly, was not out of keeping with Don Pancho's previous occupation. However, the story was not true.

Reward for Young Woman.

Carranza's people assert that he disposed of this dining car business in order to reward the literary labors of a young lady (a former stenographer or telegraph clerk, I don't remember which), who is his favorite author. The girl placed herself under his orders early in the revolution, and went with him everywhere.

This young "lady of letters" invented, and expounded in several volumes the so-called "Carranza doctrine." Monroe had his doctrine Why should not Carranza have one, too?

Just as Obregon, aspiring to be an author as well as a warrior, wrote the story of his campaigns, Carranza, to go down in history as something more than a president, entered the field of international law.

However, he was not a writer. The young lady wielded the pen, while the "old man" revised the text, made suggestions, and finished ideas.

Sudden Rise of Fortunes.

In Mexico nobody is surprised at great fortunes rapidly made. But recently "good business" has not been so common and such successes have been confined exclusively to men connected with the government.

"You ought to have seen the early days of the revolution," many people said to me. "That was the time when money was made!" People got rich not only at home in Mexico, but by doing business with Mexico from the United States. Many Mexicans made millions without leaving New York.

The moment of greatest prosperity was what may be called the second period of the revolution, when Villa, Zapata, and others were controlling the north of the republic while Carranza held the south.

There was also a third section of the country, Yucatan, where Gen. Alvarado, Carranza's agent, was exercising a socialist dictatorship on his own account and, in the clutch of an attack of graphophobia, was legislating for everything human and divine in literally hundreds of decrees that he composed each day.

At that time, they say, there were three agencies in New York run by influential Mexicans, some of whom were with Villa, others with Carranza, and others with Alvarado.

I do not believe that any one of these leaders made anything out of the New York agencies. They complied out of political camaraderie with the requests the agencies made of them.

The Mexican land owner, expelled from Mexico, would turn, the moment he ran out of money on Broadway, to the agency representing the part of the country where his property was located. Confiscation was the terrible weapon of the Mexican revolution. Some of these confiscations were made at the expense of political enemeis of the triumphant régime, but more often they fell upon private individuals who had taken no part whatever in politics and whose only crime was that of owning something.

It was quite proper to solve the social problem by dividing the land of the rich among the poor. And those who held that doctrine began by seizing the lands of the wealthy. Several years have passed, however, and the poor still own very little land.

Property would lie around under a decree of seizure in the hands of government employés or generals, who, country people for the most part, had a good idea of what land was worth. The former owners would apply to one of these agencies for the recovery of their lands and they would put up thousands of dollars to get back their titles with permission to return to the country.

Then there was brokerage! All sorts of secret deals were made between the ministry of ways and means in Mexico and business men in the United States and enormous commissions were paid to the intermediaries.

I know, and everybody in Mexico knows, a gentleman who, six years ago, was what they call a "pelado," a "down-and-outer," and who today owns a splendid house in New York.

This change in luck was so rapid, so astonishing, so brazen, that Don Venustiano himself got his eye on the man, who was summoned to Mexico to explain his mysterious prosperity. The "old man" was in an ugly humor and talked of jail, and the firing squad if necessary, for the grafters. But the accused gentleman calmly justified himself.

Talks Himself to Liberty.

"Mr. President, you have never been out of Mexico. You have never been in the United States. That's why you don't understand my making a fortune in that few years. I have friends in New York who boosted me. that's all. In New York you go to the theater and your neighbor in the next seat is a millionaire. He takes a fancy to you and lets you in on something that makes you a wealthy man in a few weeks."

He talked so well that Don Venustiano began to think that New York must be a city where everybody is rich, and where you cannot walk down lower Broadway without stubbing your toe on a million dollar roll.

The ninth article of this series will appear in tomorrow's Tribune.

EXCESS PROFIT REPORT WOULD COST $500,000

Washington, D. C., May 22.—The assembling of information regarding the income and excess profits received by corporations in 1917 and 1918 as requested by Senator Harris' resolution probably would require from four to five months and cost approximately $500,000 the senate finance committee was informed today by internal revenue bureau officials.

The committee considered the resolution only briefly today, postponing final action until next week to await a fuller report from the bureau as to the time and cost of compiling the desired information.

Under Senator Harris' measure the bureau would report the total of the income and excess profits received by corporations in the two years named as shown by the returns to the internal revenue collectors, but the names of the corporations would not be made public.

Marines at Bremerton Quizzed in Shooting Fray

Bremerton, Wash., May 22.—[Special.]—Three thousand marines are standing inspection this afternoon following a riot in a Japanese hotel last night in which a Filipino galley boy on the United States destroyer Waters was shot and perhaps fatally wounded. The marines are said to have a grudge against the hotel proprietor, and when 100 of them rushed the place promiscuous shooting followed. Prosecuting Attorney Gorman of Kitsap county is conducting an investigation and Col. Thomas Treadwell, commanding officer, ordered the inspection to identify those who took part in the raid. Up to a late hour none had been identified.

"BIG MEN" NAMED IN CONFESSIONS OF SAFE BLOWERS

New York, May 22.—[Special.]—Confessions of members of the Armstrong band of safe robbers, detectives said today, have revealed a clique of brokers and clerks in cities, including Boston and Philadelphia, within a radius of 1,000 miles of New York, who aided in the disposal of securities stolen by the gang from Wall street safes. Two brokers, called "prominent Wall street financiers" by the police, whose names will be revealed to the district attorney by Armstrong's lawyer, are said by the detectives to have been the principal accomplices in getting rid of the loot in this city.

The Brunswick Method of Reproduction Will Convince You

THERE is only one real way to judge a phonograph; to select a phonograph. Compare the tone of one with others. Be critical of the clearness of expression.

This is the test we invite for The Brunswick. It is our favorite way of convincing music lovers of Brunswick superiority. For any ear, whether musically trained or not, will give the Brunswick Method of Reproduction instant acclaim.

Briefly, this method is based on the Ultona and the Tone Amplifier — two of the exclusive Brunswick features. The former plays all records at their best. The latter is the violin-principle, all-wood throat that permits tone waves to vibrate and expand properly.

How's your brain this morning?

You can earn $100 as quick as you can say four words!

Match your wits against everybody else! Send in a slogan for Stevens, Maloney & Co.!

Three or four words would be best. But if your idea just fits into two words, or five or six, send it in. No limit, no fixed rules.

Here's a contest open to any man, woman or child, except an employe of this company!

If you have a number of ideas, and a number of slogans, send them all in.

We'll pick the best.

$100 FOR A SLOGAN!

We're going to put this slogan in place of the question marks on our billboard at the southwest corner of Roosevelt Road and Michigan Boulevard.

The top line of our billboard now is a row of question marks, like this: ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ?

We want a slogan that fits our business. Remember that! If it doesn't fit our business, it's no good.

Our big store is in the Y. M. C. A. Bldg., 21 South La Salle Street. Phone number, Central 3186. We sell everything from a pin to a desk.

Complete stock of stationery, office appliances and supplies, desks, chairs, files, cabinets in steel and wood. And our printing and engraving department is so good we're proud of it!

Make up a slogan that fits this fine business. Send it to us before June 12. As soon as we make our choice, we'll put it on our big billboard in place of the row of question marks. And we'll announce it in our store window on or before June 15.

Jump into this race! Win $100 in gold! Send slogans to Slogan Contest Department.

If two or more contestants submit the same slogan selected by us the full amount, $100, will be paid to each.

VILLA CLOSES GATES OF PARRAL MINE COMPANIES

Acts When Foreigners Refuse Ransom.

BY NORMAN WALKER.

El Paso, Tex., May 22.—[Special.]—Villa closed down all of the American, British, and other mining and power companies in the Parral district today when they refused to pay him ransoms ranging from $50,000 to $200,000 in gold. His demand was made yesterday, and upon the refusal of the mining and milling companies to meet it Villa cut the power wires which carry the hydro-electric power from Bouquillas dam to Parral, Santa Barbara, and the mines of the San Francisco del Oro company, near Parral.

This was the second demand made upon the foreign companies by Villa recently. He forced George Muller to pay $50,000 for his freedom after having held him in camp at Bouquillas for more than a week.

Sets Trap for Calles.

Villa's only reply to Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles' threat to attack him unless he surrendered and accepted the principles of the revolution, at the same time abandoning his policy of making forced loans, was to issue a blanket demand upon all foreign companies in the southwestern Chihuahua field. At the same time, it became known here today, Villa was arranging a conference with Calles personally at Parral for the purpose of talking over the situation with the Sonora leader.

Villa has a deep grudge against Calles, because of his defeat at Agua Prieta in 1915, and, according to travelers arriving here late today, is expected to lead Calles into a trap at Parral, where there are several hundred Villa sympathizers and where Villa has had arms, ammunition, and machine guns stored since he took the town on Easter Sunday of 1919.

Wants to Rule Chihuahua.

Villa has no intention of quitting under the present conditions. He was nominally with Obregon against Carranza, but his close friends here say he never will accept any terms but command of Chihuahua state, which Obregon refuses to give him, because of the unfavorable sentiment it would create in the United States, where the new revolutionary government seeks de facto recognition.

RUIN OF GERMAN EMPLOYERS SEEN IN WAGE BOOSTS

BERLIN, May 22.—Members of the League of German Employers, which represents virtually all the country's leading industrial and commercial organizations, are urged sternly to oppose further demands for wage increases.

The league declares prices of German products already have reached the level of the world's market figures, and, in some cases, have even exceeded them, with the result, it is pointed out, that Germany's marketing prospects abroad are already severely curtailed.

The league members are warned that any further increased cost of production growing out of a rise in wages inevitably would lead to economic catastrophe.

Reports from various industrial sections of Germany indicate a crisis setting in as a result of stagnation in markets for them abroad. Manufacturers of weapons in Thuringia claim they are no longer able to meet Belgian competition. Numerous Saxon industrial plants are shortening working hours. The Ruhr coal output for April is estimated at 6,500,000 tons, a "middle average."

FIRST GERMAN REPUBLIC WINS GERMAN PRAISE

BERLIN, May 22.—The Berlin newspapers comment today on the passing of the republic's first parliament.

The Centrist organ Germania says the nonfulfillment of the entire program of the national assembly was due chiefly to the absence of many members lately stumping their constituencies, while the opposition practiced constant obstruction.

The semi-official Allgemeine Zeitung says the assembly showed industry and conscientiousness in rebuilding the national fabric. It says the parliamentary system in Germany has stood the vital test.

Liberty Bonds as Tax Payment Called Fallacy

Washington, May 22.—The treasury's opposition to any plan by which Liberty bonds would be accepted in payment of federal taxes was expressed tonight. A letter from Assistant Secretary Leffingwell declared that would force the treasury to replace by fresh borrowings money which it would have received in taxes.

That, he said, would decrease the long term and increase the short term debt.

Complain of 182 "Crimes" by French in Frankfort

FRANKFORT, May 22.—Complaints of 182 serious criminal offenses charged to the French forces of occupation have been lodged in the Frankfort police courts. These complaints, it is said, have been withheld up to the present in fear of reprisals by the French.

LET BERGDOLL OUT TO GET HIS BURIED WEALTH

Officials Explain Escape of Slacker.

Washington, D. C., May 22.—Grover C. Bergdoll, convicted draft dodger who escaped in Philadelphia yesterday, was released from the military prison at Fort Jay under guard on a plea that he wished to recover $150,000, "the remainder of his fortune," buried in the mountains a day's ride from Philadelphia.

The story was revealed here today in statements issued by the war department and by the law firm of Ansell & Bailey, counsel for Bergdoll in negotiations with the adjutant general seeking permission for the trip.

Full responsibility for return of the prisoner was accepted by the firm, which is headed by Samuel T. Ansell, formerly acting judge advocate general of the army.

Baker Denies Any Part.

"We, of course, shall do everything in our power to see that Bergdoll is apprehended," counsel for the prisoner said.

Secretary Baker denied published reports that he personally had passed upon the application that Bergdoll be granted liberty under guard to recover the hidden money. He knew nothing of the case until the escape of the prisoner was reported, he said. An investigation has been ordered by the department.

Handled by Adjutant General.

Correspondence with the war department made public by the law firm shows that the matter was dealt with entirely by the adjutant general's office. While the copy of the original letter, as given out by the lawyers, was unsigned, the department's statement said Mr. Ansell had conducted the negotiations with the adjutant general, and added:

"The attorneys for Bergdoll are in honor bound to return the prisoner to the disciplinary barracks, and the war department expects them, through the offer of a suitable reward and other proper means, to apprehend Bergdoll at the earliest practicable date."

Guards Ordered Arrested.

New York, May 22.—[Special.]—The two sergeants detailed to guard Bergdoll have been ordered into arrest until an investigation has been made, it was said today at Fort Jay on Governor's island. Officers at the military prison said they could not understand why Bergdoll was taken to his mother's home at Philadelphia, for the war department orders gave no such authorization.

It developed at Bergdoll's court martial last March that he had spent several months at Hagerstown, Md., in 1918-'19 while hiding from federal officials.

"Berggy" Hasn't Walked In.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 22.—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, the wealthy draft dodger, was still at liberty today.

Both federal and city authorities said that an all night search had failed to reveal even the direction in which he went.

Shortly after Bergdoll got away the police covered all avenues of escape around the city. Flyers describing the fugitive and the car in which he made his escape were sent to all sections.

"This Is the Life!"

John Leslie Hansen heard the back-to-the-farm call two weeks ago through THE TRIBUNE. He was then employed as a clerk for the Portland Cement company. He signed up to work the forty acre farm of C. B. Congdon of Evanston. It is near Wheeling.

So successful has his experiment proved, and so promising is the outlook, that he has now determined to embark upon an enterprise which has long attracted him. The consent of another party was essential and that has been obtained, Mr. Hansen announced yesterday. She is Miss Doris Nelson of 5268 Windsor avenue.

"This is the life," he said when visited at the farm yesterday. He was putting new paper on the kitchen ceiling. The four room house looked pretty tidy. "Yes, this is the life, all right. I never knew what real living was before. But it did get lonesome at night. I think it gets darker on the farm at night than it does in the city. And at first I couldn't sleep for missing the noise of the elevated. But now——"

"But when's the—the——"

"O, on June 5. We're going to spend the honeymoon on the farm, joyriding on my three-horse sulky plow. You know I got to get that old forty all plowed and seeded, now that the dry weather's here."

NAVY HAS TO BE REBUILT, TWO ADMIRALS SAY

Newport, R. I., May 22.—[Special.]—Rear Admiral William S. Sims and Rear Admiral Charles T. Plunkett, addressing thirty-one veteran officers graduating from the naval war college here today, united in acknowledging the college's influence throughout the navy and the application of principles of warfare, as developed here, to future practice of the fleet.

Admiral Plunkett, commanding the third destroyer squadron, at present in port, and himself a graduate of the college, said:

"The navy has not only been demobilized but I am convinced it has almost become demoralized. It is not a thing to be played with and it cannot be juggled. We have got to rebuild it. The principles as expressed by Admiral Sims must be accepted, and the sooner they are accepted the better off the navy will be. There must be a perfect junction between the naval war college and the fleet, and I would urge that all officers who are destined for high command be sent to the war college not once but twice."

Bread Wagon Drivers Vote to Strike for More Dough

Eleven hundred members of the Bread Drivers' union, local No. 736, voted unanimously last night at a special meeting to strike for an increase in pay. Authority to call the strike was vested in the executive board of the union, which will confer with the master bakers this week. The master bakers have refused one demand. The drivers now receive $32 minimum per week and 7 per cent over $325 receipts. They ask a $50 minimum and 7 per cent over $500 receipts.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 22.

MILITARY and commercial airmen of the United States see, as a result of a recent visit here of Handley Page, the British airplane builder, the establishment in this country of a British built commercial air line service which would be controlled by British interests, just as Britannia dominated the merchant marine before the war.

THE senate elections committee soon will begin its investigation into presidential campaign expenditures. Campaign managers of all the candidates, Democratic and Republican, have been summoned to appear.

CRITICISM aimed at the war department for permitting Grover Cleveland Bergdoll to leave Governors Island under guard, from which the draft dodger escaped in Philadelphia, prompted Secretary of War Barker to order a complete investigation.

ATTORNEYS for Senator Newberry of Michigan told the senate elections committee today that if a recount of the Michigan senate election ballots of 1918 showed Henry Ford to have been the winner, Newberry would leave the senate and challenge Ford to run against him again next fall.

REPUBLICANS of the senate today agreed to go ahead with the army appropriation bill, after which insurgents will insist on taking up the packing control and other high cost of living legislation.

THE arrest in Chicago of theater ticket brokers and failure of theaters and "movie" houses to make proper admission tax returns has started the revenue bureau on a nation-wide crusade against tax dodging.

DOMINION RULE, UNDIVIDED ERIN, TO BRING PEACE?

British and Irish Said to Be Nearer Terms.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

DUBIN, May 22.—This story probably will be denied by both the British government and the Sinn Feiners, but I received it from a source usually well informed. It is that within the last few days unofficial negotiations have been opened by the government and the Sinn Feiners for a settlement of the Irish trouble by compromise.

The suggestion is that Britain send to Ireland a ma nof high position—Lord Grey is suggested—who would negotiate as an ambassador for a dominion home rule settlement, thus partly, at least, recognizing Ireland as a nation.

Sinn Fein Opinion Sought.

It is certain the Sinn Feiners have been sounded along this line. As far as I can find out they refused to commit themselves, but I am told they are disposed to regard the proposal favorably, if a reliable offer is made. The negotiator might come as viceroy and it is possible that the head of some great Irish or English family might be chosen for the mission. The selection of some recent chiefs of the foreign office is possible as a choice as many Catholics are to be found among them.

Another suggestion, which I know has been submitted to the government and is under consideration, is an appeal to Ulster to make further sacrifice, agreeing for the sake of preserving the empire and dominion home rule, to an undivided Ireland.

Ulster would receive in exchange three guarantees:

First, that Ireland remain in the empire.

Second, that Ulster have control of its own local administration.

Third, free trade between Ireland and England.

Removes Carson's Fear?

Sir Edward Carson will be reminded that he has declared Ulster doesn't fear oppressive legislation, but an oppressive administration. The latter would be prevented by the granting of local control.

The danger of the ruin of Irish industries by British fiscal policy would be removed by the guarantee of free trade, and it is believed the great mass of the Irish people would approve the maintenance of the imperial connection.

The essence of the proposal is that it be submitted to a plebiscite of the Irish people.

It is believed the mass of moderates would overwhelm the comparatively small number of secessionists.

I find on all sides exasperation is greater than ever against the present home rule bill, which is declared inadequate.

Deadlock; Watchful Waiting.

The Sinn Feiners declare they can go on as at present indefinitely and await a new international crisis to give them their full demands. At the same time I find the most responsible Sinn Feiners ready to admit privately they would accept a full dominion settlement if offered, or rather than have the people force them to accept it.

"We won't stand for independence. We won't have a republic," Sir Hamar Greenwood said in a recent interview. "Short of that, when this campaign of violence and anarchy ceases, the Irish people can have any measure of home rule they can agree on."

Sir Hamar is chief secretary for Ireland and is a Canadian, although in English politics for the last ten years.

Catholic Can Be Viceroy.

Sir Hamar gave one piece of information which will be a surprise to most Irishmen and to practically all Americans and Englishmen. He has been looking into the law and finds not the slightest foundation for the belief that a Roman Catholic cannot be a viceroy of this country, where the great majority of the people are Catholic.

Sir Hamar was careful to assure me that there was no intention now to change the viceroyalty and that himself, Lord French and Gen. MacReady, who comprise the Irish government, were in complete accord.

"I have come to Ireland as her friend and as a lifelong home ruler," said Sir Hamar, "to do my best to bring peace."

Sir Hamar declined to specify his plans for protection further than to say military assistance was available wherever required.

Silent on American Collusion.

Persons dispossessed of land by Sinn Fein courts, he said, will be restored to their position of ownership and fully compensated.

I asked Sir Hamar if he had any evidence of a murder campaign financed and directed from America, as stated by Carson in the house of commons, but he declined to discuss that at present.

Sir Hamar is convinced the murder gangs are small and rule certain districts of the country by terror.

FOREIGN NEWS —IN BRIEF—

LONDON.—Russians claim further gains after attacking Poles on long front; Poles claim to have repulsed nine attacks in twenty-four hours on Beresina river, but yielded at some other points.

DUBLIN.—Britain and Sinn Fein said to be prospecting for basis of dominion home rule for Ireland, giving Ulster local self-administration without creating two parliaments in Ireland.

PARIS.—President Wilson will fix the boundaries of Armenia under a decision of the allied leaders. The question arises how this ruling will be enforced, as the Turkish Nationalists control most of the new territory to be given Armenia.

COLBY DECLINES ADVISING HOUSE ON IRISH ISSUE

Suggests "Good Judgment" by Committee.

Washington, D. C., May 22.—Secretary Colby wrote Chairman Porter of the house foreign affairs committee today that there were "no facts" in connection with foreign relations which should deter the committee from any acion on pending resolutions dealing with Irish freedom, "which is dictated by good judgment" and the committee felt "conscientiously impelled to take."

Hardly Proper to Advise.

The secretary added, however, that "it seemed hardly proper" for him to attempt to guide action of the committee "by an expression of opinion on legislation which is at this stage."

The committee took no action on the resolutions before it proposing American diplomatic recognition of the Irish republic, adjourning until Monday.

Committee Adjourns.

Secretary Colby's letter was in response to a request from Chairman Porter that he appear today to discuss the resolutions. The sessions were executive, but committeemen said Representative Flood of Virginia, ranking Democratic member, had moved to continue in session until the Irish measures were disposed of after the chairman had read Mr. Colby's communication under protest. The adjournment motion, said to have been carried by the Republican majority over Democratic opposition, ended the session.

Secretary Colby's letter explained that "important dispatches which require my instant attention," prevented him from attending the session of the committee, as invited.

COL. MORSE'S SON LEARNS BUSINESS AND WINS BRIDE

Young Charles H. Morse went to Three Rivers, Mich., five months ago to learn the details of the Fairbanks-Morse & Co. business. He is the son of Col. R. H. Morse, vice president of the concern, and the nephew of the president, Charles H. Morse.

The young man had just recuperated from wounds. He fought with the Rainbow division in France and was invalided home in January, 1919.

Yesterday came word from Three Rivers that Morse is the husband of Marie L. Wolfe, former cashier of the First State Savings bank of Three Rivers, a widow.

The ceremony was performed by Judge Pomeroy in Chicago on March 27. But apparently nobody knew about the wedding until the young couple made the announcement.

Charles Morse, head of Fairbanks-Morse & Co., said it was news to him but Col. Morse said he had heard of it. He refused to make any comment, however.

SHOT TO DEATH AFTER QUARREL WITH BOOTBLACK

Charges of 'Stool Pigeon' End in Killing.

MURDERS and homicides in Chicago this year to date 86

Frank "Duffy" Glavin, 35 years old, 23 East Twenty-second street, was shot and killed yesterday evening in the third floor hallway of the rooming house in which he lived.

Police last night were looking for Harry Cleaton, 33 years old, a bootblack, believed to have been the slayer.

According to the story told by Mrs May Kracke, residing in the same house and recently arrested for conducting a disorderly resort, the shooting followed a quarrel between the two men in her flat on the third floor.

Glavin, she said, came into her flat for a short talk. Cleaton followed him.

Cleaton Called "Stool."

A quarrel ensued, according to Mrs. Kracke, and Glavin accused Cleaton, who was arrested on a larceny charge in St. Louis two years ago, of being a "stool pigeon." Cleaton retorted with a charge that Glavin was also a "stool" for "Eddie" Coleman, labor leader recently killed and with whom Glavin was friendly.

Mrs. Kracke declared that she put them both out of the flat. A few minutes later three shots were heard. Roomers ran out to find Glavin's body on the floor, with two 38 caliber bullets in his head. The third shot had missed, crashed through a nearby door, and buried itself in the hall opposite. Cleaton had disappeared.

Find Cleaton Gone.

Taken to Cottage Grove avenue station, Mrs. Kracke told her story to Lieut. Edward Grady and Detective Sergeants Tom McFarland and George Parker of the detective bureau. The three rushed to Eighteenth street and Wabash avenue, where Cleaton operates a bootblack stand. Cleaton had fled fifteen minutes previously He was known to have carried a 38 caliber revolver.

Robber's Bullet Fatal to Woman.

Mrs. Emily Orient, 36 years old, 5201 South Sangamon street, died in the county hospital yesterday of wounds suffered when she was shot by one of three holdup men who entered a saloon at 3101 West Thirty-eighth street Thursday night, May 6. A baby born after she was shot also died.

Mrs. Orient was shot, it is believed, when one of the robbers aimed at the proprietor, Joseph Minkuski. According to police, she was in a wineroom when the holdup men entered. Minkuski and Joseph Zielewski, 3807 South Albany avenue, were ordered to hold up their hands. Minkuski, who had $300 in his pockets, dashed to the rear. One of the bandits fired. The bullet whizzed past Minkuski's ear.

Mrs. Orient, who was sitting with her back to the door, fell with the bullet in her back.

FRIENDS CHARGE POLICE SLEEP ON KIKULSKI MURDER

Apparent apathy of the police in searching for the slayers of John Kikulski, stockyards labor leader, who was beaten and mortally wounded by two men in front of his home, 2650 North Central Park avenue, last Monday night, was sharply criticized yesterday by Dennis Lane, head of the Butcher Workmen of North America in the Chicago district. Lane declared there was "something rotten somewhere."

The police admitted last night that they have virtually given up the search for Kikulski's assailants.

CITY PLANS 'WAR RISK' INSURANCE FOR POLICEMEN

No Premiums; $5,000 to Be Death Benefit.

Enactment of state legislation permitting the city to protect the widows and orphans of policemen and firemen who give up their lives in line of duty through an insurance plan will be sought by the city council Wednesday, if the plans of Ald. Joseph Kostner are realized.

Ald. Kostner yesterday outlined details of his idea which he will put up to his colleagues for their approval.

"The city should be given permission to form a company on the order of the war risk insurance plan," said Ald. Kostner. "It is my plan to have the city pay the heirs of any policemen or firemen who is killed, at least $5,000.

State Law Needed.

"The only way to put over such a plan at present is through a state law. Consequently I shall ask the council to recommend to the legislature that a law permitting cities of over 100,000 population to incorporate such benefit organizations for families of policemen and firemen be enacted.

"As soon as the council adopts the plan I shall begin work at once on the details of the insurance plan. If possible the city could easily make arrangements with some company to insure the men, with the city paying the premiums. If that cannot be done, the city could form its own company.

No Charge to Men.

"The plan ought to be worked out without cost to the men. They derive no benefits from it and the city ought to consider their families,"

Under the pension system for policemen, a widow gets $65 per month and a certain amount for each child under 16 years of age. With this sum, a widow and her children could live comfortably, Ald. Kostner explained, providing she had some insurance money with which to purchase a home.

House for Mrs. Roberts.

Chicago police appeared yesterday in the rôle of "big brother" to the wife and five small children of Policeman W. A. Roberts, slain by Horace Walton, mail train robber, in a gun duel about a week ago, when they underwrote her application for one of the 175 model houses being sold deserving families at cost by big Chicago employers who caused their erection at Eighty-seventh and State streets.

Patrolman H. G. Nealis and J. L. Sweeney, who have already been awarded homes, started a quiet canvass among the fellow officers of the slain policemen for a fund sufficient to insure the widow's payments of $33 a month.

MRS. R. T. CRANE GIVES $100 FOR FAMILY OF POLICEMAN ROBERTS

TRIAL OF "BIG 3" IN ENRIGHT CASE OFF FOR MONTHS

Attorney in Red Hearing Causes Delay.

With the case of Jimmy Vinci, convicted accomplice in the murder of "Moss" Enright, off its hands, the state has a few months to get up steam for the trial of "Big Tim" Murphy, Mike Carozzo, and Vincenzo Cosmano.

Clarence Darrow is attorney for the latter who is accused of being the actual slayer of Enright. Not until he has finished defending the alleged "Reds," whose case is being heard before Judge Hebel, can the second Enright trial begin. A verdict is not expected until midsummer.

Meanwhile the trio of defendants continue to reside at the county jail. Yesterday observers noted signs of worry as a result of the verdict of guilty in Vinci's case, with a fourteen year penalty tied to it. Testimony had shown Jimmy, driver of the death car, to be rather an unwilling and disinterested dupe. They, on the other hand, are accused of being the instigators and perpetrators of the crime.

Perfect contentment showed on the face of Vinci as he walked about the bullpen yesterday with Murphy. They were taking their afternoon stroll.

"Nothing to say," he called through the bars. "You bet I'm happy."

Late Friday night, after the verdict had been returned, he expressed himself as being so satisfied that he didn't think he would seek a new trial. He said he had expected a life sentence at least.

Sixteen year old Richard Putz, whose sobriquet of "Yuma Kid" was branded on the gun with which he killed the owner of a men's furnishing store, decided yesterday that a fourteen year sentence was satisfactory. It seems too many gallows tickets are being voted by Cook county juries lately. So he told Judge Hebel he didn't want another trial.

DONNELLY'S MEN WIN WEIGHT WAR AGAINST WOMEN

Beat Robertson's Class by 2.3 Pound Average.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Four weeks ago, you remember, one Dr. John Dill Robertson, health commissioner of Chicago, decided there was too much avoirdupois being carried around for comfort. So he suggested he would take twenty-five women and prove that in a reasonably short time he could make traveling much lighter for them by reducing them quite a few pounds.

You may further remember I got peeved at him for "stealing my stuff," as it were, since I had been doing that kind of missionary work for years in THE TRIBUNE's column, and went after him about it, with the result we put on a flesh reducing contest between twenty-five women on his side and twenty-five men on mine.

That was four weeks ago. The women had a couple of days start of us, but we caught up in pretty lively time.

The Embarrassed Victor.

And now comes the embarrassing moment of having to write about one's own victory!

Excuse me!

But just read the figures for yourself, and see how many men out of the twenty-five who registered with me four weeks ago remained to the end and compare them with the number of women who survived the diets and exercises laid down by law.

Twenty men out of twenty-five! Whereas twelve women remained true.

And then compare the total male loss of flesh—268½ pounds, as against 127½ loss among the women. Or the average loss per male of 13 17-40 pounds, against 10⅝ pounds per woman.

Women Beaten at Own Game.

All of which goes to prove that the men beat the women at their own game—or what has heretofore been conceded a woman's game—but which will be no longer so considered.

In addition to the men listed herewith, there were two extra men, not mentioned in the contest before because they arrived when the class was filled, just a couple of days later. But they have been among the daily attendants at the Wallace gymnasium and have stuck religiously to the diet, with the result that one of them, Mr. P. G. Mittleberger, lost ten pounds, which he guaranteed to me in the beginning he would, and the other, Mr. H. A. Stowell, lost thirteen and one-quarter.

Not on any one point have the women beaten us—because my star man, Evans, has one pound more to his glory than the doctor's star, Mrs. Susie Jones.

Men Learn to Like It.

The success of the contest is not half as gratifying as the looks and general health of the men. And their enthusiasm about keeping on with the work of a certain amount of exercise daily and a fairly abstemious eye on their food rations promise to keep their forms from resuming any former rotundity for some time to come.

However, just so the good will not be undone, I am going to check them up every now and then. I have their telephone numbers and home addresses, so they won't be able to dodge. Besides, I have the wives with me, because they all say their husbands now look like the handsome young men they married.

Don't tell anybody, but one of the wives sent me a lovely corsage and a note requesting her name be withheld, but expressing her happiness that her beloved had lost a double chin and a "politician roll" at the back of his neck, and his waist line was what it hadn't been for many a day.

Speaking of waist lines, to Mr. Ford goes the prize for the best waist shrinkage — nine and one-quarter inches, H. A. Lazar running second with a 7¾ loss of inches, beating B. W. Hunter by one-half inch.

The improved physiques of these men weren't earned by just wishing they were slimmer. They worked for them. Ask "Do It Again" Higgins, their trainer at the Wallace gym. "They worked," those fellows did.

He'll Say It Pays.

Did it pay to reduce? Richard Roe's answer is typical of the expressions of all the men contestants. It follows:

My Dear Miss Donnelly:

Next to the mother-in-law joke, a fat man is the world's greatest source of humor. People laugh at him from the same impulse that makes them laugh when a man falls on a bana peel. For some queer rea- a banana peel. For some queer reason the sight of some one else's suffering makes the rest of us giggle. And so you have earned my eternal gratitude for reducing me from the class of unwilling comedians to the happy audience. I can now laugh at a fat man without worrying about the glass—or rather fat—house I used to live in. Fourteen pounds—count 'em—fourteen, have disappeared from me. Six inches have dropped from the waist line, and gosh knows how much from my neck. Trousers made to be gracefully (?) form fitting, now hang like kangaroo pockets. There has been a cash profit, also—two suits of clothes, outgrown long ago, are now back in use.

Catches Car, and No Laugh.

I hoof four miles every morning, and to my utter amazement, I actually enjoy it. Muscles whose existence I had long forgotten have miraculously appeared to help me move along through life. I chased a street car four blocks the other day, and caught it. And get this—nobody laughed when I swung on the platform. In the past it would have excited as much hilarity as what they laugh at in vaudeville. I climb three flights of steps without a puff.

An apoplectic red complexion has given way to an almost cherubic pink. My wife gives me the once over rather approvingly, I imagine, and—would you believe it—jealousy, which has been comfortably dormant for ten years or more, has reappeared. Yes, ma'am, your reduction treatment has done me much good.

I know the other men in the class have benefited as much as I have. Bud Morrissey has regained the use of his knees—Ford can sleep a full night through—Nye has found the fountain of youth—Chester is no longer dyspeptic—Evans now fits a small sedan, and so on. It has been a pleasant and wholesome experience, lots of fun and beneficial. Sincerely,

RICHARD ROE.

Below, men of Antoinette Donnelly's class showing what the war on weight did to their waist lines. At the right is M. G. Evans, the star of Miss Donnelly's pupils, wearing a suit he hadn't been able to climb into for three years. Starting on April 26 at 261 pounds, Mr. Evans totaled only 235 1-2 pounds yesterday, a drop of 25 1-2 pounds. In that period his waist shrunk from 46 1-8 inches to 40 inches, a net reduction of 6 1-8 inches.

Boy Saves Life of Lad Exhausted in Swimming

Gary, Ind., May 22.—Gary friends of 16 year old John Beswada of 1537 Virginia street are going to submit his name for a Carnegie hero medal. He jumped from the bank of a deep clay hole yesterday and rescued 11 year old Hurley Howard, colored, who had become exhausted while trying to save 10 year old Max Skillman, also colored, of 1153 Georgia street, who was seized with cramps. Skillman was drowned and the body recovered in twenty feet of water early this morning.

EBERT LIFTS STATE OF SIEGE.

BERLIN, May 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—President Ebert has issued a proclamation raising the state of siege in Berlin, Brandenburg, and the rest of Germany wherever it was in force, excepting the districts of Duesseldorff, East Prussia, Silesia, and the province of Saxony.

HOME SEEKERS PICK THEIR NEW HOUSES TODAY

More Employers Join in Housing Plan.

Additional applicants thronged the Chicago Housing headquarters in the North American building yesterday as a result of the articles carried in THE TRIBUNE. Three hundred applications have appeared to date.

Today will be inspection day at the site. Accepted applicants will be permitted to select their houses. Applications also will be received on the spot by the social service committee, empowered to pass finally on all claims. Tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday nights will be devoted to a tour of the applicants' homes, when the committee will investigate for itself the merits of each case pending.

The substantial success of this initial enterprise has aroused the enthusiasm of other large employers. Many of them pledged financial assistance yesterday, including a large producer of milk and butter products, the head of a big coffee and tea concern, an automobile manufacturer, the owner of a large department store, and several financiers operating chain stores.

Keys will be delivered to the 175 householders on July 4, and an impressive celebration will mark the occasion. Government officials will be here from Washington; state and city officials will be present, augmented by the score of leading capitalists who sponsored the project from its incipiency.

Other cities, contemplating similar enterprises, will have representatives here. Cleveland, which will send a delegation, has had a representative here throughout the period of construction.

A critical record of operations has revealed from 20 to 25 per cent faster work than ordinarily by bricklayers and carpenters.

Follows Young Brother in Leap from Flying Train

Brotherly love led to a double leap from the windows of a speeding suburban trains at Forty-ninth street yesterday. George H. Francis, 22, an advertising man, followed his younger brother, James H. Francis Jr., law clerk for Clarence Darrow, when he saw the latter land in a cinder path, apparently lifeless. The younger brother explained he suddenly remembered having left a needed article in their room at Hyde Park Y. M. C. A.. Neither was seriously injured.

COAL SITUATION DARKER DESPITE RAIL POOL EDICT

Industry's Bins Lower; Car Arrivals Few.

Despite the order of the interstate commerce commission that railroads should pool resources to get commodities to their destinations, the coal situation in Chicago showed no improvement yesterday. All reports show that a continuance of the shortage will cause a partial shutdown of industry within the next few days.

The Peoples Gas company reported it had received only thirty of its daily shipment of fifty cars of coal and that if the present rate kept up it would be in serious difficulty before many days have passed. Other concerns reported a like condition.

William H. Leland, vice president of the Consumers' company, the largest coal dealers in the Chicago district, said the current shipment of coal was the smallest in the history of the city and that drastic measures would be necessary unless relief came quickly.

Blame Minimum Wage Move.

Railroad men attending the hearings of the United States rail labor board placed much of the blame for the labor situation and resulting tieup of transportation upon the shoulders of the interstate commerce commission and the board. They said the government principle of establishing a minimum wage was one of the main causes of the trouble.

"When the rail lines," said one man, "are forced to pay thousands of girls and young men, fresh from business college, $87.50 a month, it does not leave much money for men with families, who have had long training and are willing and able to do real work."

A conference of railroad heads whose offices are in Chicago has been called for tomorrow morning by R. H. Aishton, head of the executives' association. It is understood a united attempt to improve the coal situation will be undertaken.

Asks U. S. Help for Roads.

Samuel R. Dunn, editor of the Railway Age, said that unless the roads are allowed financial help to enable them to acquire 100,000 new freight cars this summer there will be an alarming shortage of coal next winter.

The rail labor board expects to take up the matter of clerical salaries at tomorrow's meeting. E. T. Whiter, appearing for the railroads, said the roads were not averse to giving as large an increase as possible to this class of workers.

FREIGHT JAM BROKEN, CLAIM.

Washington, D. C., May 22.—Apparently the nation-wide freight jam has been broken through joint efforts of the railroads, the interstate commerce commission, and shippers.

Advices tonight from the principal congested sections showed a slight and continued decline in the number of loaded cars awaiting movement, while reports to the American Railroad association indicated a general public awakening to the need of thorough co operation if the blockade was to be lifted.

WILSON WARNS MINERS NOT TO DECLARE STRIKE

Says He's Ready to Aid in Fixing Wages.

Washington, D. C., May 22.—Anthracite operators and miners were warned today by President Wilson that there must be no strike in the anthracite coal fields during this critical period.

Writing to the members of the joint scale committee, which has been conducting negotiations for two months, the president said that if they should be unable to reach an agreement, he would insist that the questions in dispute be submitted to the determination of a commission to be appointed by him, and that work be continued in the mines pending the decision of the commission. He added that the award to be made would be retroactive to April 1, the date of the expiration of the old agreement between the operators and miners.

Ready to Act.

The president said he would hold himself in readiness to appoint a commission "similarly constituted to the one which I recently appointed in connection with the bitminous mining industry as soon as I learn that both sides have signified their willingness to continue at work and abide by its decisions."

In making public the president's letter Secretary Wilson, who has been in conference with the wage scale committee at the department of labor for the last three weeks, said he was confident that when the committee reconvened Thursday it will either reach a mutual agreement or the question in dispute will be submitted to a commission as suggested by the president.

"There will be no strike in the anthracite coal fields," he said.

The secretary added that representatives of the miners would present the president's letter to their convention at Wilkesbarre, Pa., Monday. The president's letter follows:

"I have watched with more than passing interest your efforts to negotiate a new wage scale for the anthracite coal fields. The arrangement to continue work at the mines after April 1 pending the adoption of a new agreement was highly commendable and filled us all with hope that a new contract would be mutually worked out.

"I have, however, been advised that there is a possibility you may not come to an agreement. I am sure I need not remind you that we have not yet recovered from the economic losses incident to the war. We need the fullest productivity of our people to restore and maintain their own economic standards and to assist in the rehabilitation of Europe.

Strike Would Be Serious.

"A strike at any time in a great basic industry like anthracite coal mining would be a very disturbing factor in our lives and industries. To have one take place now while we are actively engaged in the problems of reconstruction would be a serious disaster.

"I am not familiar with the technical problems affecting the making of your wage scale. You are. You should therefore be able to effect an agreement. If for any reason you are unable to do so I shall insist that the matters in dispute be submitted to the determination of a commission to be appointed by me, the award of the commission to be retroactive to April 1. in accordance with the arrangement you have already entered into, and that work be continued at the mines pending the decision of the commission.

"I shall hold myself in readiness to appoint a commission similarly constitued to the one which I recently appointed in connection with the bituminous coal mining industry as soon as I learn that both sides have signified their willingness to continue at work and abide by its decisions."

POLES, FIGHTING HARD, PUSHED FARTHER BACK

Beat 9 Attacks in 24 Hours on Beresina River.

WARSAW, May 22.—The bolsheviki have gained possession of Polock, an important railway function, and are endeavoring to push westward along the rivers and swamp country to the south. The line of the northern front now extends from Drissa south to the town of Beresina along the river to Borisov.

Nine bolshevik attacks have been repulsed in the last twenty-four hours on a front of 140 kilometers, according to the Polish official communication, which adds:

"The bolsheviki are trying hard to break the Polish defense. The fighting has been especially severe along the upper Beresina, which the Reds have not crossed."

Reds Claim Further Gains.

LONDON, May 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—The bolshevik offensive against the Poles along the more northerly part of the front, in the region of the Beresina river, is continuing to make progress, according to the official statement from Moscow, received by wireless today.

The soviet communique read:

"In the direction of Melodechno, after fierce fighting, our troops forced the river Thernitsa.

"On the right bank of the Beresina we occupied a number of villages eight miles west and southwest of Beresina village. In places the fighting was of a stubborn nature.

Take Many Villages.

"In the region of Borisov (on the Beresina, about fifty miles northeast of Minsk) our troops, starting an offensive, occupied several villages south and east of Borisov.

"We occupied several villages twelve miles east and southeast of Bobriusk (about 100 miles southeast of Minsk, on the Beresina)."

"In the Polotsk region (on the Dvina) our troops, conducting an energetic advance toward Sventiany, have reached the line of Tcherkovshtovina village, ten miles southwest of Polotsk. We also ocupied Clubokoi and Sviry, villages seven miles west of Polotsk. A quantity of war materials and prisoners have fallen into our hands.

"In the direction of Igumen, on the right bank of the Peresina, our troops were fiercely engaged. The result was the occupation of a number of villages from three to seven miles west of the river.

Fighting About Kiev.

"In the direction of Zhlobin, Mozir, and Retchitsa, our troops are advancing in the region of the Dnieper.

"In the region of Kiev there have been cross firing and scouting operations by both sides.

"In the region of Taraschtcha (sixty-five miles south of Kiev) our advance is developing successfully. In the Vapniarka region, after fierce and prolonged fighting, we captured a number of villages twenty-seven miles southeast and fourteen miles south of Vapniarka station."

Corset Makers Want Loose Gown Style Changed

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

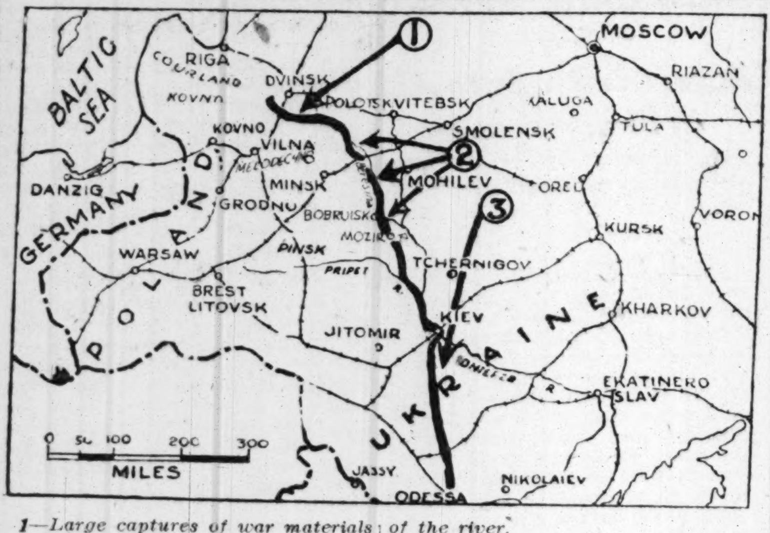
PARIS, May 22.—Corset makers are petitioning dressmakers to change the fashions; otherwise corset makers will be forced out of business. The corset houses state a thousand employés soon will be out of jobs because of the new styles in loose gowns where a corset does not work.

REDS HAMMER POLISH ARMY



1—Large captures of war materials and prisoners and a ten mile advance southwest from Polotsk are claimed by the Russian soviet forces.

2—On the right bank of the Beresina the Russians claim the capture of several towns, while the Polish communique covering the same period of fighting declares repeated Russian attacks have failed to effect a crossing of the river.

3—With Kiev as a virtual pivot, the red offensive is pressing the Poles as far north as the Vitebsk and as far south as the Taraschtcha region, sixty-five miles south of Kiev. On both the north and south portions of the line fighting continues, and there is fighting in the immediate vicinity of Kiev.

RUSSIA FLOUTS ALLIED POLICY ON DARDANELLES

Won't Recognize Nations' League.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, May 22.—So far as soviet Russia is concerned, the league of nations does not exist.

The British control of the Dardanelles under the allied commissions, decided on at San Remo, is not recognized by Russia.

The Russian attitude was disclosed by Tchitcherin, bolshevik commissaire of foreign affairs at Moscow. He gave an interview via wireless in reply to questions transmitted to him in the same way.

On April 23 at San Remo the interallied conference took up the question of the Dardanelles. Allied fears of an Islamic uprising prevented permanent occupation of Constantinople.

Provisions for Control.

Consequently the conference decided to place the Straits of the Dardanelles under two allied missions empowered to act along military and naval lines and the naval forces were to be placed under the command of the British.

On the day of the conference I addressed a wireless message to Russia's secretary of foreign affairs, asking what the soviet government's attitude was toward the settlement. Today the reply came, showing that Russia considers that the chief interests involved in the fate of the Dardanelles and the Bosporus are those of the states bordering on the Black sea.

Belongs to Borden Estate.

"The administration of those straits," the reply said, "must be given to those states, Russia, Ukrainia, Roumania, Bulgaria, Turkey, and if independent Armenia borders the Black sea, Armenia likewise.

"The league of nations never has notified soviet Russia and therefore Russia has complete freedom of action regarding the straits.

"The league of nations never has notified soviet Russia of its existence, and therefore the league does not exist legally for soviet Russia."

PAYROLL CLERK IS HELD UP IN BUILDING; $1,382

Two men entered the elevator in the building at 216 North Clinton street yesterday, drew revolvers, and took from George W. Vana of 2821 Clifton Park avenue a satchel containing $1,382. They made the operator let them out at the third floor and escaped. Vana, employed by the Frank G. Shuman company, manufacturers of boxes and labels, was taking the pay roll money to that office.

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Mrs. Mary Sanraroski, 27 years old, of 1027 North La Salle street drew a picture of a heart transfixed by a dagger at the end of a note to her husband, James Sanraroski, then swallowed thirteen poison tablets yesterday.

PEASANT LABOR MOBILIZED TO AID TROTZKY REGIME

Many Idle in Spite of New System.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Specail.]—The state department today made public a report on the militarism of labor in soviet Russia made by Leon Trotsky, the bolshevik minister of war, at the ninth congress of the Russian Communist party. The report was published in the Izvestia, the official soviet organ in Moscow, on March 21.

The text of Trotsky's report as received by the state department was as follows:

"At the present time the militarism of labor is all the more needed in that we have now come to th emobilization of peasants as the means of solving the problems requiring mass action. We are mobilizing the peasants and forming them into labor detachments which very closely resemble military detachments.

Many Idle in Country.

"We have in the most important branches of our industry more than a million workmen on the lists but not more than eight hundred thousand of them are actually working, and where are the remainder? They have gone to the villages, or to other divisions of industry or into speculation. Among soldiers this is called desertion and in one form or another the measures used to compel soldiers to do their duty should be applied in the field of labor.

"Under a unified system of economy the masses of workmen should be moved about, ordered and sent from place to place in exactly the same manner as soldiers. This is the foundation of the militarization of labor and without this we are unable to speak seriously of any organization of industry on a new basis in the conditions of starvation and disorganization existing today."

REDS WIN GROUND AS BRITISH FALL BACK FROM RASHT

LONDON, May 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—Official advices from Persia today state that the bolsheviki who landed at Enzeli on the Caspian sea have, despite their promises, cut the roads leading to Rasht, twenty-five miles southeast of Enzeli.

The British force, which is a small one, was compelled to withdraw to Rasht, the advices add.

The communication sent by Persia to Moscow a few weeks ago embodied an offer to dispatch a mission to Russia and to resume diplomatic relations, according to announcement here today of a note sent by M. Tchitcherin, the soviet commissary for foreign affairs, to the Persian government.

This note, it is stated, welcomes the offer of Persia and defines the attitude of the soviet government toward that country.

Infant Has Right to Sue for Pre-Natal Injuries

New York, May 22.—[Special.]—Supreme Court Justice John Ford, in a decision today, established the right of an infant to sue to recover damages for injuries received while yet unborn.

This is the first time in the history of American courts that the right of an infant to recover at law upon the ground of pre-natal happenings has been affirmed.

Joseph Drobner, the infant bringing suit through its mother, Sarah Dobner of 19 West One Hundred and Eighteenth street, on April 17, last, seven days before birth, received severe permanent injuries, when the mother leaving her home, fell into an open coal chute.

They're Flocking Back to Ol' Europe; Crowd Liners

New York, May 22.—Eight large passenger liners, carrying more than 12,000 persons, left here today for European ports, marking one of the largest sailing days since the close of the war. Among passengers booked on the eight ships are Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army; Walter Hagen, golf champion; more than 600 students for the Sokol athletic meetings at The Hague, and a number of grand opera stars.

WILSON TO FIX BOUNDARIES OF ARMENIA LAND

See Trouble Enforcing Decision on Turks.

BY EDWIN L. JAMES.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920.]

PARIS, May 22.—President Wilson has assumed the task of arbitration of the boundaries of Armenia.

Ambassador Wallace notified the committee of ambassadors today that the president had accepted this difficult and delicate undertaking in response to the request of the allied premiers made at the San Remo conference. Their request was contained in a note officially offering the Armenian mandate to America and asking that Wilson at least settle the mooted question of the northern and western frontiers of the newly created state.

It is understood the president has not committed himself on the mandate offer, his arbitration of the boundaries, leaving that matter still open.

Hard to Decide.

Under the terms of the Turkish treaty Turkey recognizes Armenia as a free and independent state and agrees to accept arbitration of the president of the United States with regard to frontier between Turkey and Armenia in the provinces of Erzerum, Trebizond, Van and Bitlis, and access of Armenia to the sea. The boundaries of Armenia and the republic of Georgia and Azerbeidjan are to be settled by direct agreement.

In agreeing to accept the rôle of settling the Armenian boundaries President Wilson takes a hand in what is one of the most involved and dangerous situations in the world. There is no problem existing whose intricacies are more fraught with consequences than the Turkish situation, and there is no Turkish question more delicate than the Armenian question.

This is true among other reasons because a large part of what Wilson advocated as Armenia is held by the Turkish Nationalists under Mustapha Kemal, who have set up a separate government and are pledged not to accept the allied-Turkish treaty. In fact, Kemal's headquarters are at Erzerum, which Wilson considers the the proper capital of Armenia.

Who Will Enforce It?

There is no part of the Turkish treaty more difficult of enforcement than the Armenian provision, and the greatest motives of the allied premiers in hesitating over the Armenian boundaries was that they did not see how Kemal was to be got out of his headquarters. This brings up the great question of how Wilson's decisions will be enforced.

President Wilson favored at Paris a greater Armenia, with Trebizond as the port and stretching far west of Erzerum. Should his opinions in that direction remain the same when he undertakes arbitration the great question involved is who will enforce his decision and maintain the boundary he has established against Turkish Nationals sworn to oppose the Turkish treaty. Who will put Mustapha Kemal out of his headquarters and make him him stay out? If the allies were willing to assume that task when making the Turkish treaty they would have done so. Will they be any more willing when Wilson lays down his ideas?

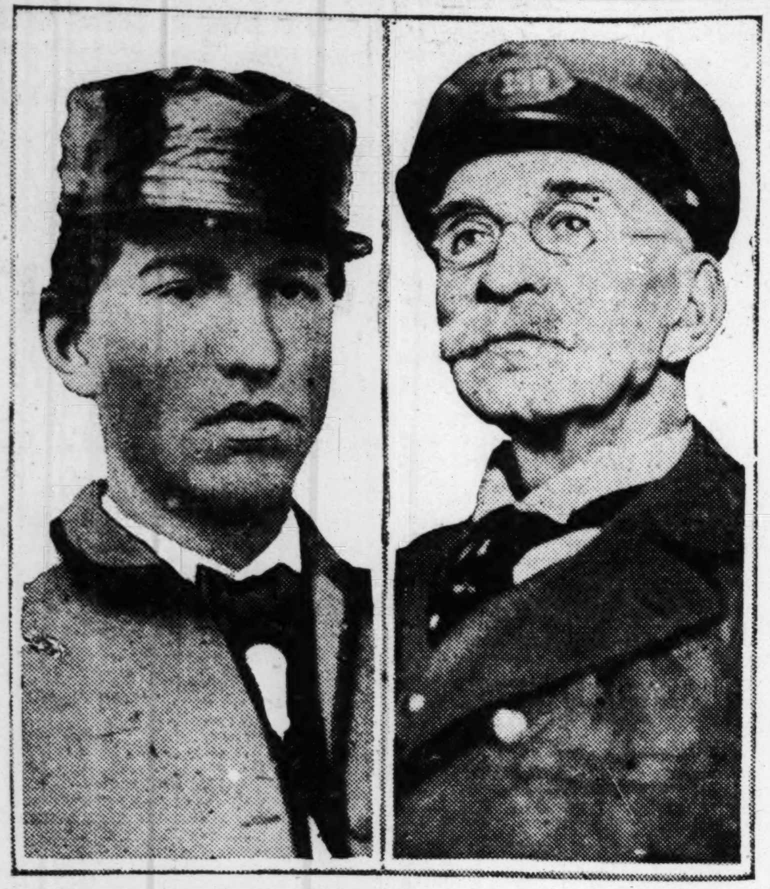
If England, France, Italy, or Greece is not willing to support Armenia, who will?

PARIS WATCHING WILSON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, May 22.—Diplomatic circles are wondering if Mr. Wilson will arbitrate the Armenian boundaries as a private citizen, as the Turk treaty will not be signed before next March. It will be impossible to determine the frontiers until the Turks sign up, so the Turk delegates can be heard. With the Nationalists gaining power and the bolsheviki advancing, it is feared a considerable period may elapse and that an allied expeditionary force may be necessary, as Gen. Foch predicted, before the treaty is accepted.

Fifty Years to Double Salary



J. R. Howe, as he looked when he entered mail service and as he is today.

Here are two pictures of Joseph R. Howe, the oldest mail carrier, in point of service, at the federal building. One was taken in 1867, when he entered the service. He was 17 years old then and a veteran of the civil war. His salary was $800 a year. The second picture shows him as he is today at 70, just completing fifty-three years of service for Uncle Sam. His present salary is $1,650. It took fifty years of faithful service to double it.

When Howe entered the service there were only eighty-five carriers working for the Chicago office. Now there are 2,300. He was appointed by Chicago's twelfth postmaster, Samuel Hoard, in the days when the postoffice was at Dearborn and Monroe streets.

The uniform in the first picture is the first one adopted by Chicago mail carriers.

Mr. Howe is married and has three grown sons.

Starting at $800 a year in the '60s, the pay of mail carriers rose to $1,000 in the early '70s, dropped back to $831 in the late '70s, and again reached the $1,000 mark in 1888. Since that time the rise has been gradual.

PERSHING AIDS FUND TO HALLOW HEROES' GRAVES

Gov. Lowden Also Sends Check to Tribune.

On the list of contributors to the A. E. F. floral memorial fund yesterday was the name of the man who led the army to victory. Gen. John J. Pershing sent THE TRIBUNE his personal check for $100. Other contributions were received from Gov. Lowden, school children, employés of a watch company, mothers of heroes, American Legion posts and friends of those who "went west." The day's contributions total $3,364.31.

Gov. Lowden sent his personal check for $100. The employés of the Western Clock company of La Salle and Peru, Ill., sent $371.45. American Legion, Keokuk Post No. 41 and the Gold Star mothers and wives and sisters of the post forwarded $126.50. From the school children of Dixon, Ill., came $36.09. The Women's Auxiliary Unit of Livingston county sent $44.

The total amount of money that has been sent directly to THE TRIBUNE is now $17,344.09.

The following sums, collected by coöperating newspapers, were turned over to THE TRIBUNE yesterday:

Moline, Ill., Dispatch	$ 66.50
Des Moines Capital	35.00
Total	$101.50

This raised the grand total at press time to $27,709.96.

MEMORIAL DAY SERVICE SUNDAY IN GRANT PARK

A memorial service will be held opposite Congress street in Grant park next Sunday at 3 o'clock—Decoration day. A number of organizations are coöperating to make it symbolic of the city's gratitude to its fallen heroes.

Maj. Gen. George Bell, Jr., who led the Thirty-third division through the war, will be the chief speaker. The Chicago band, William Weil, conductor, will play, and aviators will distribute flowers. Every church in the city has been asked to send representatives. Maj. A. A. Sprague will preside.

The Canadian war veterans, about 1,000 officers and men, will march in the parade. The naval reserves, in charge of Capt. E. A. Evers, also will be in the line. Chief of Police Garrity will be grand marshal of the Spanish War Veterans. Choral societies will be posted along the line of march to sing patriotic songs, and Boy Scouts will be on the side lines to police the course.

ULMAN LEFT $3,000,000 ESTATE.

New York, May 22.—[Special.]—The will of Julien Stevens Ulman, president of the Amalgamated Leather company and a member of the New York stock exchange, leaving an estate of more than $3,000,000, was filed for probate today. A trust fund is created for the family.

CROWN PRINCE REPLACES SICK JAP EMPEROR

TOKIO, May 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—[Delayed.]—Court circles are concerned over the health of the emperor, whose condition is such that his doctors have counseled a rest for an indefinite period from official duties. The crown prince has already begun to represent the emperor at state functions.

SAYS ILLNESS IS SLIGHT.

Washington, D. C., May 22.—The Japanese emperor is suffering from diabetes, but his illness is slight, one of the Japanese court physicians who recently was in Washington stated while discussing during his visit here the state of the emperor's health. The fact that this physician has not been summoned back to Tokio is taken here as evidence that no great crisis is impending.

For some time the emperor has been living away from the capital in a summer palace seeking complete rest.

FRANCE STUDIES PLAN TO PAY U. S. IN REPARATIONS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, May 22.—"Whether or not France acted wisely in accepting the policy of fixing the reparations at a lump sum is best shown by the exchange rate," said Roland Boyden, American member of the reparations commission. "Since the Hythe decision the dollar has fallen off 2½ francs and a pound sterling has dropped 4 francs."

Mr. Boyden, however, shares M. Poincare's stand that the Versailles treaty must be amended to permit fixation of the immediate and total reparations now as contemplated. Other revisions and changes are necessary to float a bond issue practically.

Therefore it is suggested the Germans deliver bonds to the reparations commission, which issues certificates covering these bonds, and then, according to the treaty, pay back the bonds to Germany when Germany makes the deliveries of material provided for like coal, ships, and dyestuffs.

THE CHANGING WORLD.

For generations the American people honored the man of material achievement. The men who laid the foundation of our commerce, the great merchants and traders, the men who built and sailed our ships, the fastest in the world, the men who built and managed our railroads, the great manufacturers, the great bankers were respected in their communities, were looked to for leadership in the important concerns of American life, and were seldom begrudged the very large rewards which their efforts brought them. A city, a state, the nation not only reposed confidence in these men of action. They were proud of them.

There was nothing servile in this public opinion. On the contrary, the individual American of that day was as independent, self-respecting, and upstanding as any man who ever trod the earth.

That was why he could afford to admire and approve achievement. He respected himself and had an unshakable confidence in himself. Therefore he respected others and could afford to have confidence in them. No man felt essentially inferior. No man took a tip from another man. He did his work. He got his pay. He respected his work. He valued his pay. But he was proudly conscious of living in a free country where men were free to go as far as they could within the law, and if another surpassed him in achievement and in accumulation, in power and place, that was a part, a necessary part, of the game, the inspiring manly competition of American life, the best life on God's green footstool.

Achievement in business was looked upon, as it was in fact, as essential to the progress of the country as a whole, and everybody was actively interested in that progress. It was the foundation of our pride as Americans. There was a tremendous job before us to subdue a vast continent, to bring its fields under cultivation, to lay out roads of communication, to build its factories, to develop its mines, to build its cities. All this Americans attacked with zest and courage and the adventure sent our blood throbbing through our veins and through our brains. We had no time and no mood for envious comparisons of individual advantage or success. Leadership there must be, and leadership there was.

Materialism? Yes, of course. The world is material. Our bodies are material. Health and a good part of happiness are material. But there was plenty of idealism, too. Our ideals were liberty and industry and the appraisement of men according to what they could do and prove themselves to be in the manly and strenuous conflict of life. Our ideals were liberty first, and equality, not of condition but of opportunity, and equality before the law.

Evils? Yes, of course. This was a world of fallible human beings, not of angels or selfless saints. Dishonesty there was and greed and thoughtless unkindness. Defects there were in our social life, in our politics, and in our business, because there were defects in ourselves as in the race of man everywhere.

But that was life and is life, and always will be life within the horizon of our sane foresight.

Compare the American spirit and thought of that day and the psychology and morale of this day. A very great change has come over us, and in our opinion it is not for our good nor for the good of our posterity.

Our tendency is to suspect every achievement as being unfair, every man who stands beyond his fellows through a special success as having won his place or his possessions by unjust or unlawful or evil means. Because fortunes have been made and successes accomplished by bad methods we are disposed to refuse credit to any one for daring, for energy, for foresight, for industry. If the American of the past was inclined to be uncritical of success, the American of today is even more inclined to be uncritical, in being hypercritical, or, rather, blindly and indiscriminately suspicious. We condemn success because it is success, beginning with the assumption that any man who is more successful than ourselves must be unfairly successful. In place of liberty, the bracing ideal of our fathers, we demand equality, and we propose to force this against the claims of liberty by denying liberty and compelling equality, not of opportunity but of condition. For a generation the whole course of our enormous volume of legislation has been not to release the individual but to enchain him. If the voice of America was once a cheer, it has now become very like a whine.

Of course we have idealized this process. It has all been done in the name of human betterment. We have called it democracy, though it is not the same ideal of democracy that inspired our fathers to do battle with the wilderness and to build with strong arms and strong hearts a nation of freemen. We have called it regard for the weak and social justice. But it is the strong who have made civilization, who have built an edifice the weak can live in. Leadership is essential to progress, to life. It cannot be had if men drag down their leaders. Better leadership we might and ought to have, but we shall never get it on the road we are traveling nowadays; the road of small minded envy, of perpetual suspicion and futile criticism. Of course, we can tear down. It is easier than to build up. But very few will benefit by that, and those few not for long.

American conditions need correction and improvement. No one denies that. Life will not be perfect until men are perfect. But the most imperfect thing in American life today is this mood which is so preoccupied with searching out evil that it can give no support to the forces that built the good house we live in and are still building. Our idealism has become diseased and perverted. It whimpers or snarls. If in America in former days too many forgot their neighbors, they were nearer virtue than those who in our day think of them always, but chiefly to envy and hate them. Our idealism once thought to make men free in the high hope and confidence that free men would go forward. Our sickly sentimentalism of today has turned from liberty, and concerns itself with nostrums to cure overnight the ills they see on every hand. It has no respect for strength, no honor for what the strong are doing. Weakness, it holds, is in itself a virtue, and all things must conform to its necessities.

Nature and life will not yield to this disease; but a nation when stricken by it enters its decline.

America is suffering today from the disease which has come from the sources of disintegration at work under the fabric of the old world, as infection comes from a hidden cesspool. We need a great blast of fresh air. We need a restoration of respect for the forces which give us what we have, a restoration of common sense which would not let us waste our spirit in envy and suspicion of every one we think more fortunate than ourselves, but would direct our strength to our own achievement and place our hope and reliance upon the general good of free men, the sure progress of a free and vigorous people.

SHALL THE MIDDLE WEST BE TAXED TO AID THE SEABOARD?

Senator Borah is the author of a bill to eliminate payment of Panama canal tolls by American coastwise shipping. Seeing little probability of its becoming a law at this session of congress, he advocates a plank in the Republican platform for the same purpose. He believes such a plank would commend the platform to the people. We believe it would not—at least to the people of the middle west.

Coastwise shipping is of direct advantage only to business or residents on or comparatively near salt water. It is of no advantage, except indirectly, to the interior. On the contrary, if the Panama canal tolls for American coastwise shipping are eliminated, such shipping will cost us money, while earning us none.

It is true, as Senator Borah says, that we built the canal and paid for it, but the inference that therefore our ships should be allowed to use the canal without fee is not justified. It costs money to operate the canal. If American ships are allowed to use the canal without tolls the expense of such use must be borne by the entire country. The middle west, therefore, would be forced to pay a part of the expenses of coast shippers and would receive no service in return. Worse than that, it would be contributing this cash to the assistance of its coast rivals in industry and agriculture.

California grain and other west coast products already can ship to Atlantic ports in competition with middle and northwestern products. Pacific coast grain can reach European markets by way of the canal more cheaply than middle western grain can reach the same markets by rail or barge to New York and thence by Atlantic steamers. This being the case, even with the payment of canal tolls, why should the farmers and manufacturers of this section indorse what amounts to a subsidy to strengthen the commercial position of producers on the coasts?

We have failed to note any feverish activity by the states on either coast to assist us in our efforts to advance the lakes to the gulf deep waterway or the St. Lawrence canal project. When the rest of the country gets behind these measures and helps to give us economical water routes to the Atlantic and the gulf the middle west may be willing to submit to taxes to pay for use of the canal by coast steamers.

In the meantime, we feel sure, Senator Borah's measure will find little support in the vast area between the Appalachian and the Rocky mountains.

THE BIBLE IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The recurrent question of whether Bible reading shall be permitted or prescribed in the public schools is before the constitutional convention.

It is to be hoped the answer will be, as it has been in the past, decisively negative.

The arguments in favor of Bible reading in the schools are obvious and superficially plausible. Good morals are the basis of good citizenship and the Bible is the basis of American morality. With so much evidence before us of the relaxation of moral standards and of the discipline upon which social health depends, its proponents urge the necessity of some such definite moral instruction of the young as they believe would come from Bible reading in the public schools.

But this general theory gives way before the practical difficulties as well as before the objection founded on our national principle of complete separation between church and state. Even if we waive the rights of non-Christian citizens, we confront at once the problem of sectarianism. The Roman Catholic holds that the Bible should be read only under the guidance of the church. It does not believe it wise that laymen should dispense the holy word. And as for Protestants, the problem of selection and emphasis finds them divided. Merely reading the Bible from cover to cover without discrimination or comment is neither useful nor practicable. Parts must be omitted, but what parts?

It is easy to say this could be arranged by agreement and that young questioners might be referred to parents. But in practice it could not be worked out so harmoniously. There would be much friction and suspicion. Politics would be sure to enter and on the day that politics stepped across the threshold, we might say good-by to one of the most important factors of our social harmony.

Consideration of the rights of religious minorities, regard for our principle of religious liberty, the vital principle of separation of church and state, all oppose the attempt to bring the Bible into the schools. If moral instruction cannot be sufficiently provided in the churches and the home, it may be necessary to call the school to our aid. But in that case, it should be provided in some manner free from religious or sectarian difficulties. A code of fundamental moral precepts common to all religions might be formulated and instruction strictly confined to it. But even this would have its dangers in practice and be subject to encroachment.

Editorial of the Day

THE LIMIT IN INVESTIGATIONS.

[Ohio State Journal.]

The passion for official investigations reaches its climax, perhaps, in the proposal of a member of congress to inaugurate an elaborate and doubtless expensive inquiry into the causes of the continued slump in the market prices of Liberty bonds. Every one with the slightest knowledge of recent and present financial conditions understands these causes. Congress' duty with respect to the price of Liberty bonds is not to investigate causes but, so far as lies in its power, to apply remedies—viz.: by efficient and economical administration of the public business to do its part to bring things back to normal.

JANE AUSTEN'S novels, says Gertrude Atherton, are dull, arid, petty. Which reminds us that our fourth re-reading of Jane is due. When a new book by Gertrude Atherton comes out, we read "Mansfield Park" or "Pride and Prejudice."

OUR favorite heroines are George Meredith's and Jane Austen's. Restricted to two, we should choose Clara Middleton and Elizabeth Bennet. They might bore each other, but they could pour tea for us all afternoon.

British Gold.

Sir: In these glad days when "British gold" jingles in the pockets of all opponents of Sinn Feinism, it is curious to find a story about how the British in the early days of the American Revolution debauched Generals Schuyler and St. Clair. The memoirs of Major General James Wilkinson of Kentucky, published in 1817, refer to the incident in this fashion:

"The calumnies daily invented and industriously circulated against Generals Schuyler and St. Clair exceeded all precedent. It was proclaimed that they acted in concert with the enemy, that they received an immense treasure, 'not in Mexican gold packed on mules,' but in silver balls fired by Burgoyne into St. Clair's camp and by his order picked up and transmittted to Schuyler at Fort George!!! Several persons questioned me with much gravity as to the fact!" C. D.

LOVE THAT CONSOLES.

When you were just a little boy,
  With years and cares but few,
You brought to me a broken toy
  That I might mend for you;
But when a brave new hobby-horse
  Was yours to love and ride,
You chose the pretty Jill, of course,
  To share your joy and pride.

And when, a little older grown,
  Your projects went awry,
You sought me out, that I alone
  Might know you wished to cry.
When Fortune showed a smiling face,
  You flew to charming Rose
To tell your dreams, and for a space
  Forgot me—and your woes.

Then, when you came a man to be,
  And problems pressed you sore,
You seemed to feel your need of me
  And my compassion more;
Yet, when achievement and success
  Had blessed your work and life,
You asked the gay and lovely Bess
  To be your happy wife.

My dear, when song was in your heart,
  You never cared, nor knew,
How much I longed to be a part
  Of all that came to you;
But ah, you brought me, all the while,
  Your broken dreams, your fears,
And some I mended with a smile,
  And some, alas! with tears. IRIS.

"His Face Turned Ashen."

Sir: An authentic instance of a person's face turning ashen occurred on the train coming up from Florida. A lady boarded the sleeper at Jacksonville, carrying among other impedimenta a long pasteboard box, ostensibly containing roses, but, as we afterward learned, it was the temporary abode of a three-foot alligator. On retiring, she placed the box under her berth, next the steam pipes. The saurian, roused from his torpor by the heat, managed to push open the top and crawl out. At 3 a. m., when the conductor went off watch, he roused the porter, who started sleepily to gather up the shoes. Reaching under the section for milady's cinderellas, he picked up Mr. Gator, who began to fletcherize on his wrist. Most colored people have an inherent dread of these reptiles, and Gabriel Washington was no exception. Emitting a series of shrieks, he negotiated the upper berth, fortunately vacant, in one wild leap, and the color of his face changed from a chocolate brown to a pale gray. Like a frightened cat up a tree, he refused to come down until the monster had been corralled in a pillow slip and carried up to the baggage car. OLD TIMER.

THE HELPING HAND.

Sir: The other morning in the park I noted that one of the identification tags had fallen from a bush. I read it: "Ligustrum vulgaris." Now, I was an army man myself, and I know the pride of rank, so I carefully fastened it to the bush and went my way. NAIVETUS.

The Toonerville Fire Department.

[From the Valparaiso, Ind., Vidette.]

The fire department made a record yesterday at the Wayne Fidler home, when it received an alarm at 4:40 o'clock and returned to the station at 4:55, after having extinguished the blaze without leaving a telltale mark to show where the fire had originated. Smoke was discovered issuing from a small place on the roof, due to hot soot being belched forth from the chimney. The firemen made a hasty run to the scene, performed their setting up of apparatus with alacrity, excised the smoldering soot from the roof and debilitated the functions of the blaze before it had time to gain sufficient momentum of strength to prove pernicious in its workings.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit, or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations, and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed, Dr. Evans will not make diagnoses nor prescribe for individual diseases. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

Dr. Evans' advice on "How to Keep Well" appears daily on the editorial page of The Daily Tribune.

HOME NURSING OF MEASLES.

MAYBE there is no reason why the general run of folks should know anything about appendicitis.

Some say the disease is a rich man's disease and the patient furnishes nothing but the case and the fee. Not so with measles for measles is a disease of Abraham Lincoln's plain people. Everybody has 'em.

Measles is no hospital proposition. Most folks have 'em at home, nursed by mother and fed up on sheep tea or other home made brews. Therefore when Dr. James Wheatley writes on home nursing of measles he is getting home to the "need of things," as Kipling would say.

He tells us that measles is infectious from the first day (and he might have said a few days before) and continues so for ten to fourteen days. A sick person is not likely to spread the disease except during the first ten days of the illness. The incubation period is given as fourteen days.

Babies under five months of age rarely have the disease and when they do it is mild. Breastfed babies seem almost immune to it. Babies over six months old are not immune and when attacked get very sick. In fact one-third of the babies over six months of age sick with measles succumb.

The disease is more apt to attack children in the second year, but it is less severe in those of that age. In fact, the older the child gets the milder the disease, the chance of getting well being six times as great among children between 3 and 4 as it is in children between 1 and 2. One-half of all deaths from measles occur in children between 6 months and 2 years of age.

Measles begins with "watering" of the eyes and nose, redness of the eyes, swelling of the lids, fever and dry hacking cough. Sore throat is infrequent.

About two to three days after the onset of the disease the rash appears on the face. The rash is much coarser than that of scarlet fever or German measles.

The disease is spread by the eye, nose, and mouth secretions. There is no evidence that clothing or carpets can spread the disease. The organisms which get on the clothing and the rugs die speedily as a result of drying and sunning. Fumigation after measles is not done.

In order to do away with such danger as there may be Dr. Wheatley advises visiting nurses to:

1. Wear a gown when in the sickroom. To wipe this with an antiseptic solution after each use.
2. Wash the hands in an antiseptic as she leaves the patient.
3. Wash her hands before approaching the next patient.
4. Also to wash with antiseptics thermometers and other instruments used with measles patients. The mouth, throat, and nose of the measles patient should be washed frequently with boric acid solutions. Children with measles should be kept in bed for the first ten days and should stay upstairs for the next three or four days. The sickroom and the patient should be kept clean.

THEY DO IMPAIR GROWTH.

L. D. R. writes: "1. I am 18 years of age, height 5 feet ½ inch, weight 104 pounds. I have had enlarged tonsils and adenoids since I can remember and would like to know if they are the cause of my insufficient growth.

"2. Is there any way of removing them other than the operation?

"3. Could you advise any special foods or exercise to build up my body?"

REPLY.

1. Enlarged tonsils and adenoids is a frequent cause of malnutrition, slow growth, and runting.
2. None.
3. Have your tonsils and adenoids attended to. Your diet should contain plenty of milk, butter, green vegetables, bread, and cereals.

THAT'S A DANGEROUS WELL.

Mrs. N. B. K. writes: "Will water from a driven well sixteen feet deep become infected when diseased kidney actions are thrown in a few feet of the well several times daily? The soil is sandy and absorbs dampness rapidly?"

REPLY.

Water from all sixteen feet driven wells is dangerous. Especially is this true if the soil is sandy. Urine thrown on the soil near such a well is reasonably certain to percolate into the drinking water. The fact that some of the persons whose urine was emptied on the soil had diseased kidneys would not increase the danger. Urine from a case of typhoid fever or a carrier would be dangerous.

COFFEE CUP MYSTERY.

E. P. writes: "A few nights ago I mixed a little coffee grounds with the white of an egg in preparation for a cup of coffee, but decided not to drink it that night. In the morning the mixture was green like poison. Will you please tell me if the mixture was poison and is it harmful to drink one or two cups a day?"

REPLY.

I do not know why the mixture turned green. The fact that it was green does not indicate that it was poisonous. While there are some green poisons, there are poisons which are of other colors, and most green substances are not poisonous. Most persons who drink two cups of coffee or less a day are not harmed thereby.

SOME "BABY DOLLS" MORONS.

E. B. T. writes: "1. What is a moron? 2. In what way does a man or woman moron differ physically from a normal man or woman?"

REPLY.

1. A moron is a feeble minded person with the intellectual capacity of a child of about 10 to 14 years. The brain develops to about that point and then stops.
2. In no way. Many feeble minded women are beautiful. In fact certain types of beauties are generally morons. Many Apollo-like men are likewise lacking in think-tank capacity.

JOIN YOUR COMMUNITY POST.

Beginning with last Thursday's issue of THE TRIBUNE a number of American Legion Posts, listed according to sections of the city, have appeared daily in this column. Below are shown the posts which have been organized in the southwest section of the city. The American Legion headquarters will be relieved of a great deal of unnecessary work if the legion applications are sent to the post direct instead of to headquarters.

Tomorrow the posts of the south section will be published in this column.

CERTIFICATE OF INJURY

Chicago, May 19.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I saw in this morning's paper where men who were injured in the service should apply within a year after discharge for a certificate of injury, to protect themselves against possible future recurrence of effects of such injury. I was wounded in the service and just lately have been having a great deal of trouble. However, I have been discharged now over a year. I did not know of this ruling. Am I to lose out or do you think they will give me medical treatment? T. C.

Under the circumstances you mention, the public health board, which is taking care of all ex-service men injured or ill in the service, would doubtless give you an examination and any necessary medical attention. We advise that you go at once to the office of the United States Public Health Service, 512 Garland building, Chicago, where you can have an examination.

All men who suffered injury or illness in the service should make their application for injury certificate before it is too late. Even though the effects of such illness or injury is not noticeable now, it may seriously affect the soldier at some future time, and it is for this reason that the government urges the ex-service man who is eligible for aid from the government to make his application for an examination and certificate.

INSURANCE PAID IN INSTALLMENTS.

Waterloo, Ia., May 18.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I carried $5,000 worth of insurance while in the army, but have reduced the amount to half that sum. I have not converted my insurance yet, for very good reasons. However, the question arises in my mind that if I should not have it converted, and should die before I do convert it, will the amount be paid to my beneficiary? Can I ask them to pay this in a lump sum in case of my death? T. A.

If you keep up this term insurance which you are now carrying and you should die before you convert it to a permanent policy, the whole amount will be paid to your beneficiary in 240 monthly installments. The provision for lump sum payment, under the Sweet bill, affects only converted insurance. You cannot have this term insurance paid in a lump sum unless you convert it to another form of insurance.

No attention will be given to anonymous letters. To insure a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

LEGION NOTES

VIADUCT SUGGESTS WATER.

Chicago, May 20.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I would like to call your attention to the viaduct extending over the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad tracks on Lake street, right next to Butler Brothers building, being full of water on rainy days and also to the fact that this water remains on the viaduct for several days afterwards. Isn't there anything that could be done to remedy this? For instance: have several holes bored in the sidewalk which would let the water run off. It's most awful to walk through a pool of water each rainy day. A. D.

The complaint regarding water standing on sidewalk of Lake street viaduct has been investigated.

This matter has been taken up with the Union Station company, which maintains this viaduct, and the sidewalk grades will be adjusted to correct the drainage.

P. T. COMBS,
City Engineer.

A PIERCING WHISTLE.

Chicago, May 20.—[To the Friend of the People.]—There is a popcorn vender who drives up and down Calumet avenue between Fortieth and Forty-third streets between the hours of 7:30 and 11:30 p. m., inclusive, with a loud steam whistle that is going incessantly. Can he not be compelled to stop the whistle, as it is very annoying when one is trying to study and also when trying to sleep? If they prohibit peddlers from yelling, why do they allow the above, which is much more annoying? G. E. M.

Commanding officer of the district reports one of his officers interviewed the vender in question and had him remove the whistle from the machine. The man promised to keep it off the machine.

JOHN J. GARRITY,
General Superintendent of Police.

THE WIDOW'S MITE.

Chicago, May 13.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—If a married man dies intestate in the state of Illinois, would his widow be legally entitled to his entire property, or would it be shared with her by his relatives (brothers, sisters, etc.)?

(2) In the latter case, what proportion is allotted the widow? C. M. F.

If he made no will she would get all his personalty and one-half his realty with a life interest in one-third of the remaining one-half in addition to widow's award and possible homestead.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

STILL MARRIED

Chicago, May 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People]: My husband and I are separated. He left my house and took his children with him seven years ago, and I have not seen him since.

1. Is he still my husband?
2. Can he claim any share in my property?
3. If a divorce is necessary to protect property would I be obliged to find him before a divorce would be granted?

Mrs. M. D.

1. Yes, if not divorced. 2. Same. 3. No.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NO HEAT THESE DAYS.

Chicago, May 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Am I supposed to get heat from my landlord during the last two or three days, when the weather was so cool, and when I have a mother who is old and feeble, about 75 years of age? My lease reads heat will be furnished from Oct. 1 to May 1. Or will the landlord be forced to give heat outside of period mentioned in case of sickness? J. K.

No.

GETTING IT TWICE—

Chicago, May 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The attack of THE TRIBUNE upon General Counsel Wheeler of the Anti-Saloon league because of the latter's action in the matter of the statement of Vice President Marshall concerning the senate vote on the dry amendment again illustrates the growing tendency of a certain class of reformers to rule by abuse.

THE TRIBUNE, the alleged World's Greatest Newspaper, took exception to Mr. Wheeler's alleged expression of opinion as to the import of Mr. Marshall's reported statement in regard to the vote in the senate upon prohibition. If Mr. Wheeler expressed such an opinion, as we assume he did, he quite possibly was serious and honest in the expression of what he believed to be fact.

But THE TRIBUNE rises in its wrath and denounces picturesquely and effectively what it terms rule by abuse. The fact that Mr. Wheeler expressed an honest opinion apparently means nothing to THE TRIBUNE so long as that opinion is contrary to its own. It serves only as an excuse for a tirade of abuse.

We have too much such abuse. It is the stock in trade of noisy reformers. No one, perhaps, seeks to force THE TRIBUNE to concur in Mr. Wheeler's opinion. By what right does THE TRIBUNE seek to force its own opinion on the world? In the essentials of form, if not in effect, such abuse is the same whether it happens to be the product of the fertile brain of a virtuous editorial writer or the babbling utterance of a mere casual who succeeds for the time being in obtaining a hearing.

IN THE SAME PLACE.

Chicago, May 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your attitude upon the prohibition question has been anything but satisfactory to me. It is with a great deal of regret that I notice your pro-liquor editorials and the propensity you have to give prominence to pro-liquor news and minimize the news and sentiment in regard to prohibition. I believe you are making a mistake in this matter.

Among the people with whom I associate we have discussed the attitude of THE TRIBUNE in regard to the prohibition question, and a great deal of regret has been expressed because of the way in which you treat this question and, as we believe, the unfair position you are taking in regard to the matter.

WALTER J. MILLER.

ANOTHER INTERPRETATION OF H. C. L.

Watervliet, Mich., May 18.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—There seems to be a misunderstanding, both by the labor union leaders, the press generally, and the administration, that H. C. L. applies principally to food products; that the advance of the prices of potatoes, milk, wheat, corn, oats, and meats means that the farmer or producer of these necessities is profiteering. H. C. L. means the high cost of labor, and should not be applied only to food products. The farmer pays the enormous advances in the price of his shoes, clothes, and machinery, and also for his labor, or for anything he buys; consequently he must have more for what he raises, and farm products will continue to advance higher, and also there will be a great lessening in the production. Every state will have hundreds of farms that are not producing this year, and this is going to continue until the manufacturers catch up with production, and labor is going to continue leaving the farms for the cities. This is a natural consequence, for people are bound to go where the money is.

In the future, when all farm products are much higher in price, then, and not till then, will the drift be "back to the farm." R. H. SHERWOOD.

"THEY TOIL NOT; NEITHER DO THEY SPIN."

Chicago, May 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I have just returned from New York City. If any one were to ask me for a solution of the high cost of living, I would say, "Put the million idlers, loafers, and stallers, men and women daily seen on the streets of New York to work."

My conservative estimate of the parasites in New York City is at least one million men and women, who spend their days walking up and down the streets and their nights lolling around picture shows, dance halls, hotel corridors and theaters. They toil not, neither do they spin, but I would not say that they are arrayed in glory, for many of them show signs of ill-nourishment and are seedy looking. The young men one sees wandering around seem to be touts and race track tipsters, while the young women—well—let us be charitable—some one has to feed and clothe them. They will do almost anything except work.

If I had anything to do with the government of New York City I would conscript all these loafers and put them to work—the men in the field or industries and the women in the laundries and clothes factories, and I would make a million workers and producers out of the million idlers and consumers. Those who consume food would have to earn their living in the sweat of their faces, at least until we had a surplus instead of a shortage of labor and materials.

JOHN A. CARROLL.

A CHECK ON INDUSTRY.

Chicago, May 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Without doubt, the switchmen are underpaid, but every strike that occurs delays the time when production of goods will force prices down. Industry cannot proceed faster than the railroads can haul the goods, and the interstate commerce commission, through withholding rate increases from the railroads and preventing them from commanding their proportionate needs in the labor market, have done an incalculable injury to industry besides actually increasing the cost of living instead of decreasing it. Through its parsimonious policy the interstate commerce commission saves the shipper a few hundred dollars a year in freight rates and he spends as many thousands extra in delays chasing cars, carrying big inventories, and paying his truck men to stand in line hours at the freight depot wasting their time because the railroads cannot afford to employ enough men to handle the business.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW
by Fanny Butcher

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago bookstore were:

FICTION.

"This Side of Paradise" [Scribners], by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"Mary-Marie" [Houghton-Mifflin], by Eleanor H. Porter.
"Miss Lulu Bett" [Appleton], by Zona Gale.
"The Explorer" [Doran], by Somerset Maugham.
"Blacksheep! Blacksheep!" [Scribners], by Meredith Nicholson.
"Responsibility" [Doran], by James Agate.

NONFICTION.

"Now It Can Be Told" [Harpers], Philip Gibbs.
"A Straight Deal, or the Ancient Grudge" [Macmillan], by Owen Wister.
"The Casual Laborer and Other Essays" [Harcourt, Brace & Howe], by Carleton Parker.

The six best circulators at the public library last week were:
"This Side of Paradise," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"The Economic Consequences of the Peace," by John Maynard Keynes.
"White Shadows in the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.
"A Man for the Ages," by Irving Bacheller.
"The Great Impersonation," by E. Phillips Oppenheim.
"Avowals," by George Moore.

"HALF PORTIONS" [Doubleday-Page] is the title of the latest collection of Edna Ferber's popular short stories. She is still staggering under the weight of the mantle of O. Henry that magazine editors threw over her shoulders when she started to write a few years ago. Instead of being a garment of blessing, the thing has been the coise of a young goil's life. Everybody has insisted that she writes and that she should write like O. Henry. Result: She doesn't disappoint any one. And while O. Henry could set down an incident in a glowing ardor of characterization and put the oil cloth cover back on his typewriter and call it a short story, no one, however smothered in his mantle, can do it again—because it was the novelty of the doing that made of the result something memorable. Edna Ferber has a keener sense of characters than even O. Henry had. She has a way of doing them up in a couple of sentences that leave one with the same sense of her omniscience that the earlier novels of Arnold Bennett left one with. But when it comes to the fitting of the pattern of these characters into the jigsaw of life and a short story somehow they remain just marvelously real characters without a real relationship to their background. Once in a while Edna Ferber makes a character of an idea—as she does in "April 25th as Usual," and then she writes a memorable short story. If she could ever be completely herself in her work—as she was in the first half of "Fanny Herself," for instance, which was almost a perfect work of art for half its pages and then suddenly dropped into a popular magazine strain—if she could completely shake off Mr. O. Henry's smothering garment, she might well be one of America's great writers, instead of one of the most popular magazine writers of our magazine-mad nation.

"The Modern Book of French Verse" [Boni & Liveright], edited by Albert Boni, is an excellent anthology for the very good reason that Mr. Boni has included only the best translations from the French, made by men and women who are poets in their own right. It is a comprehensive one, beginning with Guillame de Poitiers of the eleventh century and ending with Jules Romains, who is best known in this country for that remarkable novel of the effect on a little group of "The Death of a Nobody." Included also in the last group are such important poets of modern France as Georges Duhamel, whose "Vie des Martyrs" is one of the most remarkable documents of the war and who is becoming known here as a poet as well as an etcher of sharp vignettes, and Paul Fort, recognized as one of the pillars of the temple of Vers Libre.

"Ten Plays" [Huebsch] is a collection of ten one-act plays translated from the Yiddish of David Pinski, the idol of the Yiddish-reading public, a man of deep and sincere devotion to his own people, of great literary attainments, and of a passionate belief in the future of Yiddish as a literary language. Most of these ten plays are comedies, queer ones to American readers, very popular with the audiences of the east side who see them and hear them. Isaac Goldberg has translated them, too roughly, to literally to give them much literary charm in English. But they are most interesting (a word so overworked as to be almost useless now, but one which is exactly the right one in this case). By the way, Isaac Goldberg has written the only critical study of the literature of our sister continent in "Studies in South American Literature" [Brentano].

Harold Brighouse, whose "The Marbeck Inn" [Little-Brown] is a novel with the setting—during the first part—in Manchester, is one of the group of the famous young Manchester playwrights whose renown overstepped their powers, it would seem from eventualities. Mr. Brighouse's special fame rests upon "Hobson's Choice," although he has had fifteen or more plays produced with success. Stanley Houghton, who is almost cruelly dealt with in Gerald Cumberland's "Set Down in Malice," was another of the group. His best known play was "Hindle Wakes," which made a great dramatic event in America by the unforgettable acting of Herbert Lomas, who, at 26 or some such age, created an old man so verily that even critics marveled. Gilbert Cannan was another of the group, though he early left Manchester mentally. He has another book out, just off the presses of Boni & Liveright. "The Release of the Soul" it is called, and it seems, from a hurried glance through it, to be the complete outpouring of Mr. Cannan's "soul." It will have to wait for a thorough reading. After "Time and Eternity," his latest novel, one must breathe much clear, pure critical air before attacking Mr. Cannan's philosophy.

A little volume glowing with the spirit of pure critcism is one of the new volumes in the Modern library, "A Modern Book of Criticisms," edited by Ludwig Lewisohn. It is an anthology of the best—literally the best—critical thought of the time, from such varied sources as Anatole France, H. L. Mencken, George Moore, Remy de Gourmont, Hugo von Hoffmansthal—the latest Nobel prize winner—James Huneker—twenty-five of the best critics who have written during the last generation. It is a joy and a mental delight. It is a volume which should give complete satisfaction to those who are eager for a chance to compare quickly the critical thought of the generation as to art and life and letters.

"An Introduction to the Peace Treaties," by Arthur Pearson Scott, is a volume of concise, authentic information invaluable alike to the student of present day affairs and to the ordinary reader whose ideas about the war have been growing hazier and hazier as the volumes of economic and political insiding have grown greater in number and bulkier in volume. Many of us are at the point now of not being able to see the forest for the trees. Mr. Scott performs the thankful task of clearing our vision. "An Introduction to the Peace Treaties" is a handbook which is an almost vital companion for those who believe in keeping their mental powder dry as well as in trusting in the gods of economic writers.

For adventure there is always Harold Bindloss. "Wyndham's Pal" [Stokes], his latest novel, is the story of a young Englishman bent upon an almost impossible ambition of intrigue and achievement in the dark lagoons of the Caribbean.

A new edition of Max Beerbohm's charming volume of literary caricature, "A Christmas Garland," has been brought out by E. P. Dutton—a service which makes available one of the eternal delights of the world of books.

Prof. George Baker of Harvard, the famous "47 Workshop" man, the Moses of those who seek the promised land of seeing their plays limelighted on Broadway, author of the bible of "Dramatic Technique," has been commissioned to do the pageant about the Pilgrims which is to be a feature of the tercentenary exercises at Plymouth. He has gone to Holland and England to get local color.

The new edition of "The Cream of the Jest" [McBride] has come from the presses. And meanwhile the fate of "Jurgen" is still on the knees of the Comstockian gods.

The fragrance of years long dead and of young fames that have long since taken their place in the galleries of the great fill the pages of "From Friend to Friend" [Dutton], a little volume of reminiscences by Thackeray's daughter, Lady Ritchie.

Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, author of "From Midshipman to Rear Admiral" and "The Art of Fighting," speaks on the matter of the purposes of the war and navy departments. "A war department or a navy department is an agency for designing and preparing an army machine or navy machine in time of peace and for operating it in time of war." Straightaway definition in these times of military compromise.

For those who keep begging for St. John Ervine's new novel, "The Foolish Lovers," there is this ray of sunshine. It is definitely promised for the last of this month or the first of next.

The rumor that the entire edition of Take Jonescu's book, "Some Personal Impressions," was bought up by the Roumanian government to prevent its circulation is untrue. The ex-prime minister's recollections are translated from the French and published in this country by Frederick A. Stokes. They show plainly how decisions of international importance were demanded of men all too little for their task.

Albert Payson Terhune has written another story of a Sunnybrook collie, a relative of the famous "Lad." "Bruce" [Dutton] is the name of the new dog hero. With a puppyhood almost ruined by the slowness of his breeding in making itself apparent, he grows into a fine, noble dog, who becomes a military courier at the front. Mr. Terhune breeds collies and his dog heroes are all real.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

GO, LOVELY ROSE.

By Edmund Waller.

Go, lovely rose!
Tell her, that wastes her time and me,
That now she knows,
When I resemble her to thee,
How sweet and fair she seems to be.

Tell her that's young
And shuns to have her graces spied
That hadst thou sprung
In deserts, where no men abide,
Thou must have uncommended died.

Small is the worth
Of beauty from the light retired;
Bid her come forth,
Suffer herself to be desired,
And not blush so to be admired.

Then die, that she
The common fate of all things rare
May read in thee;
How small a part of time they share

BEG YOUR PARDON!

A Washington dispatch appearing in THE TRIBUNE of May 19 stated that Senator La Follette "has been in the hospital at Rochester, Minn., for several months." Senator La Follette is recuperating at his Maple Bluff farm, near Madison. The senator went to Rochester, Minn., for consultation with the Mayo clinic early in February, and was advised to return to Madison to recuperate. He plans to go to the Mayo clinic during the next month for a gallstone operation. Mr. La Follette is in much better health than in February. He is supervising extensive farm improvements.

Since the picture of Nicholas Arnstein, which is printed on page 3 of today's rotogravure section, was selected he has given himself up to the police.

In the description of the new British submarine on page 1 of the rotogravure section it is stated "this can be fired only when the muzzle is above water." The transposition of two words changes the meaning of this sentence. It should be "this gun can be fired when only the muzzle is above water."

Set Aside 200,000 Acres of Homestead in Hawaii

Washington, D. C., May 22.—The house today passed a bill setting aside approximately 200,000 acres of land in the Hawaiian islands for homestead purposes available to native Hawaiians only. The territorial legislature urged the step which was expected to rehabilitate the Hawaiian race, said to be fast dying out.

YOUR safest guide in buying furniture (or anything else) is your knowledge of the house selling the merchandise; you can't be expected to have expert knowledge of all kinds of goods and their values.

We have built our business on our desire to buy the best furniture, to sell it at a fair profit and to guarantee that the purchaser would be satisfied with the transaction.

These are times when there is much doubt concerning prices, values, etc., and we cannot claim greater wisdom or greater skill or better goods than other stores, but we can offer a willingness to give you satisfaction.

That means that what you select in our store must be not only your choice from our stock, but it must be your choice after you've seen other stocks and learned other prices. Unless it is so you cannot be satisfied.

Unless you are satisfied we want to take back the goods and give you back your money; a sale without satisfaction is worse than no sale.

RUGS

The same principles apply in our rug department; it makes it a very comforting place to buy rugs.

UNPLEDGED VOTE IN FULL CONTROL OF CONVENTION

Composes Majority of the G. O. P. Delegates.

Uninstructed and unpledged delegates, for the first time in the history of the Republican party, will compose a clear majority of a national convention, at the Coliseum two weeks from Tuesday.

Two state delegations only remain to be named—those of West Virginia and Texas—with fourteen and twenty-three delegates respectively. The West Virginia men will be instructed either for Gen. Wood or for Senator Howard Sutherland of that state, a direct primary to determine on Tuesday. The Texas delegation will be chosen at a state convention Tuesday at Austin. Contesting delegates will appear, as usual, from each of the Texas districts and from the state at large, with neither side instructed for any candidate.

Majority Without Strings.

The aggregate of uninstructed and unpledged delegates will be nearly 100 greater than the majority required to nominate, 493. This may be reduced somewhat before the convention assembles by the transmutation of near promises into actual pledges to one or another of the presidential starters, but it now seems apparent that more than 525 of the delegates will be without any strings attached and prepared to go through with the general program that has been advocated by conservative party leaders ever since the inception of the campaign, namely, that the national convention shall be a deliberative body, prepared to nominate a candidate who can surely be elected by the Republicans in November.

It is understood that public announcement will be made this week of the definite plans of the leaders in the "unpledged and uninstructed" movement. Early in the scramble for delegates the definite statement was made that this element, then figured at perhaps one-third of the total delegate strength, proposed to hold an open caucus in Chicago during the early stages of the national convention, in which the vote getting merits of all of the candidates in the going would be considered and an agreement reached that would bind the participants in such caucus.

Caucus Would Be Convention.

Whether this plan will be continued, inasmuch as the uninstructed and unpledged now constitute an easy working majority of the convention itself, remains to be demonstrated, inasmuch as the caucus, in effect, would be the convention itself.

No candidate for the presidency will have more than 140 actually instructed votes for himself when the convention opens. Forecasts of what the first ballot will show are as many as there are candidates, and all at wide variance and not at all possible of reconciliation. Claims of individual managers run up as high as 325 on the first ballot. Nearly every camp claims a nomination for its favorite not later than the fifth ballot.

Pennsylvania, Oregon, and Vermont chose their delegations last week. The national committee meets one week from tomorrow to begin the hearing of the contests for places on the temporary roll and two weeks from Tuesday the big show will be on at the Coliseum.

COMING WITH RESCUED CREW.

Boston, Mass., May 22.—The shipping board steamer Lake Elsah will arrive at Portland tomorrow noon with the crew of the British schooner John M. Wood, which was sunk after colliding with a steamer of Little Hope island, Nova Scotia.

STATUS OF REPUBLICAN DELEGATES

The following table shows the standing of the leading Republican candidates for the presidency in instructed delegates. In addition to those listed in the table Senator Harding of Ohio has thirty-nine instructed delegates from his state. Senator Poindexter of Washington has fourteen instructed delegates from his, and Judge Pritchard of North Carolina seventeen of his state's twenty-two delegates:

*Contests between delegates instructed for Wood and delegates that are uninstructed total thirty-five and are carried in both the Wood and the "uninstructed" columns. These are: Georgia, 17; Minnesota, 2; Mississippi, 12; Oklahoma, 2; Tennessee, 2. The remaining eighty-two contests are between rival sets of uninstructed delegates, except in North Carolina, where 17 uninstructed delegates contest against 17 instructed for Pritchard. The fourteen uninstructed Illinois delegates are Thompson controlled.

385 VOTES ON FIRST BALLOT, WOOD'S CLAIM

Wood headquarters yesterday claimed 385 votes for Gen. Wood on the first ballot, in a statement issued yesterday through the Wood publicity department. The statement follows:

"With the close of another week's campaigning Leonard Wood, leading candidate for the Republican nomination, has so increased his votes that the first ballot predict[illegible] of 385 votes was made today at W[illegible]d headquarters here. This is more than the combined instructed vote of all the other candidates. Managers of other candidates during the week conceded Wood 305 votes on the first ballot.

"Three states held primaries this week and from every one of them Wood gained votes. In Pennsylvania, where seventy-six delegates were elected, Wood was equally fortunate. Here delegates pledged to Gov. Sproul as first choice and Wood as second choice were supported by the Wood forces and in every congressional district at least one of these delegates was elected."

150,000 SEEKING 13,069 TICKETS FOR G. O. P. MEET

Party Leaders Face a Big Demand for Seats.

More than 150,000 actual applications have been put in for the 13,069 tickets that will be issued for the Republican national convention. This is the greatest demand ever known for admission to a political convention.

For the benefit of all of those who seek or request convention tickets, the following rules may be laid down as final and definte, based upon statements that emanate from every quarter, element, or faction:

1. The national committeeman from each state will have sole control of the receipt and distribution of all tickets allotted to each state.

2. The Chicago convention committee, through the Chicago chairman, Fred W. Upham, has allotted its available tickets solely upon the basis that a $100 contribution to the convention expense fund of $150,000 entitles that subscriber to a claim to one convention ticket.

In Illinois all of the tickets, appointments of sergeants at arms, doorkeepers, ushers, and other convention employés are solely in the hands of Mayor Thompson, the present national committeeman. Mayor Thompson has followed the principle adopted in the national committee and has assigned five tickets and the proper proportion of appointments to each of the Illinois delegates.

CANDIDATE 'POT' AT WASHINGTON MANAGERS' TEST

Fund Inquiry This Week Center of Attention.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—Washington becomes next week the storm center of the preconvention fights for both the Republican and Democratic presidential nominations.

The senate privileges and elections subcommittee, which is to make an investigation of Senator Borah's charges of corruption and extravagance in the presidential primary campaign, meets on Monday. It has called before it managers or representatives of all the avowed presidential candidates of both parties and asked for their records of campaign contributions and expenditures.

Will Be a Battle of Wits.

The demand for them has been seized upon by the managers of certain candidates as an opportunity for political maneuvering which will, they believe, aid their candidates and possibly discredit the others. With the selection of delegates to the two conventions out of the way, this maneuvering becomes the most important political business of the week. It will be a managers' battle of wits, and astute politicians predict that the happenings at the inquiry will have an important bearing upon the future chances of several of the candidates.

Senator Kenyon has received telegrams from Louis Emmerson, secretary of state of Illinois, representing Gov. Lowden; Capt. John F. Lucey of New York, manager for Herbert Hoover; Edward H. Moore of Columbus, manager for Gov. Cox, and Harry M. Daugherty, manager for Senator Harding, announcing that they will be on hand with their candidates' records on Monday morning.

Summons for These Also.

In addition the following have been summoned by wire to attend:

James W. Gerard, representing himself.

Bernard Baruch, representing McAdoo.

Frank H. Hitchcock, Wood campaign adviser.

Angus McSween, Johnson manager.

Charles T. Carlin, Palmer manager.

H. M. Rice, Poindexter manager.

Dr. Rudolph J. Hersey, representing Senator Sutherland.

Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, representing himself.

Senator Robert L. Owen, representing himself.

Senator Joseph I. France, representing himself.

In addition it is probable several of the candidates may be called themselves.

LOWDEN'S MANAGER ON WAY.

Secretary of State Emmerson, Lowden manager, left Chicago yesterday morning for Washington to appear before the senate campaign fund investigating committee. He took with him all of the Lowden campaign records bearing on expenditures.

"Gov. Lowden's management has nothing to conceal and, as I have stated before, we are prepared to place all our cards on the table," he said before leaving. "I am taking with me every voucher, check, or other document that can have any possible bearing on the inquiry."

Local Hoover headquarters issued a statement declaring the Hoover managers would render all possible assistance to the senatorial subcommittee.

HONOR QUEEN VICTORIA.

The anniversary of the birth of Queen Victoria of England was observed by the Daughters of the British Empire yesterday afternoon with a luncheon in the Hotel La Salle. Bishop Samuel Fallows, Samuel Insull, and Horace Nugent, British consul in Chicago, were among the guests.

What does Memorial Day mean to Your Children?

YOUR children will have a better appreciation of the meaning of Memorial Day if they are familiar with the music of stirring days.

The music of the marching armies, the melodies of the glowing camp-fire, the song stories of the civil war—all are yours through the medium of the Player Piano and the Victrola.

Let the children learn the music of those times. It will give them a fuller realization of that important period of our history.

You owe it to your children to have a Player Piano or Victrola in your home—not alone for the clean, wholesome entertainment that music affords, but for the educational value it offers.

In our music rooms you will find, at all times, a comprehensive display of Cable-made Inner-Player Pianos, instruments of quality that you can well be proud to place in your home.

And in our Victrola Department are shown many models of the genuine Victor-Victrola.

Here you will find Player Pianos priced as low as $585; Genuine Victrolas, as low as $25.

Come in and let us explain our deferred payment plan. We make easy the ownership of either a Player Piano or a Victrola

PRESIDENT TO PLAY HIS LAST LEAGUE CARD

Seen as Effort for Third Term.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—President Wilson, it was learned today, has practically completed the message to congress in which he will veto the Knox resolution repealing the declaration of war against the imperial German government and restoring a state of peace between Germany and the United States.

The resolution which passed the house yesterday did not reach the White House today but will be placed before the president Monday.

Ever since it became apparent that congress would pass the peace resolution for want of ratification of the Versailles treaty the president has been engaged on the preparation of the veto message, which one of his confidants says will be the greatest state paper Mr. Wilson has produced.

To Hit at Opponents.

The executive expects to return the resolution to the house where it originated, next week, together with his veto. Whether at the same time he will resubmit the Versailles treaty with the league of nations covenant to the senate, as Senator Hitchcock has predicted, is a matter of speculation even among Mr. Wilson's closest advisers.

The veto message is intended by the president, not only to demonstrate the unconstitutionality of restoring peace by legislation, but to deliver a staggering blow to the opponents of ratification of the treaty in the form he presented it to the senate and to project the issue into the presidential election with the sort of appeal he thinks he will assure indorsement of his attitude by the Democratic convention and later by the people at the polls.

President's Last Card.

Playing his last card for the acceptance of the league of nations covenant without saving reservations, Mr. Wilson, it is understood in official circles, will give his version of the "inside story" of the Paris peace negotiations with a view to demonstrating how he wrested from the unwilling, imperialistic diplomats of the old school acceptance of the league of nations as America's plan for banishing war from the world forever and safeguarding democracy everywhere. By revealing the secrets of the peace conference he will endeavor to prove that without the league of nations Europe will drift back into militaristic rivalries breeding more world wars, menacing the peace of America, and that without the United States the league of nations will be a failure.

The message, which will be lengthy, is also said to explain and defend, on the basis of information theretofore unpublished, the attitude of the president throughout the treaty fight in the senate in standing unalterably against the reservations devised to preserve the independence of action of the United States and also his efforts now to procure ratification without reservations through the influence of the popular verdict he seeks.

Would Make Treaty Issue.

Indorsement of his stand by the Democratic national convention is the first concern of the president and his veto message is intended to cut the ground from under Bryan and all the other Democrats who are advocating the acceptance of the Lodge reservations and predicting party catastrophe if Wilson be followed blindly.

Moreover, the message will make it clear that the president would make the treaty and the covenant not only the paramount but the only issue of the campaign. If he controls the convention, as he is confident he will, he will dictate not only the treaty plank but the entire platform and the naming of the candidate as well.

Not a few Democrats interpret the course of the president, as it is being revealed, an indication that he intends to take the nomination himself and defying the tradition against a third term seek vindication at the hands of the people.

AN OLD FRIEND

Oak Park Woman Who Has Been a Reader of The Tribune for 65 Years.

MRS. MARY MURPHY.

Among the oldest readers of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Mrs. Mary Murphy of 518 Belleforte avenue, Oak Park, must be included. Mrs. Murphy, who is 90 years old, cannot break herself of the habit of reading everything in her favorite morning paper—a habit contracted back in 1855, when "Chicago was mostly lake, and Partridge's general store at State and Lake streets was one of the points of interest." Mrs. Murphy is the widow of Henry E. Murphy, who went through the civil war with the 113th Illinois. She lived at 1722 North Campbell avenue before moving to Oak Park, where she makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. C. P. Dungan.

NEWBERRY MAY SEEK ANOTHER TRY AT FORD

Ready to Run Again if He Loses Recount.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—If the recount of the Michigan senatorial vote in 1918 shows that Henry Ford won, Senator Newberry will step out of the senate and challenge Ford to run again next fall.

This announcement was made today by James O. Murfin, attorney for Senator Newberry, before the senate privileges and elections subcommittee appointed to investigate the Michigan election.

"If there is anything fraudulent in connection with the votes cast for Mr. Newberry he will also promptly resign and become a candidate for election," says Mr. Murfin.

Urge Ford Investigation.

One of the Republican senators suggested that the committee is charged with investigation of allegations of fraud on the part of Mr. Ford, as well as Mr. Newberry.

"I will say that I have in my office suggestions of 'leads' which might develop evidence against Mr. Ford," said Mr. Murfin. "I want to say now, however, that neither Senator Newberry nor his counsel will do anything to attack Mr. Ford, and, unless the committee so instructs us, we will make no investigation of the conduct of Mr. Ford's campaign."

"Do you mean that with respect to the counter charges which have been made against Mr. Ford you are not going to press them?" said Senator Edge.

Bars Mud Slinging.

"We will present nothing against Mr. Ford. He is a private citizen and if any one thinks Mr. Newberry is going to enter into a mud slinging contest with Mr. Ford here he is mistaken," said Mr. Murfin.

In connection with the recount the fact was brought out that a considerable number of the ballots have recently disappeared.

It was stated that ballots from 1,680 precincts out of approximately 2,200 in the state have been received in Washington. Tuesday, June 1, was set as the date for a hearing with respect to the destroyed ballots.

ROB WOMAN OF $2,000.

Kansas City, Mo., May 22.—Three men in a motor car robbed Mrs. William Huddleston, cashier for the Carnes Artificial Limb company, as she was entering the company's office this noon with $2,000 pay roll. The robbers escaped.

They Don't Want McAdoo, Says Guffey, Palmerite

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—The fight between William G. McAdoo and A. Mitchell Palmer for the Democratic presidential nomination is getting hot.

Joseph F. Guffey, newly elected Democratic national committeeman from Pennsylvania, today threw a few bricks at the McAdoo following as a result of the Pennsylvania primaries.

"The results of the primary election held in Pennsylvania Tuesday," Mr. Guffey said, "constitute the most emphatic indorsement of Attorney General Palmer and the most complete repudiation of Mr. William G. McAdoo of any political event that could have occurred."

C. S. Wheeler Will Name H. W. Johnson at Chicago

New York, May 22.—[Special.]—Announcement was made today that Senator Johnson would be placed in nomination at the Chicago convention by Charles S. Wheeler, a lawyer of San Francisco.

Senator William E. Borah will make one of the seconding speeches, and others will be made by James P. O'Neill of Detroit and County Judge Richard Doherty of Jersey City for New Jersey.

Says Sweden Can Make Paper Cheaper than Canada

Dr. Elmer Key, publisher of the Swedish Dagbladet, the largest newspaper in Scandinavian countries, spoke at the meeting of the Swedish Chamber of Commerce at the Morrison hotel yesterday. Dr. Key is here representing both his own government and three of the largest papers on the Scandinavian peninsula, which are establishing joint news bureaus in this country.

He stated newsprint in Sweden costs about four times what it did before the war, but that the supply is plentiful and they are exporting large amounts. He claimed that owing to its rivers Sweden is able to produce paper cheaper than Canada.

SPEER'S $50,000 POLICY A MYTH, RISK MAN SAYS

No Record of Insurance on Nicotine Victim.

It now appears that George S. Speer, the broker who died of nicotine poisoning early in May, left no insurance. His widow's belief that he was insured for $50,000, coupled with two attempts to secure the necessary certificates of natural death from the coroner's office, had given rise to the theory that the $50,000 policies might have furnished a motive for his death.

"Mr. Speer carried $10,000 insurance for a number of years with a local agency, but allowed it to lapse a few months ago," declared an official of the Equitable Life Assurance company yesterday.

"Our records would show whether he had taken out other insurance here or had some prior to the $10,000. We find no record of either sort."

The coroner was asked twice to issue a certificate calling it a natural death, one by Mrs. Speer and again by her father, D. H. Niver. They explain they believed Mr. Speer died of heart disease, as they were told by Dr. Willoughby A. Hemingway, the family physician. They did not learn nicotine had been found in the stomach until they read of it in the newspapers, Mr. Niver said yesterday.

"A good bit of Mr. Speer's money is tied up in his business, and it was merely a matter of expediency to get the insurance money for the widow," Mr. Niver said.

Coroner Still Puzzled.

In a statement issued last night, Coroner Hoffman admitted the case still puzzled him.

"Had nicotine been forced on him his lips would at least have been burned or scarred. They were not," he said. "He was trained in medicine, and would have detected nicotine in his medicine had it been put there without his knowlewge. The theory that he might have swallowed a 'slug' of nicotine from an old pipe and that, in the weakened condition of his stomach, it ultimately caused his death, is at least plausible."

No "Trial" to Their Marriage

MR. AND MRS. ALFRED DANIELS.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Daniels of 3824 Ellis avenue celebrated their fifty eighth wedding anniversary last week. They were married on May 22, 1862, in Cincinnati, and three years later moved to Chicago. They have been here ever since. They have five children—Mary, Joseph, George, Mrs. R. E Fox, and Mrs. Robert Forsythe.

Mr. Daniels is 81 years old and for the last thirty years has been in the employ of E. W. Bailey & Co. For sixteen years preceding this he was in business for himself. His wife is 78.

The talk turned yesterday to the trial marriage of Fannie Hurst and Jacques Danielson, made public on May 4. Pa Daniels said he didn't think much of trial marriages.

Ma Daniels expressed herself more freely.

"If she really had loved him," Ma said, "she would have realized that the most wonderful vocation in the world is to care for a husband, make his home life happy, and rear a family. At least that's what we have found to be the secret of happiness, isn't it, dear?"

"Yes," said Pa.

No Fee at Small Parks for Baseball or Tennis

The policy of the South Park commissioners in making a nominal charge for the use of baseball diamonds and tennis courts will not be followed by Walter Wright, secertary of the city small parks division, he announced yesterday. The charge of 10 cents for admission to the bathing beaches will be maintained.

BRITISH PLAN MONOPOLY OF AMERICAN AIR

Express and Passenger Service Promised.

South America Booming.

Accordingly, British missions have visited South America, instituted air lines with British machines and British capital and are doing a capacity business.

The United States, however, is the most promising field for commercial air service, as there are in this country some 15,000 trained pilots who see little promise of utilizing their skill and knowledge unless they accept this offer of a foreign interest, because commercial aviation in this country is a meaningless phrase at present.

Importation of a large number of foreign machines is viewed by military aviators as an alarming movement, for it means that lines so established will continue to use foreign planes and that the aircraft factories in this country will have no chance to develop. In case of another war America, they say, will then find herself in much the same position she was on the sea at the beginning of the war with Germany.

The new lines in this country will be launched with characteristic British thoroughness, for the capital investment will insure their operation for a period of at least eighteen months, though not a dollar of receipts should be taken in during that period. Before that time is up, however, there is reason to believe that hundreds of passengers and hundreds of tons of express will be transported daily through the air.

AIRPLANE PLANS READY.

Cleveland, O., May 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—An aerial freight and mail transportation system, to eventually employ 2,000 airplanes in serving seventy American cities, will be inaugurated July 1, with Cleveland as its headquarters, according to announcements made here today by officers of the Aerial Transport corporation, a $20,000,000 concern, which is to operate the service. Fifty-four planes will be placed in service July 1 on the first of ten proposed main routes, a course from New York to Chicago, by way of Cleveland.

CITY CHAUFFEURS' STRIKE TIES UP MUNICIPAL WORK

Nearly 5,000 city employés engaged in construction and repair work were thrown out of employment yesterday because of the shortage of supplies brought about by the refusal of 160 chauffeurs to return to their jobs, according to Deputy Commissioner Burkhardt of the public works department.

All street repair work has been stopped, construction work on the Lake View, Mayfair, Chicago avenue, and Sixty-eighth street pumping stations has ceased, and the building of the Roosevelt road viaduct has been suspended.

Goree Post-Mortem Fails to Disclose Alcohol Trace

Peter Seese, deputy coroner, said last night a post-mortem examination had failed to disclose traces of alcoholic poison in the organs of Orville K. Goree, public accountant of New York, who died Friday afternoon in his room at the Hotel Sherman.

C. F. Page, secretary of the Portland Cement association, whose accounts Goree had audited, said Goree was not a drinking man; that to his personal knowledge he had been an abstainer since November of 1918. At his request the inquest was continued until June 14. The police will try to find the woman who telephoned Goree's room while he was dying.

BOYS OF FIRST TO UNITE AGAIN ON CANTIGNY DAY

Illinois men who fought with the First division, A. E. F., will assemble in a body, so far as possible, at the evening celebration of Cantigny day, to be held next Friday evening at Aryan Grotto temple to commemorate the first and successful attack of the American troops after their entrance into the great war. There were 1,749 Illinois men in the First division, 367 of whom fell in the attack at Cantigny.

Maj. Gen. C. P. Summerall, commander of the First division, will come from Camp Zachary Taylor, Kentucky, to speak at the celebration and a moving picture will be shown which was taken at Cantigny when the troops were in the midst of fighting.

Maj. Thomas R. Gowenlock is chairman of the committee on arrangements and with him are Mrs. George A. McKinlock, who will oversee the sale of tickets; Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, chairman of publicity; Mrs. A. A. Sprague, chairman of patrons and patronesses; Mrs. Richard D. Stevenson, chairman of the sale of boxes; J. L. Canby, William A. Small, Jr., Col. R. R. McCormick, Robert Sturgis, Charles Bushnell Fullerton, F. D. Rose, O. H. Ashley, P[illegible] E. Anderson, Arthur Guy Mayger C R. Beckert, Richard D. Stevenson and Sergt. McGuire.

All veterans of wars in which the United States has taken part are invited to participate in the celebration. The proceeds will go toward the fund for erecting the memorial statue to the First division dead.

Evanston Garden Club Dances Around Maypole

The Evanston Garden club held its annual garden market yesterday in Raymond park, Evanston. Miss Marian Dawes, daughter of Rufus Dawes, was crowned queen of the May, and the pupils of Miss Etty Dwight danced about the May pole. M. R. Davis spoke, saying that the soil of Evanston could raise anything. Many of the club members have decided to raise their own vegetables this year. Mrs. W. E. Nichols, chairman of the market, was in charge of the affair and saw that numerous potted plants and flowers were sold.

HI COST DWARFS LEAGUE AS MAIN CAMPAIGN ISSUE

Mind of Nation Centered on Home Problems.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

One thing the Republicans and Democrats might as well chalk down on the slate ahead of the June nominating conventions is that the big issue next summer and fall will be the industrial and economic situation, and not the League of Nations. Cost of living will be a heavier factor than nationalism versus internationalism, and the vital part of the political platforms will be that which deals with the domestic problems of the U. S. A.

Never before was there such widespread discussion of economic questions. Causes and remedies will be the great stock in trade of the spellbinders on both sides. Everywhere the people are talking them over.

All Blame the Profiteers.

Your grocer talks of inflated currency; the motorman speaks of the fall in production; the bean tosser in the one-arm restaurant is a shark on the railroad breakdown; the farmer emphasises the labor shortage; the shoe clerk talks of the flaws in distribution; the man at the cigar counter can hand you a lecture on the extravagance of the newly rich joyriders—one and all they leap on the profiteers.

In the wake of the three days' conference of the Industrial Relations association, a janitor laid down his broom in his basement yesterday and flew to ink and paper. On one small sheet he said as large a mouthful as any of the managerial experts, college professors, and employment engineers who furnish the feast of reasons at the conference.

"It seems to me," he wrote, "a janitor living in a basement, that the following comes nearer solving the problem these highly educated men are studying than anything they have thus far presented:

Has Labor Problem Solution.

"Consumption has exceeded production largely because laborers are having their children educated to enter the leisure, or nonproducing, class. What is being produced is handled by too many tradesmen. Instead of a big store, where clerks are busy all day, 100 small tradesmen stand around half the time waiting for a customer to appear. In a great many cases they are able bodied men who are foreigners, who will leave the country if high prices cause serious trouble.

"Get these numerous small groceries, meat markets, and fruit markets into one large one and get the healthy superfluous portion of the middlemen and nonproducers to producing something instead of selling it, and then American boys will not have to leave school to work on the farms. Too many middlemen is what keeps high prices high. And what about the profiteering by foreigners and foreign governments in speculating in our commodities at our expense?"

Conference Offers Its Cures.

Yesterday's aftermath showed that the chief tendencies disclosed at the industrial relations conference were:

Full recognition by progressive business that management is even more to blame for the drop in production than is labor.

Human contacts between workers and management are the greatest need.

Among the "new stuff" in industry, the works or shop council is, perhaps, the most valuable stimulus to coöperation.

Employers must beware of "hoakum" peddled by theorists who are without knowledge of actual working conditions.

Labor wants a voice in working conditions; output will jump whenever the worker realizes prosperity hangs upon production.

"Labor Engineers" a Hindrance.

The unrest has brought an avalanche of self-styled "labor engineers." To an observer it appeared that of the 2,000 delegates about 40 per cent were big executives or broad minded employment experts who knew their business in a big way. The majority of the delegates, however, appeared to be theorists stuffed with textbook formulas.

Unions Against Profit Sharing.

Profit sharing was one thing the conference did not take up. The National Civic federation has just issued a 400 page report on profit sharing, supplementing its research of 1916. For a work of its pretensions it is quite rudely assembled, and its value is reduced by lack of systematic arrangement or analysis; but it does indicate the growth of the profit sharing principle in industry.

One of its most interesting chapters concerns the attitude of the trade unions, in which labor leaders reiterate their standing opposition to all profit sharing schemes, on the ground that the workers prefer to get it all in the weekly pay envelope, and, too, often employers pinch on wages to distribute "wage dividends" at the end of the year. In general, the plants that have had schemes in operation long enough to pass the experimental stage express satisfaction.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Smith of 1132 Sherman avenue, Evanston, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary yesterday with their nine children, and told "how to be happily married for life."

"First," said Mr. Smith, who is 76, "never quarrel with your wife."

"Second, never keep a secret from her. It leads to misunderstandings and bitterness.

"Third, always take her with you when you go out to parties or banquets, unless you go on duty or business.

"Fourth, be sure you love the girl before you marry her. Hasty marriages usually end in disaster. Never marry for anything but love."

"I have no formula for a happy married life," said Mrs. Smith. "My advice to girls about to marry is simply this: 'Be sure you love, then go ahead.'"

BILLINGS URGES NEW SANITARIUM AT NAPERVILLE

Points Out Need of White Plague Institution.

BY DR. FRANK BILLINGS.

Chicago recently suffered a distinct loss by a fire which burned the infirmary and medical building on the grounds of the Edward sanatorium at Naperville. Fortunately no lives were lost, but the work of the sanatorium, devoted to the care of about 100 sufferers from tuberculosis, was interrupted.

Those buildings must be rebuilt promptly. Better and larger buildings must be erected. It is proposed that the infirmary shall provide for 150 patients, 75 bed and 75 ambulatory, besides those who are being cared for in the cottages on the grounds.

Besides this main building, which will contain laboratories, X-ray departments, medical examination rooms, and facilities for the care of surgical cases, there are also required a nurses' home, new administration and service building, central power plant, auditorium with library, and vocational training shops.

$500,000 Will Be Needed.

To meet the above needs a fund of $500,000 is required, and therefore a campaign is now under way which will culminate with a drive during the week beginning June 1. Since the institution is wholly nonsectarian, men and women of all creeds are actively aiding.

Here is a project regarding which there can be no difference of opinion. The Edward sanitarium is operated by the Chicago Tuberculosis institute, which was organized just twenty years ago by the Visiting Nurse association.

Dr. Theodore Sachs, a member of the institute and later its president, was the pioneer in meeting the need of better nursing and medical care for consumptives.

These humanitarian activities attracted the attention of Mrs. Edward Gaylord, now Mrs. Keith Spalding, who gave the institute a tract of land near Naperville. Later she supplied the money to erect a sanatorium on this ground, and the institution was named Edward sanatorium, in memory of her husband, who had recently died from tuberculosis.

Big Concerns Erect Pavilions.

The institution has grown during the passing years by the erection on the grounds of pavilions by certain large employers, among them being Sears, Roebuck & Co., Swift & Co., the International Harvester company, Montgomery Ward & Co., and the Chicago Telephone company. These are for the treatment of ambulatory cases.

Edward sanatorium has cared for 2,103 patients—men, women, and children—most of whom have been returned to their former positions in life. Forty years ago the annual mortality rate from tuberculosis, as shown by national statistics, was 220 per 100,000. Now it is about half that rate.

To Treat Patients at Cost.

Edward sanatorium is a very considerable part of the general plan and scheme of Chicago's fight against the disease, and must therefore be regarded as a potent factor among the agencies that have brought about this reduction.

The ideal of the institution and the niche it fills in the general anti-tuberculosis scheme of Chicago is that there shall be treated at cost those patients who wish to pay their way. This cost is slightly in excess of $20 a week for everything.

CHAMBLISS TO TELL STORY OF WIEBECK DEATH

Accused Negro and Woman to Take Stand.

Dorsey Chambliss, Negro ex-policeman accused of luring 17 year old Bertha Wiebeck to a manner of life that ended in her death at the county hospital two months ago, is expected to take the witness stand Monday morning in Judge Harry A. Lewis' court.

Chambliss has strongly denied that he introduced the Wiebeck girl to Mrs. Emma Ross, who is alleged to have conducted a disorderly house at 3525 State street. The state has shown through witnesses that the yellow haired girl from Kansas met the Negro, then in a policeman's uniform, and asked him where to find an expressman for her. The defendant asserts that he did meet a white girl, but that he told her not to live in that neighborhood, and some time later, after she had been occupying a room with Mrs. Ross, ordered her from the district.

Mrs. Ross to Take Stand.

Mrs. Ross, with whom Bertha lived for two or three weeks, will follow Chambliss on the stand. She has denied operating a disorderly house and asserted that she complained of the white girl who occupied a room in her flat—complained because the girl received too many callers.

The hearing yesterday was taken up by character witnesses who swore that Dorsey Chambliss had a good reputation, was a good policeman, and was of good moral character. The majority of the witnesses were colored. They also asserted that they had known Mrs. Ross for several years and that she was a good, moral woman.

Mother Tells of Parting.

Mrs. Mary Wiebeck, mother of Bertha, was in court again. While the hearing is a heavy burden for her, she is enjoying the first physical rest she has had in years. A touch of summer swept over the court room and she raised for the first time during the trial the heavy black veil that hides the faded eyes.

"I remember the day Bertha left home to go to work in Hutchinson,' she said. "It was last summer—just such a day as today. The slanting rays of the sun were tingeing the corn fields with brown and my little yellow haired girl seemed so happy. She kissed me and jumped in the buggy to go to the train. 'I'l send you a lot of money, mother,' she said.

"In November I heard she went to Chicago and I wrote to her. The letter came back. The next time I saw her she was in the county hospital dying."

Mrs. Wiebeck will remain in Chicago until Chambliss has been convicted or freed.

WOMAN ACCUSED OF FLEECING KIN OF POLICE HEAD

Newark, N. J., May 22.—Mrs. Betty Lee, a social uplifter, who the police say left a trail of worthless checks here when she suddenly left this city last week, has been arrested in Trenton and will be returned to Newark tonight, according to word received here today.

Mrs. Lee, who came here about six weeks ago from Chicago to promote a $700,000 home for working girls, mingled with exclusive families. She is alleged by the police to have passed fraudulent checks aggregating several thousand dollars.

She is charged specifically in a warrant sworn out by C. Wanham Smith, father-in-law of Police Commissioner Thomas Ford, with having disappeared with two checks for $244 each he said he gave her to obtain reservations for a European trip for him and his wife

TRIBUNE READERS CONTRIBUTE $374.55 FOR MRS. WIEBECK

THE fund that is being contributed by TRIBUNE readers for Mrs. Mary Wiebeck, the aged mother of Bertha, who died in the county hospital two months ago, swelled yesterday to $374.55. Dorsey Chambliss, Negro ex-policeman, is on trial before Judge Harry A. Lewis, accused of luring Bertha to a life of shame. To attend the trial Mrs. Wiebeck was forced to mortgage her farm and live stock. She is living at the Chicago Woman's shelter. New contributors are:

DALRYMPLE RAID BRINGS PROTEST BY PRESS CLUB

Dr. Reitman Charges He Was Slugged.

An invitation to Maj. A. V. Dalrymple to investigate the Press club of Chicago to determine whether it "has ever violated the prohibition laws or encouraged the use of alcoholic liquors," is extended in a resolution adopted yesterday.

It was a special meeting called to discuss the raid last Monday night in the Louis XVI. room of the Hotel Sherman, where the club was entertaining members of the cast of the "Sweetheart Shop." Among the speakers was Dr. Ben L. Reitman, the only one of the 1,200 guests to be arrested He made a snappy talk.

Resolution Tells of Raid.

The resolution reads in part that the raid "by a certain federal official was entirely without authority and unjustified by the facts." After setting forth that "hundreds of Chicago's most prominent and respectable citizens were in attendance, witnessing the performances and dancing," it continues:

"The party was raided by what is known as the sponge squad, revolvers drawn, and men and women alike were threatened, intimidated, and terrorized. . . . the amount of alleged liquor confiscated from the guests is the best evidence that the raid was entirely unwarranted . . . the interview from the person responsible for said raid that everybody present was drunk is a slanderous and untruthful statement."

Reitman Tells of Blow.

Dr. Reitman in his talk said:

"I was at a table with my wife. A man rushed over and made a grab for a bottle of ginger ale. I arose and asked him who he was. He said, 'Never mind, you are under arrest for resisting a federal officer.' Just then somebody hit me on the jaw and that was the last I remembered. The arrest and slugging were, in my judgment, entirely uncalled for."

Others who spoke were James F. Bishop, former public administrator, and Joseph Farrell.

Actors Will Frolic to Raise Funds for Club

The public will have an opportunity to see its theatrical favorites at close range when the first annual Frolic of the Actors Equity association is held next Friday evening in the Hotel Morrison. Practically every person now appearing in loop theaters will be present. The Equity members plan to establish an actors' club in Chicago similar to the Lambs club in New York, except that actresses will be admitted to membership. Funds from the frolic will be used for this purpose.

PRESBYTERIANS FORM UNITY WITH WELSH BRANCH

Philadelphia, Pa., May 22.—Presbyterians accomplished a giant stride toward church unity today when the merger with the Welsh Presbyterian church was officially consummated.

This action and a decision to wage increasing war against desecration or legalized attacks on Sabbath observance marked today's sessions of the general assembly.

The union with the Welsh church was completed with the seating of twenty-five delegates.

The merger transfers 15,000 communicants to the Presbyterian church, with 150 churches, 100 ministers, 600 elders, six synods, and sixteen presbyteries. Under the terms of the consolidation Welsh ministers are entitled to the same privileges as the Presbyterian clergymen.

The decision to fight for Sabbath observance came after the Rev. Dr. H. L. Bowlby, secretary of the Presbyterian permanent committee on Sabbath observance, had declared a concerted movement is being made all over the United States to keep Sunday "open."

Jury Gives $1,500 Ring to Girl Who Claimed Troth

Miss Lee Kirchen, 6214 Evans avenue, won a suit involving a diamond ring valued at $1,500 yesterday morning when a jury in Judge Frank Johnston's court decided that the young woman was entitled to keep it. Harry Ayres, 404 West Forty-third street, brought suit against Miss Kirchen, asserting he had merely loaned the ring to her.

Miss Kirchen testified she accepted the ring in token of an engagement.

CARE OF MEN TAUGHT BEST AT WEST POINT

U. S. Academy Also Home of Rifle Skill.

BY EYE WITNESS.

New York, May 22.—[Special.]—And now, civilian criticism aside, is West Point awake to what the world war taught soldiers? The civilian criticism has done much harm because it is so comprehensive that it is easy to read and so lacking in technical specifications that it does not leave the layman. He gets from it a few high phrases, such as Dr. Eliot's "not what an educational institution should not be," and they stick.

Meanwhile West Point says, in so many words, "We'd a great deal rather beat the navy than beat Dr. Eliot," and goes forward with its work of teaching in the most exact and specific way all the lessons the world war taught.

Lessons of the War.

Three of the conspicuous lessons were the great advance made in the possibilities of the use of (1) the machine gun, (2) the trench mortar, and the automatic rifle.

In that last detail, however, West Point had beaten the managers of the world war to it. They, whether they knew it or not, went to school at West Point, and that school was the old, solid fundamental school or rifle shooting. Proficiency with the rifle has been the basis in West Point's system for a hundred years.

Also, in the world war, great progress was made in the various types of liaison both by wire and wireless, and a phase of that progress was coördination of work in the air and on the ground. Lessons learned in the use of the balloon and the airplane were, of course, epochal, and the academy's aviation corps is to be taken to Camp Dix this summer for intensive training. Every cadet will "be up," but, as to aviation, the academy pretends to teach the air service only as it affects the whole service. Every cadet will be under observation as to type of mentality and general suitability for aviation, but the fact is, that out of the 1,000 boys at West Point there may not be twenty who will qualify.

New Wrinkles—Old Game.

A big lesson of the world war was the new tactical formations—new in the sense of the more open type of attack as demonstrated by flexible waves, opposed to the old shoulder to shoulder mass attack.

All these developments are spoken of at the academy as "the new wrinkles in an old game." Strategy never varies. Tactics, however, are in a constant state of flux due to the continued developments of the weapon used. In its present system West Point is emphasizing the most modern tactical conceptions as developed by the world war.

Motorized artillery was decidedly a development of the world war and the value of it is more than the value of speed. You cannot kill a motor as easily as you can kill a horse. Now West Point today possesses absolutely the last word in that kind of equipment and it gives a two month course, comprising forty lessons, in the actual handling of tractors, motors and automobiles.

Trench Warfare Specialized.

Contrary to civilian impression, trench warfare, though it was so conspicuous and wearisome a feature of fighting on the west front until America came in, taught West Point little that it now wishes to teach. It is a specialized type of warfare and was resorted to in the world war because the opposing armies had reached an equilibrium of strength. Neither side had a preponderance enabling it to proceed and hence the lines became stabilized and the trenches were merely the means whereby men were housed and, as far as possible, protected from destruction while so stabilized.

The moment the accretion of new forces from America became sufficient to give the entente a preponderance, the advance was resumed, according to the old and well established tactics of war in the open, and the trenches became automatically a thing of the past.

Victories Won in Open.

Trench warfare, with its spirit of passive resistance, has never in the past led to victory, nor will it in the future. The great lessons of the war were not learned in the trenches, but when the troops left the trenches.

And because trench warfare is so highly specialized a problem in a very large subject, West Point, in its present technical trainings, is emphasizing the correct principles of the general subject and is carefully refraining from placing undue emphasis on special and minor phases of that subject.

There is another department of warfare besides the use of the rifle in which the American officer, as produced by West Point, is off in a class by himself, so far ahead of the rest of the world is he. That department is group hygiene, and in the development of it West Point has been of large assistance to foreign armies by getting them on the right track.

Sanitation—Physical and Moral.

In rough and ready camp sanitation West Point's course is brief but thorough. That course has more than a physical significance. It is part of that grand spiritual instruction which West Point is always and in all ways inculcating and which an officer epitomized in these words:

"We teach a man to—
"Be clean.
"Live clean.
"Think clean."

Thinking in those terms for himself, the officer turned out by West Point thinks in the same terms for his men. West Point instruction places the gravest emphasis upon the duty of officers in the care of their men—to keep them fit physically, mentally, and morally. West Point cadets are taught to be managers of men and to make the well being and comfort of their men their first consideration.

SAVED AND RESCUER

Daughter of Gen. Wood and Soldier Who Stopped Bolting Horse.

SERGT. LUTHER BEARD.
MISS LOUISIETA WOOD.
[Photo: Underwood & Underwood.]

Sergt. Luther Beard, who has spent 20 years in the army, much of the time in Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood's stables, saved the life of the general's daughter, Louiseta, Friday afternoon, it was learned yesterday.

Miss Wood took one of her father's horses, "Missouri Shotgun," for a jog toward the old Elm club. An automobile came up behind her. Missouri Shotgun gave a sudden lurch, and jumped into the path of the machine.

Sergt. Beard was nearby on his own horse. He leaped and grabbed Missouri's bridle reins, and held on, though dragged for several feet. He managed to keep the horse from the path of the auto. Miss Wood stayed on her mount.

"I'll ride him back," she said, then added, "you saved my life."

The cavalryman was injured, it is said, but refused to go to the Fort Sheridan hospital for aid. He was walking with the aid of cane yesterday.

Six Trusties Walk Away from Pontiac Reformatory

Six inmates of the Pontiac reformatory escaped last night by walking away from the farm at milking time and boarding a Chicago and Alton train bound for Bloomington. They were trusties and were serving sentences for minor offenses. None was from Chicago or Cook county.

PHONE COMPANY ASKS RAISE ON COIN BOX RATES

Wants Excess Calls to Go from 4 to 5 Cents.

Permission to increase its rates to all coin box subscribers was asked yesterday by the Chicago Telephone company in a petition filed in Springfield with the public utilities commission.

The present rate and the rate requested are:

Four party residence telephones—$1.50 a month, or 5 cents a day; new rate, $2.40 a month, or forty-eight calls at 5 cents each.

Two party residence—$3 a month, or 10 cents a day; new rate, $3.75 a month, or seventy-five calls at 5 cents each.

Two party business—$3.75 a month, or seventy-five calls at 5 cents each; new rate, $4.50 a month, or ninety calls at 5 cents each.

The present rate of $6 a month for single party business lines is not increased, but excess messages will be charged for at rate of 5 cents a call instead of 4 cents.

Measured House Rates Same.

Measured residence rates which were put into effect during the federal control period and continued by former orders of the public utilities commission will not be changed. Neither will the rate on residence extension telephones.

The petition asks that the charge for excess messages above the guarantee be raised from 4 cents to 5. It states that the guaranteed number of calls has not been raised since 1907 and that the charge for excess rates was 5 cents until 1913, when it was reduced to 4 cents. An increase is asked on business extension telephones bringing the rate from 50 cents per month to 75 cents. The minimum rate per message for single party business lines is asked to be changed from 2½ cents to 3 cents. A charge of $3 per month instead of [illegible] is asked for additional trunk lines.

Company Credit in Peril.

The petition pleads that unless the rates are permitted the credit and financial standing of the company will be injured. It states that the wages of operators have been more than doubled since 1914 and that its revenues per telephone have only increased 17 per cent from 1914 to 1919, while the operating expenses have increased 40 per cent.

The commission will hear evidence in support of the petition tomorrow morning. That the city may have time to prepare a case in opposition to the petition, the company officials served notice to the city of their intentions at the time the petition was filed.

1,000 YANKS HAVE BIG REUNION AT FORT HOSPITAL

One thousand American soldiers who were wounded in France went back to Fort Sheridan hospital yesterday to dance, play, and feast with the physicians and nurses who cared for them when they were invalided home. It was reunion day for the discharged patients. It was under the auspices of the Fort Sheridan Recall, the wounded men's official newspaper.

There was varied entertainment. The athletic program was staged on the beach, and consisted of boxing matches, running races, shotputting, hurdling, and other events. A number of the officers and men made speeches.

At 5:30 there was a dinner in the mess hall at which more than a ton of strawberry shortcake was consumed. Then followed dancing and vaudeville skits in which 500 girl members of the War Camp Community service participated.

Music was supplied by the Chicago band, which volunteered its services. A feature of its program was a serenade at the quarters of Col. William N. Bispham. Yesterday was his forty-fifth birthday anniversary.

Special trains carried patients from the United States Marine hospital to and from the homecoming.

The Franklin averages 12,500 miles per set of tires and 20 miles per gallon of gasoline.

"A man may, if he knows not how to save as he gets, keep his nose all his life to the grindstone and die not worth a groat at last." —Benj. Franklin.

Franklin Touring Comfort Is Unique

The first ride in a Franklin is always a surprise. You never rode in any car anywhere near like it. You wonder at its easy speed on rough roads. You remark the absence of jolts.

You find a new thrill in its smooth motion, a new comfort in its restful action. And if you are driving it, you admit there never was a car so easily handled.

Science Produced These Merits

The Franklin's unique comfort is a result of Franklin engineering principles—differing from those in other cars. For that very reason no car but the Franklin can give you the thrills the Franklin owner knows.

Franklin performance has caused many cars to be built lighter. But mere lightness alone will not produce Franklin results. Since 1902 Franklin engineering principles have kept the Franklin in the lead in road performance. Those principles are still unique. So is the performance.

Designed for Light Weight

A water cooled motor and a heavy steel frame have no place in light weight design. They are heavy of necessity, else they are unsafe.

So Franklin light weight design starts with its wonderful air-cooled motor, which being light permits a laminated wood chassis frame. This frame in turn is lighter yet stronger than steel.

Thus the Franklin is safely and scientifically light weight. Under such a car full elliptic springs can be used to advantage. Also axles and wheels hundreds of pounds lighter. It is no wonder the Franklin behaves differently.

How Riding Ease Results

The Franklin car with 5 passengers in it weighs about 3,300 lbs. Of this total weight only a small fraction is below the springs—a much smaller fraction than in usual practice.

Thus the Franklin wheels and axles take the irregularities of the road, bounce or drop, with comparatively little effect on the car itself.

You have noticed that any car rides more comfortably if heavily loaded. In the Franklin you have this effect all the time—only multiplied by the difference in Franklin unsprung weight.

Come and try this Franklin feature. Learn the truth about what makes for easy riding. Then you will join Franklin owners in the knowledge that the car which is built heavy to ride comfortably only defeats itself.

Franklin Economy Is Wanted Today

Yesterday only a few could withstand the lures of extravagance. What if it did cost twice as much to run an oversized water cooled car! People wanted to show they could afford it! But now our business leaders see that reasonable economy is necessary to save the business situation.

And so the Franklin is more wanted than ever. It gives everything the extravagant car can give plus comfort no other car ever offered. And on top of it all, you get your money's worth out of Franklin performance.

Twenty miles per gallon of gasoline is what your Franklin will deliver as a minimum. Twenty-five or more is not unusual. Compared with worth while cars this is 50% saving. And we all rush when retailers knock off 20% on clothes!

Franklins the country over average 12,500 miles on tires. This includes all body types; all sorts of drivers and conditions. At present tire prices the Franklin earns its way very rapidly with the careful spender.

18,000 Franklins Yearly

The Franklin has kept to its steady way without much fuss over wonderful new models. Being designed right in the beginning it has been little changed. And it requires 18,000 Franklins yearly to supply the demand which continued merit has created.

Just notice the number of Franklins which pass you today. Notice the character of men who drive Franklins. We will admit we are proud of Franklin owners. They are representative of a class any man should be proud to be in—successful, careful, comfortable.

Benj. Franklin wisely wrote: "A man may, if he knows not how to save as he gets, keep his nose all his life to the grindstone, and die not worth a groat at last."

Franklin owners know the soundness of this philosophy and practice it.

NEW YORK PREP NINE, SANS SUITS, BATS, SURE STARS

Probable Champs Haven't Even Field to Play On.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

New York, May 22.—[Special.]—There's a high school baseball team down here in New York that plays the game with such style that it undoubtedly would give a battle to the best prep school around Chicago. It is known as the High School of Commerce, and it won the championship of Manhattan island and this afternoon by thrashing the Stuyvesant High school, 10 to 3.

Commerce has to beat the winner of the Brooklyn division and the winner of the Queensborough division to gain the title for Greater New York, but it looks capable of doing it.

Far from Sand Lots.

Although its players are somewhat less advanced in years and a bit smaller in size than the Englewood or Oak Park boys, they play ball as if they had grown up with it and yet they live in a place where vacant lots are scarce or at least far away. The School of Commerce is situated in the heart of Manhattan island, about Sixty-fifth street, near the Hudson. On the school grounds there isn't enough vacant space for two kittens to play.

The title contest today was staged on a borrowed field away out in the Bronx. It takes over an hour to get there, yet there were at least 2,500 wild rooting school boys and girls present, showing that though the flat dwellers have almost crowded the national game off Manhattan island, they have failed to kill it.

Bombard Two Pitchers.

Not only did the Commerce boys handle the ball cleanly and with a considerable amount of skill but they looked like better hitters than any squad of preps I have seen this spring. Stuyvesant used two pitchers in an effort to stop them. One had pitched a no hit game this spring and the other was said to be even better. But the Commerce gang murdered them for a total of thirteen solid blows, five being two baggers.

The lads are coached by H. F. Kane, who only a few years ago was a star at Fordham university. His boys made few mistakes. Once when they had a lead of six runs and their apponents had runners on second and third, with only one out, the Commerce infield played in close, just as if that runner on third base might score and beat them, when they should have ignored him. However, by playing in they caught him at the plate, so were right even though they were wrong.

Outfielders Play Batters.

It was noticed the outfielders shifted around to play batters. A lot of high school teams overlook such things. In the early part of the game, Stuyvesant got a man on first with one out and the next batter slashed a hot one down the third base line close to the bag. The third baseman skidded over, came up with the ball, fired to second and the second baseman to first and a tough double play was executed with as much ease as though it had been done by Buck Weaver, Eddie Collins, and Ted Jourdan.

Another time, with a Commerce runner on first and none out, the batter pushed a beauty bunt down between the pitcher and third baseman. He was thrown out, but his mate, seeing the third baseman had been pulled in, legged it clear to third and went home when he drew a hurried and wild throw to that corner. That was a bit of wide-awake stuff.

Pitcher Small but Crafty.

Pitcher Jacobs wouldn't impress many of the Chicago boys as great—at least, until they faced him. He is a slight lad with not much speed, but he is foxey. He had a little quick side arm curve that he could curl over the plate any time he desired.

First Baseman Louis Gherig was the most impressive batter, though he didn't get a safe blow and fanned twice. Nearly every time, before he fanned or flied out, he pulled one or two terrific foul drives over the right fence. He can hit a ball harder than any prep man I have seen. Looks like he may be a Babe Ruth some day.

Although in line to win the championship, the Commerce boys were poorly equipped, wearing only gym shirts with baseball pants and caps that didn't all match. They came out with no bats and had to use the sticks of the rival team. All of which shows they are good ball players. Score:

NEW MARKS SET AS NOTRE DAME WINS I. A. C. MEET

Notre Dame, Ind., May 22.—[Special.]—Six new Cartier field track and field track and field records were established as Notre Dame vanquished the Illinois Athletic club in a dual meet today. The score was 72 to 54.

JOIE RAY.

The event goes down in Notre Dame annals as the greatest battle of its kind ever held on Cartier field. Eddie Meehan's sensational victory over Joie Ray in the half mile featured the meet, Meehan and Kasper of Notre Dame, and Ray of the I. A. C., were the entries. The three runners ran shoulder to shoulder until the last 100 yards, when Meehan unbelted a burst of speed that was too much for Ray and Kasper and the Notre Dame captain breasted the worsted, a winner in 1:57 4-5, a new track record.

220 Dash Mark Tied.

Bill Hayes tied the track record in the 220 yard dash, covering the distance in :21 3-5. Notre Dame made a clean sweep in the 220 and Hayes won the century in 10 flat without extending himself.

Ray set a new mile record with a mark of 4:25 3-5. Desch of Notre Dame, holder of the world's forty yard indoor low hurdle record, lowered the time of the 220 yard hurdles to :25 flat.

Murphy of Notre Dame, leaped 6 feet 3 inches in high jump, setting another record. Knouek beat Rockne's mark of 12 feet in the pole vault, clearing the bar at 12 feet 6 inches.

New 440 Yard Record.

Kasper of Notre Dame completed the record breaking contest by stepping the 440 yard run in :50 3-5. Summaries:

100 yard dash—Won by Hayes, Notre Dame; McSweeney, I. A. C., second; Bailey, Notre Dame, third. Time, :10.

Mile run—Won by Ray, I. A. C.; Burke, Notre Dame, second; Sweeney, Notre Dame, third. Time, 4:25 3-5.

120 yard hurdles—Won by Wynne, Notre Dame; Schienberg, I. A. C., second; Goelitz, I. A. C., third. Time, :15 4-5.

220 yard dash—Won by Hayes, Notre Dame; Bailey, Notre Dame, second; Ficks, Notre Dame, third. Time, :21 3-5.

Shot put—Won by Klindenberg, I. A. C.;

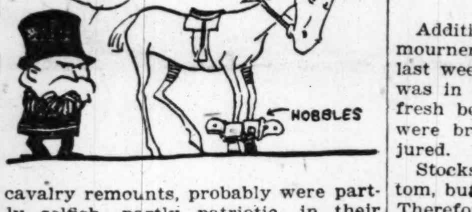
In the Wake of the News

HYPOCRISY RAMPANT.

KENTUCKY horse breeders appeared before the house interstate commerce committee to voice protest against passage of the Sterling-Sims bill prohibiting interstate transmission of racetrack betting information, which would include in its provisions telegraph companies and newspapers with any general circulation.

These breeders, seeing not only a paralysis of the thoroughbred horse industry but also, as a result therefrom, deterioration in animals available for cavalry remounts, probably were partly selfish, partly patriotic, in their views. Even if they were entirely selfish, they echo the general sentiment of many not otherwise interested who feel that interstate commerce laws are being used and abused as a vehicle for hypocrisy and regulation never intended when the constitution was adopted.



As The Wake understands it, the founders of our government in giving congress interstate powers wished to safeguard the rights of each state and prevent discriminatory legislation by one state against another. They did not intend to set a code of morals for each state.

Interstate shipments of prizefight films are interdicted, but at the movie houses one can view, by inference at least, scenes from the "oldest profession in the world." Now they would forbid news telling of the odds against horses. A turf enthusiast wishes to know the betting just as much as the average woman wants to know the weight of her neighbor's new baby. Are we to adopt "Verboten"?

In many states betting under certain restrictions is legalized or tolerated. States which desire its suppression may pass their own regulatory laws.

Attempts to secure adverse national legislation through the interstate commerce subterfuge ranks with the win-by-any-means tactics becoming so general among "reformers" that the appellation "reformer" is becoming a reproach and that of "sportsman" a compliment.

In the spring the young man's fancy,
As we've heard so many times,
Leads to enterprises chancy,
And to tuneful wedding chimes.

Soon the demon bill collector
Sounds a discord in the tune;
He, it seems, is no respecter
Of a happy honeymoon.

Spring, the witch, too often knocks in
Ruin plans to which we cling.
Would there were some antitoxin
For the deadly germs of spring!

Market Letter.

Additional recruits crowded the mourners' bench in the stock market last week. Just when it seemed grief was in a fair way to be assuaged, a fresh bomb of anguish burst. Some were bruised and a few mortally injured.

Stocks possibly are near rock bottom, but some one may steal the rock. Therefore be careful of your glass houses.

We still advise caution. You will note that United States Paperboard was thin. There was liquid-ation in Coca Cola. Carp Caviar finally had a setback. There is too much carping in the market anyway, and Caviar is an egg. Tenn Copper struck ten.

Forecast — Trade winds from all points.

American Golfers Sail for British Tournament

New York, May 22.—[Special.]—Robert A. Gardner of Chicago heads the group of seven amateur golfers who took passage today for England to compete in the British championship. Others in the party are Stewart Stickney of St. Louis, Nelson Whitney of New Orleans, and Findlay S. Douglass, Sam J. Graham, F. C. Newton, and Howard Maxwell of New York. Walter Hagen, who will compete in the British open, also sailed.

SOX PACK GAME INTO 1 INNING TO BEAT GRIFFS, 10-6

Jump on Recruit for Seven Runs in Third.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

SHANO COLLINS.

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—Kid Gleson's White Sox put on a big third inning today and scored more than enough runs to wallop the clownlike Senators for the third straight time. Various happenings in the round mentioned contributed to seven runs for the visitors, and these, with a few picked up at other stages, gave the champions a 10 to 6 advantage at the finish.

The ferocious attack of the Chicagoans made it comparatively easy for Claude (Lefty) Williams to register his eighth win out of the nine starts this season. The southpaw expert was in great trim, but with a lead of eight runs in three innings there was no occasion for his exerting himself. He was nicked twelve times, but six of the dozen blows weren't uncorked until the last two frames.

Jazebel Runs Into Tornado.

Griffith started a young left hander, Jezebel Tecumseh Zachary, whose pitching did not prove as impressive as his name. Jezebel was hit for a run in the [illegible] inning and then ran into a [illegible]ado of base hits, mixed with passes, in the third. Albert Schacht was rushed forth to relieve the distressed southpaw, but proved unequal to the task and didn't get the side out until thirteen Sox had batted. Thereafter Schacht was fairly effective, the victors getting to him only in the sixth, when two scored.

Sacks Again Loaded.

Zachary made trouble for himself by passing J. Collins and E. Collins to open the third. Weaver beat out a bunt that Judge failed to pick up, filling the bases. Jackson slammed a safe one to center, and the two Collins boys crossed the pan. Felsch made the first out by lifting a foul that Judge grabbed.

The luckless southpaw then filled the sacks again by bumping Jourdan in the back with a wide pitch. The next happening was a pass to McMullin, forcing Weaver across the plate. Schalk blew himself to a double over Milan's head and the wallop scored Jackson and Jourdan. It also drove Zachary off the slab.

Williams greeted Schacht with a single that let McMullin score. With a right-handed pitcher working Murphy came up in place of John Collins and hit safely to right, Schalk counting. E. Collins then beat out an infield hit and the sacks were loaded for the third time during the inning. Weaver and Jackson obligingly ended the stampede by producing infield outs.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

THE QUESTION.

What is the best play you ever saw on a baseball diamond?

THE ANSWER.

R. BURNETT, 19 North Albany avenue, a clerk—I saw a triple play once. Dutch Altman was playing third in Memphis. The bases were full. The batter hit a line drive to Altman, who caught it, touched third, and threw to first. Some speed, eh?

JAMES E. COLE, 5115 Winthrop avenue, an ex-soldier taking vocational training—Two men on bases—a short infield fly caught by shortstop, who caught men advancing from first and second. A triple play, you know.

J. S. STEWART, Gary, Ind., a steel worker—Bush did it. Man on first and another on third. Man on first tried to advance on pitched ball, caught by Bush, who received catcher's peg and returned it in time for the catcher to knock off the man coming home. That's fast.

ABE GOODMAN, 636 East Fiftieth street, manager of a clothing store—Best play happened in a game between the Shamrocks and the Hebrew institute. Shamrocks were leading. Bases were filled. The batter hit a line drive to pitcher, who caught it, jumped back and tagged man going from second to third, and then tossed the ball to the third baseman, who froze to the ball and retired the side.

JOHN KELLY, 15 West Twenty-third street, a city fireman—I once saw Schalk reach high in the air for a wild throw from second, juggle the ball a second or two, and then drop his whole body in front of a runner who came sliding in from third. That little boy is the world's greatest catcher.

NOTES

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—Final of the series tomorrow. Eddie Cicotte will oppose either George Erickson or Walter Johnson.

Up to today Judge has hit safely in sixteen consecutive games. He only batted once and Williams fanned him.

After Picinich had tripled in the ninth Walter Johnson batted for Schacht and was retired on a pop foul that Schalk grabbed near the stand.

Griff has a ball club that looks as good as any he has bossed in recent years. His weakness is pitchers and there is no relief in sight.

After the Sox counted their seven runs in the third Griffith gave up hope. He sent Shanks to first in place of Judge and gave Gharrity a rest by ordering Picinich to perform behind the bat.

Williams was given an error in the ninth because he loafed in going after a ball that Jourdan had thrown to him on Roth's scratch hit. Rice ran home from third while Claude was ambling leisurely after the pill.

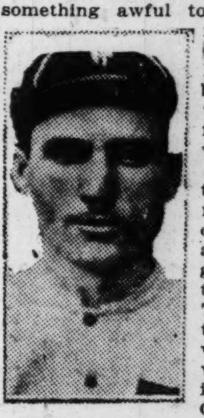
Beckett Injures Hand, Moran Bout Postponed

LONDON, May 22.—Announcement is made that because of an injury to the hand of Joe Beckett, the English heavyweight boxer, the match between him and Frank Moran, the American heavyweight, set for June 14, has been indefinitely postponed. A match between "Pete" Herman of the United States and "Jimmie" Wilde, the English flyweight, has been arranged to take place in London in September.

CUBS LICK PHILS ON EIGHT BOOTS, 8 WALKS, 14 HITS

Game Is So Bad Visitors Fight in Dugout.

BY I. E. SANBORN.



DAVE BANCROFT.

In a game that was easy to take, but something awful to contemplate in retrospect, the Cub trounced the Phillies yesterday by a score of 15 to 8 as an opener for their four day visit here.

It was so bad the Quakers could not stand their own exhibition and engaged in a glove fight in their dugout. This happened in the sixth inning, when the visitors were vainly trying to put out the Cubs. Bancroft was taken out of short field after his third boot, although he apparently wanted to stay and make some more. On reaching the bench he flung his glove in Manager Cravath's face, but other players intervened and shooed their erring star to the dressing rooms, from which he emerged in better humor after a shower.

Phils Make Eight Errors.

Bancroft was not the only erring visitor, for the Phils piled up a total of eight boots of various degrees in addition to letting the Cubs run wild on the bases at times while they were trying to corral the pill.

Manager Cravath used four flingers in a vain attempt to stop the runmaking, but it wasn't because the Cubs hit the ball so hard that the score mounted fast. Mitchell's men made fourteen swats and these were helped out by eight bases on balls and one batsman hit in addition to the octet of errors chalked up.

Weinert was sent against the Cubs at the start, but was wild and poorly supported. The Cubs scored two runs off him with only one out in the first inning. Betts was sent to the rescue and retired the side after one more Cub had crossed the plate. Errors by "Bevo" and Jack Miller helped the Mitchells to three more runs in the second, but Betts settled and was going along fairly well until he was taken out to let Luderus hit for him in the sixth.

Sixth Spasm a Farce.

That brought Cantwell into the fracas in the home half and what happened was a scream. Martin started it with single to left and "Bevo" fired the ball back so wildly and aimlessly that it hit the grandstand, letting Speed to third. With that start twelve Cubs faced Cantwell and he managed to dispose of only two of them, but it was not all his fault. Five hits and two bases on balls were Cantwell's contribution, while his supporters made five errors behind him. After Bancroft had made his second bobble in that awful spasm Cravath sent Wrightstone out to play short. Bancroft at first refused to quit the job, but finally withdrew and tried to start something on the bench as already narrated.

Gallia, the former Senator, and Brown, went to Cantwell's rescue and stopped the slaughter by striking out Paskert, the thirteenth man at bat in that inning.

Notes of the Cubs

Philadelphia again today.

George Tyler gladdened Manager Mitchell's heart by reporting that his pitching arm felt finely after working nine innings the day before.

Lebourveau—Bevo for short—made a whale of a stab of a long high liner by Deal in the second inning. He pinched it with one hand just before stumbling on the terrace in front of the bleachers.

The Cubs played in mass formation on the right side of the diamond for Cy Williams to show that they knew he couldn't hit to left. But Cy showed them up by whaling a home run over Paskert's head in addition to pulling a liner past Barber and shooting a single past Holocher, who was playing on top of second for it.

Bill McCabe, for three years utility player and comedian for the Cubs, was released yesterday to Brooklyn and left last night to join the Robins in Pittsburgh. Terry has proved a better utility man than McCabe [illegible] the Cubs asked waivers on him Brooklyn grabbed him, much to the disgust of President Powers of the Los Angeles club, who had arranged to get McCabe if no National league club wanted him.

Urbana, Ill., May 22.—[Special.]—Oak Park's well balanced team, scoring in every way except two, walked away with the class A championship in the University of Illinois interscholastic meet today. The suburbanites amassed a total of 41½ points.

DAVID KIMBALL.

Deerfield-Shields school of Highland Park was second with 25 points. The runners-up had plenty of consolation, for their leader, Kimball, established a new world interscholastic record of :24 2-5 in the low hurdles. The former world's mark was held by Frank Loomis. This was the only record smashing of the day. Despite a fast track and a big field, the other marks were not exceptional.

Trophy to Kimball.

Kimball was awarded the Illini trophy for the best individual performance, while Meyers of Altona, who starred in the weight events, was awarded the second trophy for the next best performance.

In the class B division there was a nip and tuck race which Marion, down in Egypt, won with 15 1-5 points, just a fraction ahead of Hinsdale, with 15 points. Carrollton, El Paso, and Carlinsville were other class B leaders who had a chance to grab the championship.

Crowd Cheers Hero.

Kimball's feat in the low hurdles was pretty. The Highla. . Parker cleared the barriers faultlessly and won handily over Majors of Champaign. The crowd cheered the announcement that the athlete has established a new world's mark for future juvenile stars to shoot at.

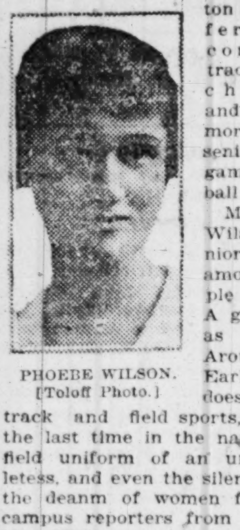
Returns Coming In for Purple High School Games

Early return of entry lists by high schools indicates a record field for the Northwestern university relay carnival and athletic meet May 29. Though entries do not close until May 22, Athletic Director Lee has returns from five states. Northwestern will meet Iowa in a dual meet at the same time as the high school carnival.

PURPLE CO-EDS HOLD TRACK EVENTS WITH "MUM'S THE WORD"

Northwestern university women held their annual athletic carnival in Evanston yesterday, different classes competing in track and field championships and the sophomores playing the seniors in the final game of the baseball season.



PHOEBE WILSON.
[Toloff Photo.]

Miss Phoebe Wilson of the seniors, who rates among the Purple Woman's A. A girls as highly as National All-Around Champion Earl Thomson does in men's track and field sports, appeared for the last time in the natty track and field uniform of an undergrad athletess, and even the silence decreed by the deanm of women failed to keep campus reporters from learning that Miss Williams was a star.

Miss Dorothy Rioch was captain of the sophomore ball team which beat the seniors.

PRINCETON UPSETS HARVARD ATHLETES ON TRACK, 91 TO 26

Princeton, N. J., May 22.—Princeton's track team defeated Harvard in a dual meet today, 91 to 26. Princeton took every first place, except in the pole vault and in the high jump, where there was a triple tie for first honors. The Tigers swept the field in both hurdle events and the half mile.

Eight new records for Harvard-Princeton dual meets were created, the new marks being in the 100 yard dash, the 220 yard dash, the quarter mile run, the half mile run, the mile run, the two mile run, the shotput, the broad jump, hammer throw, and the 220 yard hurdle race.

Gourdin was Harvard's leading scorer, taking second place in the broad jump and the 100 yard dash and third place in the 220 yard event. Capt. O'Connell of Harvard sprained an ankle in practice and was unable to compete. Summaries:

The following qualified in the medal play round for the silver cup of the Spring handicap: R. E. Alberts, F. C. Vawthon, W. P. Glenn, M. E. Kelly, H. J. Begard, A. B. Peterson, C. A. Wickstrom, D. Levinger, C. G. Bergquist, W. Ruthven, W. H. Hosford, R. McCullough, P. E. Kern, J. R. Taylor, H. S. Baker, W. A. Titus.

OAK PARK.

In the blind bogey competition, S. J. Templeton won the major prize with 87. E. M. Yates, 91, was second, while R. D. Stevenson, 93, finished third.

RIDGE.

G. W. Oliver, 84—14—70, won the ball sweepstakes at Ridge, R. R. Reed taking second prize with 91—20—71, and F. H. Schultz third, 90—17—73.

THE feature of the first match round for the Pumphrey trophy was the tenacious struggle between J. J. Charles and F. P. Davis, which went to the last green on even terms and left the question of supremacy in statu quo. Through the default of C. B. Moore, medalist in the qualifying round, Kenneth P. Edwards lost out on a round of match play. J. H. S. Lee and C. L. Bartlett both won home green victories. Summary:

Pumphrey trophy, first match round—J. H. S. Lee defeated C. A. Donnell, 1 up; F. P. Horan defeated Harrison B. Riley, 4 and 2; K. P. Edwards won by default from C. B. Moore; C. L. Speaker's Team Protects Arbiter After Game.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 22.—Cleveland defeated the Philadelphia Americans for the third successive time, 4 to 1. Hitting by Chapman and Speaker was responsible for the victory. As a result of several close decisions the crowd swarmed over the field and hooted as Umpire Hildebrand was crossing the diamond to leave the field. Cleveland players surrounded him and escorted him to the dugout. Score:

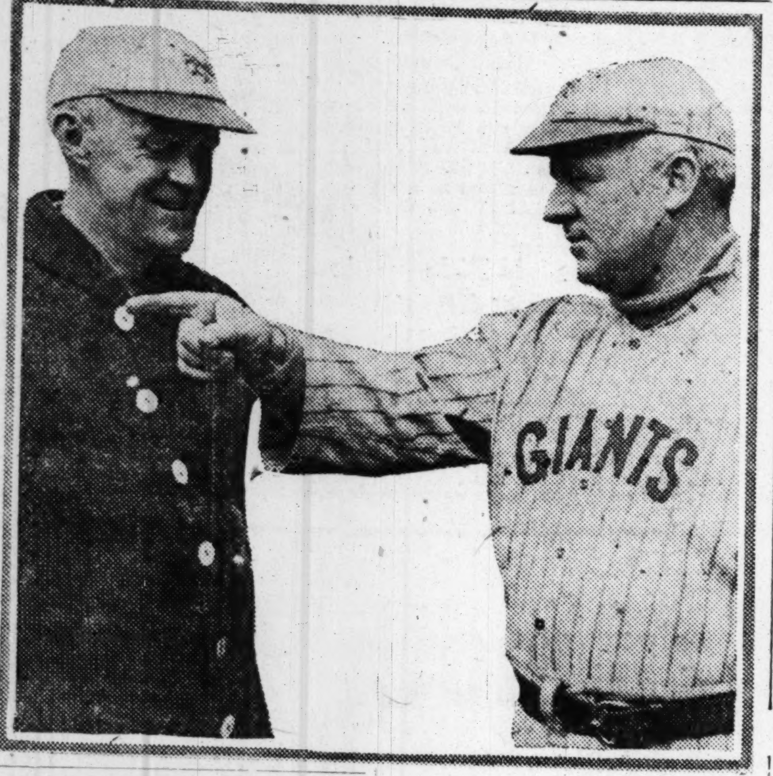
TAKING ORDERS FROM FORMER ENEMY

Hero of "Merkle Play" Which Cost Giants 1908 Pennant Now Assistant to Manager McGraw.



Johnny Evers, as assistant to Manager McGraw, aroused interest of the fans during the recent Giants series, for it was Evers' alertness which beat New York out of the pennant in 1908, the year of the "Merkle play." Strangely enough, Merkle is now a Cub. In the ninth inning of a close game at the Polo grounds Bridwell singled and the runner from third scored, the crowd surging onto the field. Merkle, who was on first, ran for the clubhouse, instead of "touching second," and Evers called for the ball at second. Umpire O'Day ruled Merkle was forced out and the run nullified, leaving the score 1 to 1.

The National league board of directors ordered the game played over. As Cubs and Giants ended the season tied, the playoff decided the title. Chicago won, 4 to 2, Pfiester and Brown pitching for Chicago and Mathewson and Wiltse for New York.

PREP BASEBALL

Bloom High won the best fought game of the entire Suburban league baseball season, defeating La Grange, 1 to 0, in the tenth inning yesterday at Chicago Heights. Losing the game was no fault of Pitcher Wesley ["Toots"] Casper of La Grange, who struck out nineteen and held Bloom to five scattered hits. The winning run was scored without the aid of a hit in the tenth.

Capt. Williams, La Grange center fielder, dropped Sauter's fly to start the final round. Kirgis was hit by pitcher. The next batter, Monacelli, hit a smart grounder to Second Baseman Preigh, who fumbled, then let it get through him, and Sauter scampered home all the way from second base with the count that won. TRIPLE PLAY BY CARDS IN TENTH DOWNS GIANTS

St. Louis Earns 3-2 Win After Fielding Feat.

St. Louis, Mo., May 22.—[St. Louis made a garrison finish against the Giants, tying the score in the ninth and winning in the tenth, 3 to 2. The winning run was scored off Benton on an infield hit, pass, sacrifice and an infield out.

The first triple play here this season was made by the Cardinals in the tenth. Burns led off with a scratch hit down the third base line and went all the way to third on Stock's wild throw. Young walked and Fletcher, who followed him, lined to right field.

Schultz made a brilliant catch and his throw to the plate caught Burns trying to score from third. Young also had started running with the hit and Clemons' throw to Fournier put him out. Score:

PYOTTS LAND ON M'GINNITYS FOR 5 TO 3 VICTORY

Benz Holds Decatur Team to Four Hits.

The Pyotts handed Joe McGinnity's Staleys of Decatur, Ill., a 5 to 3 lacing at Pyott park yesterday in the first of their two game series. Roger Kilby's circuit smash with Debus on the lines in the fourth gave the Pyotts a two run lead. Singles by Hobson, Blank, Debus, and La Ross produced two more counters in the next round. Debus' single counted Blank in the seventh for the final tally.

The McGinnitys registered in the fifth on Veach's homer. They counted a pair in the ninth on two errors and Woodworth's triple. Score:

CLEVELAND SIX

It Makes Thousands of Friends by Its Every-day Performance

Men and women, everywhere, have acclaimed the Cleveland Six a winner. It has won thousands of them, and they are enthusiastic in its praise. It has won them because it brings them so much more of the pleasure of driving, such ease of driving and such unusual comfort.

The Cleveland has made its friends, too, because of the extraordinary performance of the Cleveland motor, developed through three years of tests in the laboratories and shops and on the road before being offered to the public. It has life, pick-up, power and endurance that you cannot find in many cars.

Cleveland bodies are of most graceful, dignified design, handsomely finished and upholstered in genuine hand-buffed leather.

Come in and see the Cleveland Six. Ride in it. Drive it yourself. Then you will know just how good it is.

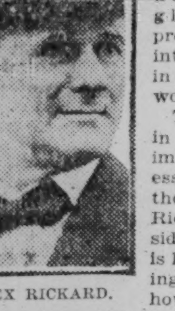
'TEX' RICKARD IS HUMAN DYNAMO OF BOXING GAME

Whole Interest in Sport Centers in Ring.

BY RAY PEARSON.

George L. ["Tex"] Rickard, once Texas rancher, later boxing promoter, still later oil man and South American cattleman, but always infatuated with the glove sport, is probably the most interesting figure in the sporting world today.



TEX RICKARD.

There is no use in displaying the impertinence necessary to learn the exact age of Rickard, and, besides that, there is little use in trying to discover how old this dynamic, ever active, promoter de luxe of the glove wielding game really is. He's older than he looks and he's older than he acts, and that should be sufficient information on this point for any inquisitive fan.

Burdened with the reputation of being the greatest promoter of fistic events in the world seems not to annoy Rickard at all. While the thatch which crowns his head isn't as thick as it once was, it is not due to worrying. He's got that way just like many another man.

Action His Keynote.

While "Tex" simply dotes on the cattle business, for he has about the biggest ranch in the world in South America, a ranch on which there are something like 20,000 head of cattle, one need not be surprised when the time is ripe to learn that the man who is promoting the international world's championship is none other than "Tex" Rickard.

As this was meant to be a word picture of Rickard, perhaps a few more paragraphs should be written about the man and his way of occupying his time. "Tex" has been called a "human dynamo." He's that all right, for he's always speeding at high tension, doesn't sit long enough on one chair to warm it and talks or listens intently.

Too Nervous for Baseball.

It may or it may not be interesting information for the layman to know that Rickart is a one sport man.

"How about other sports, such as baseball, etc. Do you like them."

"Can't say that I do," answered Rickard. "I seldom go to a baseball game, because I don't really get enthusiastic over the game. Guess I could say the same, too, for other sports."

The writer is of the opinion that "Tex" couldn't sit through nine innings of baseball. He's too loaded with nervous energy to permit it.

Would Draw Big Gate.

When one talks "fight" to "Tex," he listens with polite attention, for one of the things he likes to do is to get a varied viewpoint. For instance, he asked one of his friends the other day: "What do you think of a Dempsey-Carpentier contest?"

"I think it will be a one punch fight," replied the friend. "When Dempsey lands, the fight will be over. What do you think, 'Tex'?"

"Well, I've been thinking that Carpentier, who is a mighty clever fellow, may be able to keep away from Jack and escape contact with that heavy wallop," said Rickard, "but perhaps you are right."

That's about as close as any one can get to a definite opinion from Rickard on the outcome of a scrap. But Rickard is perfectly willing to be quoted that a Dempsey-Carpentier championship bout is an attraction of caliber to draw a big gate. He ought to know.

SHOOT PRIZE TO FRANK MUELLER

Defeating W. E. Phillips Sr., 24 to 22, in the shootoff, Frank Mueller captured honors in the class A division of the Saturday shoot of the Lincoln Park Gun club. Mueller, Phillips, Dr. W. E. Little, and A. H. Ammann tied for first place in the fifty target event with scores of 49. Little is a class B shooter and Ammann a professional. J. R. Foster was high in class C with 39, and C. Mehrhof in class D with 28. The fifth members' team race will be held today.

Woods and Waters

TROUT FEATHERS.

OF course, trout hasn't feathers, silly! But a trout will take feathers; and if the feathers conceal a hook, are presented properly, handled correctly, and if several things don't happen, feathers will take trout. Artificial flies—that's the kind of trout feathers we mean.

By mid-May most trout streams are ready to yield well to fly fishermen, but if the weather is cold don't expect too much early in the morning.

Wade upstream in slow water and downstream where the water is "heavy." Fish the pools from below, and when you hook a fish lead him down, if possible, over the water you have already fished. Cover every bit of a pool you can reach before moving, and then be careful about striking your hobnails against rocks or gravel—such sounds carry a long way under water.

A good caster has an advantage in fishing a pool. He can handle more line easily and drop his flies more gently. Generally us ordinary casters spoil a pool by trying to cast too far without regard to delicacy.

Another thing I have noticed in this fishing a pool is that too few casts are made. A trout fisherman on his first trip of the season is much like the horse in the pasture—the distance looks more alluring than it really is. Most fly fishermen hurry too much. In fishing a pool the angler must remember that visibility is greater than it is in white water, hence he must keep out of sight as much as possible.

The swift water at the head of a pool is likelier than it looks, and it should be well fished. You can nearly always get a rise in a spot that is hard to reach, because the general run of fishermen pass by such places. Very often a little hike through the brush will put you in a place from which you can reach the desired spot, and the reward for the effort is sometimes decidedly worth while.

White water offers many advantages to the fisherman. The trout cannot see him, and they are easier to hook. Fish such water with diligence, in spite of what you hear about little fish loving to play in the riffles. If there are brown trout in the stream, don't overlook the little eddies above large rocks.

Casting across stream and following through with the rod as the fly travels down assures more hooked fish, but sometimes it pays to follow the dry fly man's methods even in rough water by drying the fly by a few false casts, casting it up and across stream and letting it float down through the little, smooth "shoots" between the rocks. It may stay on the surface but a short time, but often long enough to tempt a good fish.

Casting a palmer, hackle, or hair fly down and across stream, letting it sink, pulling it upstream a few feet, and then letting it fall back, is very deadly. It sets the hairs to wriggling in a lifelike manner, and if the stream is narrow enough to enable you to cast it to the other bank, especially where it overhangs, it often gets the big lunkers.

Even the old time anglers are coming around to the one fly idea. One fly, cast accurately and properly handled, seems to get more fish than two or three, and it is less bothersome, especially on small streams. Some anglers put on two or three flies at the start, to see what the fish are taking, then they switch to one, usually an eyed fly tied directly to the leader.

No two fishermen agree as to the best patterns for early trouting. I know one good angler who uses nothing but a crude looking bucktail; another swears by March Brown and another by Wickham's Fancy. Putting personal preferences aside, these probably would fill the bill in most waters: March Brown, Professor, Coachman, Royal Coachman, Queen of Waters, Grey Hackle, Grizzly King, Cahill, Stone, Black Gnat, Whirling Dun, and a small bucktail.

Ordinarily, larger flies are used in early fishing. Eights are the standard, and sixes often prove effective in rough or discolored water. Even in dry fly fishing no less an expert than Fred N. Peet has strong leanings toward large flies: A big trout will strike a cork bodied bass bug, which is almost the size of a humming bird, so why would a No. 6 fly scare a medium sized trout? Big flies have this advantage: they hold much better than small ones and fewer fish are lost.

NEW YORK WINS CHURCH NET CUP

Forest Hills, N. Y., May 22.—New York won the holding of the Church cup today from Boston in the tennis matches on the turf courts of the West Side Tennis club. The New York team defeated the Boston holders of the trophy in the finals, 6 matches to 3. R. Norris Williams II. of Boston scored a masterful defeat of Ichiya Kumagae, the Japanese, 5—7, 6—3, 8—6. Watson M. Washburn smothered Richard Harte, 6—2, 6—2. In the other matches S. Howard Voshell, Dean Mathey and Vincent Richards were the leading winners for New York.

C. H. Garland Jr., the Yale captain [Pittsburgh], in a test match today for the Davis cup team, outplayed W. F. Johnson, Philadelphia, 6—4, 4—6, 9—7, 7—5, 6—2.

Doubles—Biggar and Hutchinson [E.] beat Weston and Riddle [P.], 4—6, 6—2, 6—3. Latane and Jones [E.] beat Mehringer and Dohm [P.], 6—3, 6—3; Hamilton and Thilmont [P.] beat Johnson and Cook [E.], 8—6, 7—5.

Edison, 9; Gas Company, 0.

Commonwealth Edison racket wielders scored a complete shutout of the Gas company team, losing only one game. The contests were played at Elston avenue and Whipple street, the winners' courts. Summaries:

Singles—Benson beat Wandas, 6—4, 6—2; Heitman beat Hayes, 6—1, 6—2; Howland beat Seinwerth, 6—3, 6—1; Moran beat Eddy, 6—0, 6—1; Clark beat Cade, 6—3, 3—6, 6—3; Alexander beat Ruehl, 6—2, 6—1.

Doubles—Benson and Moran beat Wandas and Hayes, 6—1, 6—3; Heitman and Johnson beat Seinwerth and Meyers, 6—3, 6—4; Howland and Kupshas beat Eddy and Cade, 6—3, 6—2.

The opening tournament of the annual tennis campaign of the middle west will get under way in this city on Saturday. The Sherwood club, at Huron and St. Clair streets, on the near north side, has carded its second annual tourney of men's singles and doubles to begin then and continue through next week.

Entries for the events close Thursday noon at offices of the Chicago Tennis association, 1510 First National Bank building. A worthy field already is entered, including Walter T. Hayes, Ralph Burdick, Lucian Williams, and Arthur Hubbell. Clifton B. Herd, former Californian, will be a newcomer to the local game. Alex Squair has timed his active reëntry into championship tournament play to begin with the Sherwood club event.

Englewood High Loses, 8-3, to Culver Academy

Culver, Ind., May 22.—[Special.]—In a heavy batting contest, Culver Military academy won from Englewood High school this afternoon, 8 to 3. Heidt, the cadet pitcher, scored a home run in the fourth. Score:

Culver ....0 1 2 1 0 0 0 4 *—8 12 0
Englewood ...0 0 0 0 0 2 0 1 0—3 8 0

Batteries—Heidt and Lucas; Sims and Bryson, Hanley and Latzke.

Inquisitive Fans

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—Bases full, one out. Coacher on third in uniform runs home to fool the pitcher and stops a few feet from home and stands in the crowd. Is the batter out or what should the result be? The pitcher threw to the catcher to tag the coacher, but the latter stopped and turned into the crowd. THORNDALE.

Answer—The coacher should have been banished to the bench for leaving his box. There is no other penalty except when a play is being made on a batted ball.

D. A., Knoxville, Ia.—Cincinnati played six errorless games up to May 10. Your query was not dated.

Beardstown, Ill.—[To the Editor.]—A man hits a ball fair, it rolls foul and hits an umpire on foul territory. Is the man safe or out and is there a rule covering this play? H. HANKS.

Answer—It is simply a foul if it rolled foul before passing first or third base. See rule 45.

Chicago—[To the Editor.]—Did Griffith and Callahan play on the Chicago National league team at the same time? Give years and dates if possible. E. H. SWANSON.

Answer—Yes, from 1898 to 1900, inclusive.

W. E. Binder, Camp Grant, Ill.—Ty Cobb obtained a captain's commission in the chemical war service at the conclusion of the baseball season of 1918.

KING GORIN AGAIN WINS KENTUCKY HANDICAP STAKE

Louisville, Ky., May 22.—R. L. Baker's King Gorin for the second time won the Kentucky handicap at a mile and a quarter, an accomplishment which no other horse here has equalled since the race first was run in 1913. Drastic was second and Minto II., third. The time was 2:04 1-5. The stake carried $10,000 in added money and had a gross value of $15,225, the winner's share being $12,375.

Bowen Takes Golf Title in Tourney at Illinois

Urbana, Ill., May 22.—[Special.]—Duggan of Bowen High school won the golf championship this afternoon in connection with the twenty-sixth interscholastic track meet. Hyde Park registered second. Senn High of Chicago and Wheat tied for third. Hyde Park secured first honors in tennis.

RESOLUTE SNAPS RIGGING IN RACE AGAINST VANITIE

New Haven, Conn., May 22.—Resolute's hollow wooden mast crumbled up today as the Herreshoff boat was finishing the first round of its first tuning up race with Vanitie, and with a crash, mast, spars, sails, and rigging went over the starboard bow. Vanitie, which was about two minutes astern, came up into the wind and, after ascertaining that no one was injured, bore up for the harbor.

As soon as the wreckage on Resolute had been cut away and recovered with the aid of numerous launches, the tender Montauk sent a line on board and the yacht was taken in tow at once for Bristol, R. I., where a spar steel mast will be stepped for a resumption of the races with Vanitie to decide which will defend the America's cup against Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock IV.

INSURGERS LOSE PART OF WRATH IN G. O. P. CAUCUS

Decide to Let Army Bill Precede Packers.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—After a conference of Republican senators today the senate went ahead with the army appropriation bill, again pushing the Kenyon-Kendrick packing control bill to the legislative sidetrack.

The "insurgents" did not force the test vote they threatened yesterday, but denied they had met defeat. They had come to the conclusion that the army bill's passage was imperatively necessary and that the packer bill could wait a few days more. As soon as the appropriation bills are passed, however, they will renew their demands that the packer bill be given the right of way and predict they will have the votes to win.

The Republican conference, it was stated, took no action with regard to adjournment. There is still considerable dispute over the program, but it is generally believed congress will have to return to its duties soon after the San Francisco convention and give its attention to measures dealing with the high cost of living.

Wants to Hold His Forces.

"I had hoped," Senator Kenyon said, "that we might have a test of sentiment in the senate on the question of taking up the packers' bill. However, there are several senators who favor action on the packers' bill who do not want to be put in the position of voting against the military appropriation bill. All of us realize the necessity for action in appropriation measures. There is a good deal of strength in that argument and I feel that we could not show our full strength for the packers' bill on a vote to displace the military bill."

Senator Kendrick agreed it was not the desire of the proponents of the packers' bill to delay necessary appropriation bills.

After Senator Gronna had inserted in the record a statement of the earnings of the five leading packers Senator Sherman took the floor for an hour's attack on the packers' bill.

Sherman Flays Packer Bill.

He declared Senator Gronna had presented the "same old figures that for a long time have been thrust before the people by the federal trade commission," and the federal trade commission employed a system of accounting the like of which was not to be found in the civilized world.

"If the senator from North Dakota believes this packers' bill is a perfectly innocent measure he is the most innocent easy mark that ever held a seat in the United States senate," Senator Sherman said.

He declared the bill was not written by the senate committee on agriculture, but by arrogant demagogues and destroyers for whom he had supreme contempt.

"I am not a candidate for office, thank God," he said. "I am therefore well equipped to remain here throughout the summer and let the G. O. P. take care of itself if this bill is to be urged."

FIVE GIRLS ENGAGED WITHIN WEEK IN ONE SORORITY AT N. U.

Watching Prof. Daniel Cupid chase Northwestern university co-eds is the latest indoor sport at the Evanston college. Every week a "cozy" is given by the sororities. Recently at nearly every such party one of the girls has announced her engagement.

"Who's next?" the girls constantly ask.

It is estimated more than 100 young women have met their future husbands at Northwestern this year and many already have abandoned a college career for a home career.

MISS HELEN OSGOOD.

Alphi Phi sorority has been hardest hit. Within the last few days five members of this society have announced their engagement. They are Miss Lillian Parks, who is to be married to Robert Wilcox, captain of last year's basketball team; Miss Helen Osgood of Wilmette, who will be married to John King; Miss Esteline Forbrich, whose engagement to Milton Holloway was announced yesterday.; Miss Frances Griffin of Evanston, who will be married to Ned Piper, and Miss Betty Robertson, who is engaged to Tom O'Connor.

U. S., SCALPED OF TAX, GOES AFTER TICKET SCALPER

Chicago Arrests Start of National Roundup.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—With the arrest in Chicago of eight theater ticket brokers and reports from that city that 150 theaters and moving picture houses have failed to make proper monthly returns of admission taxes, the bureau of internal revenue today began a campaign for collection of such taxes in every city in the country. Reports received, bureau officials say, indicate the collections of delinquent admission taxes and penalties will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars. Prosecutions will be instituted in every case where investigation shows willful refusal to collect or pay the tax.

Pocketing War Tax?

The Chicago ticket brokers are charged with violation of section 800 of the revenue act of 1918 which provides that tickets sold other than at the box office of a theater or place of amusement shall have indelibly stamped, printed, or written thereon the name of the vendor and the box office price.

The penalty for failure to so mark the ticket, or for selling it in advance of the marked price, is a fine of not more than $100.

RESULT OF CHICAGO INQUIRY.

The Washington order is said to have resulted from the investigation by Collector Harry W. Mager in the Chicago district immediately after the income tax was collected. At that time prominent theater owners and ticket brokers were warned. Eight arrests have followed and thousands of dollars of back taxes have been collected. Federal authorities said yesterday that more indictments were expected.

G. O. P. ACTS TO BAR AMENDMENT TO BONUS BILL

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—Soldiers' bonus legislation now is scheduled to be called up for action in the house next Thursday. Representative Fordney of Michigan, chairman of the ways and means committee, set this date tentatively today, following the sudden decision last night not to call it up today because of fear that the proposed special rule might be blocked by a combination of Republicans and Democrats.

The committee on rules reported out a special rule today providing for five hours' debate, at the end of which one motion to recommit would be in order. No opportunity would be afforded for amendments. The vote war 8 to 4, with the Democrats voting in the negative because of the failure to permit amendments on the floor.

Just what will be the fate of the bill next Thursday is uncertain. Representative Fordney predicted today that it would be passed exactly as reported from committee. Others are not so sure.

It is conceded that at least fifty Republicans will oppose any kind of bonus legislation. There is another group of Republicans, headed by Representative Johnson of South Dakota, the crowd that caused the rejection of the sales tax, which would like an opportunity to vote to insert the war profits taxes of the Rainey-Johnson bill in the measure. These Republicans with the Democrats might easily defeat the rule.

PRANKS OF BOYS CAUSE SUICIDE OF AGED DOCTOR

Insomnia, and a consequent nervousness that made trifling annoyances appear a chain of persecution, are believed to have prompted Dr. Archibald Haas, 70 years old, to commit suicide yesterday in the bedroom of his home at 2005 North Western avenue.

On a calendar the aged physician had written:

"Eight o'clock p. m. Someone threw a rat down the chimney and tried to suffocate me."

"Nov. 22, 1918. First snow fall of the season. Gas turned on in the hall."

"Feb. 14, 1919. Someone threw a rock at me and broke the window." The same notation appeared under the date of March 14.

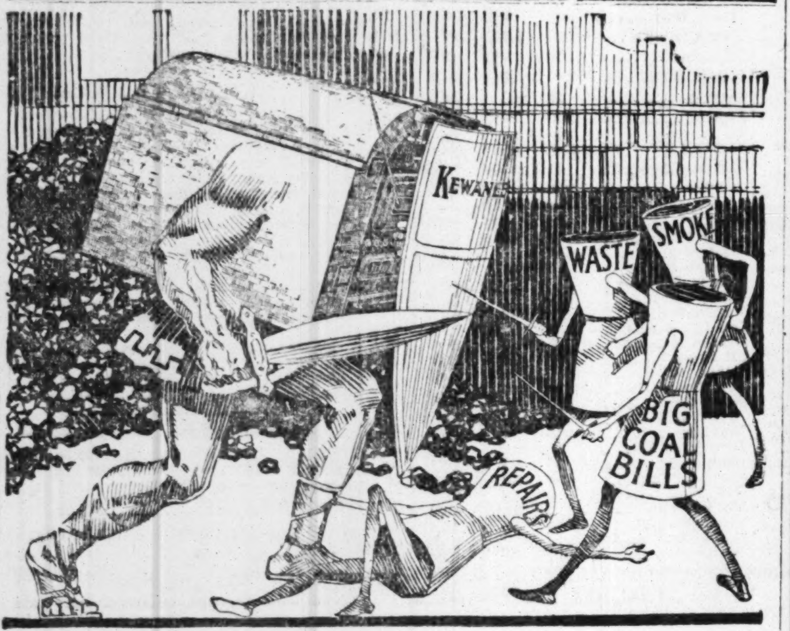
"There were a number of mischievous boys in the neighborhood," said one of the doctor's friends, "and their pranks worried Dr. Haas."

A verdict of suicide while temporarily insane was returned by a coroner's jury.

Dr. Haas was a bachelor and one of the oldest physicians in Chicago. He lived in this city fifty years.

No Cause for Financial Alarm in Price Cutting

St. Louis, Mo., May 22.—There is no cause for financial alarm in the present nation-wide price slashing movement, according to a statement today by Richard S. Hawes of this city, president of American Bankers' association.



Stabs Heating Costs

Whadda you mean when you use the expression: "Saving at the spigot and wasting at the bung?" Well, for one thing, it means a stand-off. What you save in one direction you spill in another. It means, for example, a man who puts a bum boiler in a good building.

That man may save a few dollars when he buys his boiler but that saving, and a lot more, will be used up by the extra expense his bum boiler will dump onto his shoulders.

A poor boiler will use up a lot of expensive coal but it won't produce much heat. It's like a lot of race horses that prance a lot but never get any place—all action and no speed.

KEWANEE

Why don't you sweep all your risks off the board and put in a Kewanee Smokeless Boiler? That's the boiler that cuts heating costs. It burns any kind of coal and gives the maximum heat with the minimum waste. The fact that it is smokeless proves it burns all the coal. Hence the waste is nil.

And it is the easiest boiler in the world to operate. You don't need fancy and high-priced coal, nor do you need a high priced operator. Any one can operate a Kewanee Smokeless Boiler and operate it right.

We could preach a long sermon on the ease of operating a Kewanee Smokeless Boiler. But we can't in an ad. A booklet we have published does this—and tells how. A copy to you without charge if you ask for it.

MILLION ACRES IN THIS STATE NEED DRAINAGE

Would Add 100 Millions to Illinois Wealth.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Springfield, Ill., May 22.—[Special.]—Frank W. De Wolf of the state geological survey says there are "1,000,000 acres of maximum rich lowlands in Illinois now lying idle." With proper drainage these lands will yield annually, in his opinion, products worth $75,000,000 to $100,000,000.

"Surely," he says, "this is a matter of public interest. Recognition of the public character of the large problem in the new constitution will make it possible to legislate for coöperative effort by state, counties, municipalities, and private owners, with a fair proportional investment by each."

These lands are the most fertile in the state and border the rivers and creeks. The overflow of the streams prevents their use.

To Provide Drainage.

This problem, one of the few progressive and constructive considered to date by the delegates to the constitutional convention, is bearing a solution in the opinion of the committee on agriculture. A subcommittee composed of Delegates Shaw, Tanner, Parker, and Gee have prepared a section for the new basic law, "providing for the organization of drainage districts and with investing corporate authorities with powers of eminent domain, taxation, and special assessment and with such other powers as may be deemed necessary for the development, construction, and maintenance of water supply and means of flood control and of drainage for sanitary, agricultural, and mining purposes."

In addition the subcommittee wants the constitution to say that the "specification of the means for the accomplishment of the purposes set forth in the section shall not deprive the general assembly of the power to provide other means."

Expects Favorable Report.

Chairman Dunlap of the committee on agriculture said today he hopes for favorable action on the report this week.

William R. Hale of the law department of the University of Illinois has compiled an elaborate statement showing that Arkansas, Missouri, and Kansas have passed statutes to care for drainage by general laws. State aid is given for the same purpose in Alabama, California, Ohio, and Minnesota. Some of these states have elaborate plans with commissions and apparently provision for a large number of employés.

"We prefer a plan for a minimum of jobs and a maximum of drainage," said Delegate Shaw today. "Rich bottom lands are now idle and we want them under cultivation at a minimum of expense so that they may yield crops of enormous value [illegible] soon as possible."

He is acquainted with the territory along the lower Illinois river. J. Mack Tanner claims there are equally as large and productive areas in southern Illinois which need as much attention. Recently an association was formed in Peoria to promote the drainage idea and its officers have become active at the constitutional convention.

FIELD TO DIRECT MOUNT HOLYOKE FUND CAMPAIGN

Marshall Field III. has just accepted the chairmanship of the Chicago advisory committee of the Mount Holyoke college endowment fund campaign, thereby proving the continued interest of the Field family in the institution. Mr. Field's great grandfather was the friend and chief adviser of Mary Lyon when she founded Mount Holyoke in 1837.

The family continued to contribute largely to its support, and in 1896 the Fidelia Nash Field scholarship was given by Joseph N. Field, brother of Marshall Field I. In 1911 they had erected the Field gates, an imposing structure at the entrance to the college campus. The old Field home was in Conway, Mass., not far from South Hadley, where the college is located.

Three million dollars is the goal set for the endowment fund, two-thirds of which will be used for increasing salaries and enlarging departments, and the remainder for rebuilding two halls which burned recently and for erecting a new residence hall. Mrs. James J. Forstall is chairman of the Chicago campaign commitee, and Mrs. Henri David is president of the Chicago alumnæ.

Saturday, May 29, the annual meeting of the Illinois alumnæ of Mount Holyoke will be held at Hull house, through the courtesy of Miss Jane Addams. Reports of the campaign will be made at that time.

RALLY FOLLOWS A FURTHER DROP IN GRAIN PRICES

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Heavy selling pressure on all grains, particularly corn, by Wall street interests, local professionals, and longs in general, who liquidated on stop loss orders, carried prices down to new low levels after a good rally early. Selling was overdone on the extreme decline and the general wave of profit taking brought a good rally from the lowest prices with the finish at intermediate figures on corn and rye, while the distant futures of oats were at the top of the day with gains of ⅞@1⅜c, while May was off 4c. Losses on corn were ⅛@¾c on the deferred and 2¾c on May. Rye was 1⅛c higher on July and ½c lower on May, while barley was ½c up on September and 4c up on the acting price for May.

Week of Liquidation.

It has been a week of liquidation with corn prices diclining at a rate that brought a realization of the most radical dreams of the bears, losses being 15⅛@20¼c, July leading. Oats were off 1⅞@9⅝c, the latter on May, while rye was 24½@26¾c lower and barley 12@19c lower.

A good rally was made after the start which was decidedly better than expected, due to support from one class of profit takers and to a lack of selling orders expected as the result of the weak close Friday. This carried corn prices up 3½c for July from the low of the previous day's finish. Reports of a break of 10@16c in cash corn at St. Louis, the latter from the high of Friday, brought a wave of selling around $1.61 for July, and before it was checked the lowest prices on the present downturn was reached, $1.54⅞. General profit taking with a material reduction in the pressure made a rally to $1.58½@1.57½ at the close.

All the big commission houses were on the selling side a good part of the day, largely for eastern interests. At the same time they had buying orders under cover and secured handsome profits. An immense volume of business was on with the outside longs liquidating on stop loss orders.

Weather and crop conditions were regarded as bearish and the week's movement made the best showing at this time in over four years, while of oats it was the reverse.

Cash Oat Premiums Break.

Cash oats and the May delivery practically came together yesterday. Cash houses bought in the sample market and sold out the May held as a hedge against shipping sales. May weakened rapidly and closed at 96½c, the low point. Leading shorts were free buyers of the deferred deliveries and they averaged higher, closing at the top. There was a lack of pressure on the way up. Premiums 1@5c lower.

Rye showed stubborn resistance to selling pressure and closed firm. The seaboard reported 300,000 bu sold for export and Duluth claimed 300,000 to 400,000 bu had been sold there to the seaboard. A great deal of exchanging of futures was under way here. No. 2 on track sold at May price.

Barley declined 5c, with the outside figure $1.65 for cash lots.

Provision Losses Small.

Light offerings of provisions offset the effect of the lower hogs and corn and prices early were higher, only to ease off later and finish with pork 50c lower, lard 5c lower to unchanged, and short ribs 5c higher to 20c lower. Trading was not heavy and mainly between professionals. Shipments for the week showed fair gains, but were small compared with last year's. Packing here since March 1 aggregated 1,225,000 hogs, or 459,000 less than last year. Cash trade was fair. Prices follow:

MORE TO FEED; LESS WHEAT BY 250,000,000 BU.

Washington, D. C., May 22.—With largely increased civilian populations, a winter wheat yield of approximately 500,000,000 bushels, a reduction of more than 250,000,000 bushels as compared with last year, is forecast today by the committee on statistics of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Twenty per cent reduction in acreage and unfavorable weather, scarcity of farm labor, and caution are given as causes.

"At present there seems a likelihood, with moderately favorable weather, of a yield of 500,000,000 bushels," the report says.

Weather conditions may increase or decrease it by about 100,000,000 bushels.

The report says seeding of spring wheat was delayed and the outlook is for smaller acreage than last year.

COTTON MARKETS

NEW YORK, May 22.—A renewal of the liquidation was on early with a good decline in prices, which cleaned out all weak holdings. It brought in good buying to take profits and for southern account which carried prices up sharply, ending in a recovery of most of the decline. At the close net losses were 28 to 38 points. Weather conditions were more favorable. The important factors are the slowing down in trade, both with retailers and manufacturers. Prices follow:

FINANCIAL·NOTES

Bradstreet's weekly review of conditions says activity in retail lines was forced by drastic price reductions, while industry is slackening more and more weekly and idleness as a result is increasing. Dun's review reports a reactionary feeling quite well defined in the wholesale commodity markets, several important food products especially being depressed and the recessions largely outnumbering the movements toward higher levels. There were 137 failures last week, compared with 107 in the preceding week and 106 in the corresponding week in 1919.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending May 19, 1920, by 188 banks in 23 leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,201,499,000, compared with $1,088,808,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $1,201,499,000 compared with $999,031,000 for the corresponding week last year.

The Delaware and Hudson Railroad company has been authorized to sell $10,000,000 ten year 7 per cent serial gold bonds at not less than 96 in order to refund $9,000,000 notes due Aug. 1 and provide working funds. The Central of New Jersey railroad has sold $2,500,000 6 per cent equipment notes to a New York bank.

It is eastern talk that the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., will declare a stock dividend next month, giving three additional shares for each seven shares now held by stockholders. A reduction in taxes by the dominion government is expected to save the company about $1,000,000.

The annual meeting of the Anglo-American Oil company will be held in London June 23. For the convenience of American stockholders it has been arranged they may vote either by proxy or in person if deposit is made of share warrants with the Guaranty Trust company of New York at least fourteen days prior to the meeting.

Stockholders of the Manati Sugar company will vote on June 9 on increasing the common stock from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000, and the preferred stock from $3,500,000 to $5,000,000. A stock dividend is expected later in the year. Interests connected with the Cuban-American Sugar company say it will be able to maintain dividends at the rate of $1.75 quarterly on the new $10 par value stock. Dividends payable this year amount to the equivalent of $4.00 a share on the present stock, but the dividends for the last two quarters will be $1.75. The last of the serial notes, amounting to $2,000,000 and due Jan. 1, 1921, will be paid out of this year's earnings, and there will be a surplus after dividends.

A meeting of the stockholders of the P. H. Hanes Knitting company has been called for June 2 to amend the company's charter so as to permit the issue of a 150 per cent stock dividend on "B" common, thereby increasing the capital from $1,500,000 to $3,750,000.

The Chandler Motor Car company has been placed on a $10 annual dividend basis by the declaration of a quarterly dividend of $2.50, which will apply to both old and new stock, with all stock hereafter paying the $10 rate. This means that the dividend will apply to the stock to be issued as a stock dividend payable July 10.

Stockholders of the Seaconnett Mills have voted to double the capital stock, declaring a stock dividend of 100 per cent. This means an increase in the capital from $600,000 to $1,200,000.

The Columbia Graphophone Manufacturing company stockholders have subscribed to more than 95 per cent of the common stock offered for subscription at $27.50 a share.

The Federal Reserve bank of Dallas has adopted a sliding scale of rediscount rates by which higher rates are applied to member banks which are heavy borrowers than to those whose borrowings are relatively smaller. This is the second reserve bank to adopt the plan, the first being the Kansas City institution.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Ohio Cities Gas company has been called for June 5 to vote on the proposal to change the company's name to the Pure Oil company.

A report is current in New York banking circles that the federal reserve board will request the banks not to call old loans secured by Liberty bonds, as it is desired not to force the bonds on the market.

NEW YORK BANK REPORT SHOWS CURB ON CREDIT

The great liquidation of securities and commodities last week and the workings of a constructive program in reducing credit inflation is clearly indicated in the weekly statements of the New York Federal Reserve bank and the New York clearing house institutions. At the same time the transfer of credit to the west increased, and this bids fair to continue until better transportation conditions improve.

Probably the most significant item in the reserve bank's report was a decrease of $44,300,674 in total loans, although the bank increased its accommodation to other federal reserve banks by $31,646,-000, and has now loaned $80,368,896 to other institutions. Loans to member banks secured by government deposits declined $73,011,000 while rediscounts of commercial bills receded about $4,600,-000.

Considering that there was an increase of $21,845,000 in government deposits in the clearing house bank statement, which reflects the sale of treasury certificates of indebtedness, this large loan contraction shows that there has been a wholesale contraction in Liberty bond holdings.

Satisfactory Showing Made.

The satisfactory showing of the reserve bank was evidenced in an advance in the ratio of reserve to deposit and note liabilities combined to 42.3 and 40.3 per cent in the preceding week. That this improvement was made possible by extensive retirement of loans by borrowers is shown in the fall of $29,470,000 in the combined loan account of the clearing house banks.

The retirement of loans at the federal reserve bank by the clearing house banks is reflected in the fall of about $24,180,-000 in reserves carried at the central institution, and this movement carried with it a decline of $21,061,980 in the excess reserve of the associated banks, leaving the excess reserve at $7,699,350, a nominal figure.

At the reserve bank gross deposits declined $41,074,219, including a fall of $5,228,000 in government funds. Gold reserves increased $20,547,314. Circulation increased $5,418,770. With the clearing house banks net demand deposits declined $26,749,000.

*United States deposits deducted, $56,249,-000, compared with $34,404,000 in the preceding week.

Chicago Bank Borrows.

The weekly statement of the Chicago federal reserve bank made a less favorable showing. Because of the continued demand for credit the bank found it necessary to increase its borrowing of other federal reserve institutions in order to maintain its legal reserve. Such borrowing increased $6,709,000, being represented by loans on paper indorsed and turned over to sister banks, and the total now stands at $26,000,000. Exclusive of loans so rediscounted, total loans to member banks declined $2,176,569. This decrease was represented entirely by loans secured by government obligations, these decreasing $4,211,771, while loans otherwise secured increased $1,935,202. Total deposits declined $15,015,727, government deposits decreasing $784,306. The reserve account of the member banks declined $8,398,481. Note circulation again moved up, increasing $3,852,791. Total gold reserves declined $2,813,290 and total reserves decreased $2,247,612. The ratio of reserves to net deposit and 60.14 per cent in the preceding week, and the ratio of reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposit liabilities, fell to 42.39 from 42.53 per cent in the preceding week.

Statement of 12 Banks.

The consolidated statement of the twelve federal reserve banks shows improvement. The campaign against credit inflation is evidenced in a decline in loans of $50,904,000, this being accounted for in a decrease of $61,381,000 in loans secured by government obligations, while loans otherwise secured increased $10,477,000. Member banks' reserve accounts receded $40,480,000. Gross deposits declined $106,-945,000, including a drop of $19,785 in government deposits. Gold reserves advanced slightly. Circulation increased $1,968,000 and holdings of treasury certificates declined $2,702,000.

The ratio of reserves to net deposit and note liabilities combined rose to 42.7 from 42.2 per cent in the preceding week, and the ratio of gold reserves to note circulation after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposit liabilities rose to 47.7 from 47.1 per cent in the preceding week.

CHICAGO · STOCK · TRANSACTIONS

Trading in Chicago stocks was light in the week-end session yesterday, but the price trend was higher and only a few of the inactive issues failed to score gains. Union Carbide moved up 1¾, Stewart-Warner advanced a point, and United Iron Works gained 3 points. In the packing house shares Swift International was up 1⅜, while the others gained fractionally, except Libby, which was weak. On small sales Wahl, Shaw, Sears-Roebuck, and Quaker Oats preferred advanced 1 each. Middle West Utilities preferred was off 6 points and Diamond Match dropped 2 points. Libby-McNeill rights were traded in between 1⅝@1⅞.

WEST GETS MORE CARS

Western railroads are getting more box cars for moving grain, and the orders now out are for a more equitable handling of box car equipment by eastern and western roads. A few of the larger grain handling roads are loading 25 to 50 cars more per day than heretofore, and several are handling 250 to 300 cars per day on their entire systems. Receipts at Chicago last week were 2,646,000 bu of all grains, the largest in more than a month, and 478,000 bu in excess of the previous week, with a gain of 81,000 bu as compared with last year, but were 1,155,000 bu below the average. Corn receipts of 1,030,-000 bu were the largest at this time in over four years, while of oats, which were 999,000 bu, were the smallest in over four years.

Eastern roads are moving empties to the west and are having a larger tonnage movement than last year. Congestion at Chicago is being removed, as labor conditions are now 60 to 75 per cent of normal. Grain shipments last week increased 135,000 bu, being the largest in over a month, but were 1,255,000 bu short of last year, while the provision tonnage was nearly 17,000 tons short of last year, and flour 46,000 brls under that period.

The New York Times.

New York, May 22.—[Special.]—Today's stock market session was devoted to a moderate flow of evening up transactions, in which it was not indicated that Friday's recovery in particular directions had disturbed bearish plans. There was considerable pressure against motor issues and certain of the oil shares, but elsewhere results were not conclusive of positive influences behind dealings.

In general fractional gains at the end of business predominated over declines and there were quite a number of upturns of a point or more. The latter were in stocks lately subjected to pressure and the day's movement indicated more extensive short covering than among other issues.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

The local unlisted securities market has been active, with a majority of issues showing a higher level of values. Acme Steel Goods common advanced to sales at 75, and closed at 70 bid, offered at 75. Preferred was quoted 95@98. Kellogg Switchboard & Supply was traded in at 220. Linderman Steel was unchanged at 23@24. Gossard Corset was in good demand at 49, with stock offered at 50. Great Lakes was easier at 66@68. Considerable trading took place in Butler Brothers between 41@43, closing at 41¾ bid, offered at 42¼. Wahl preferred changed hands at 85. Avery common was unchanged at 105@115. Moline Plow preferred declined to sales at 87, ex dividend. Smerson Brantingham preferred sold at 75 and closed at 75@78.

Rubber stocks attracted considerable attention, Goodyear advancing some 15 points to sales at 360; preferred changed hands at 93½@95. Firestone sold at 160. Victor declined to 28½, but was stronger at the close at 29@30. Miller was traded in at 69. The motor group was rather an exception, being inclined toward a lower level. Paige-Detroit changed hands at 26, but closed at 27 bid, with stock offered at 29. Packard declined to 20¾ and closed at 20½@21½; preferred was traded in at 90. Stearns was fairly active between 30 and 32. National Motors was neglected at 15@25. Peerless sold off to 35. Briscoe preferred was wanted at 77, ex dividend.

Little actual trading took place in the sugar stocks. Columbia sold at 17 and closed with stock wanted at this price, with offerings at 17½. Holland-St. Louis changed hands at 16. Utah Idaho was quoted 8½@9¼. Michigan was unchanged at 10½@11½. Public utility securities have been neglected for some time. Standard Gas common had a quick break to 11, but closed somewhat beter at 12 bid, with light offerings. The preferred sold at 36@36½. Cities Service common changed hands at 330 and the preferred at 64½.

Keep Traffic Moving

To look at a trolley wire no thicker than one's little finger and then at the cars propelled by its means, gives one respect for that intangible something contained in it which manifests such power.

It's called a "live wire" or charged with electricity. If the current is shut off, inaction results all along the line.

Men's attitude to the business situation is much like the trolley wire: a right mental attitude on their part, even though invisible, keeps business moving; while not to maintain the "electricity" of unshaken confidence shuts off the power.

Everybody can help to keep traffic moving.

Incidentally, we are now completing at Janesville, Wisconsin, our 11th contract and 27th building for the General Motors Corporation, or its subsidiaries.

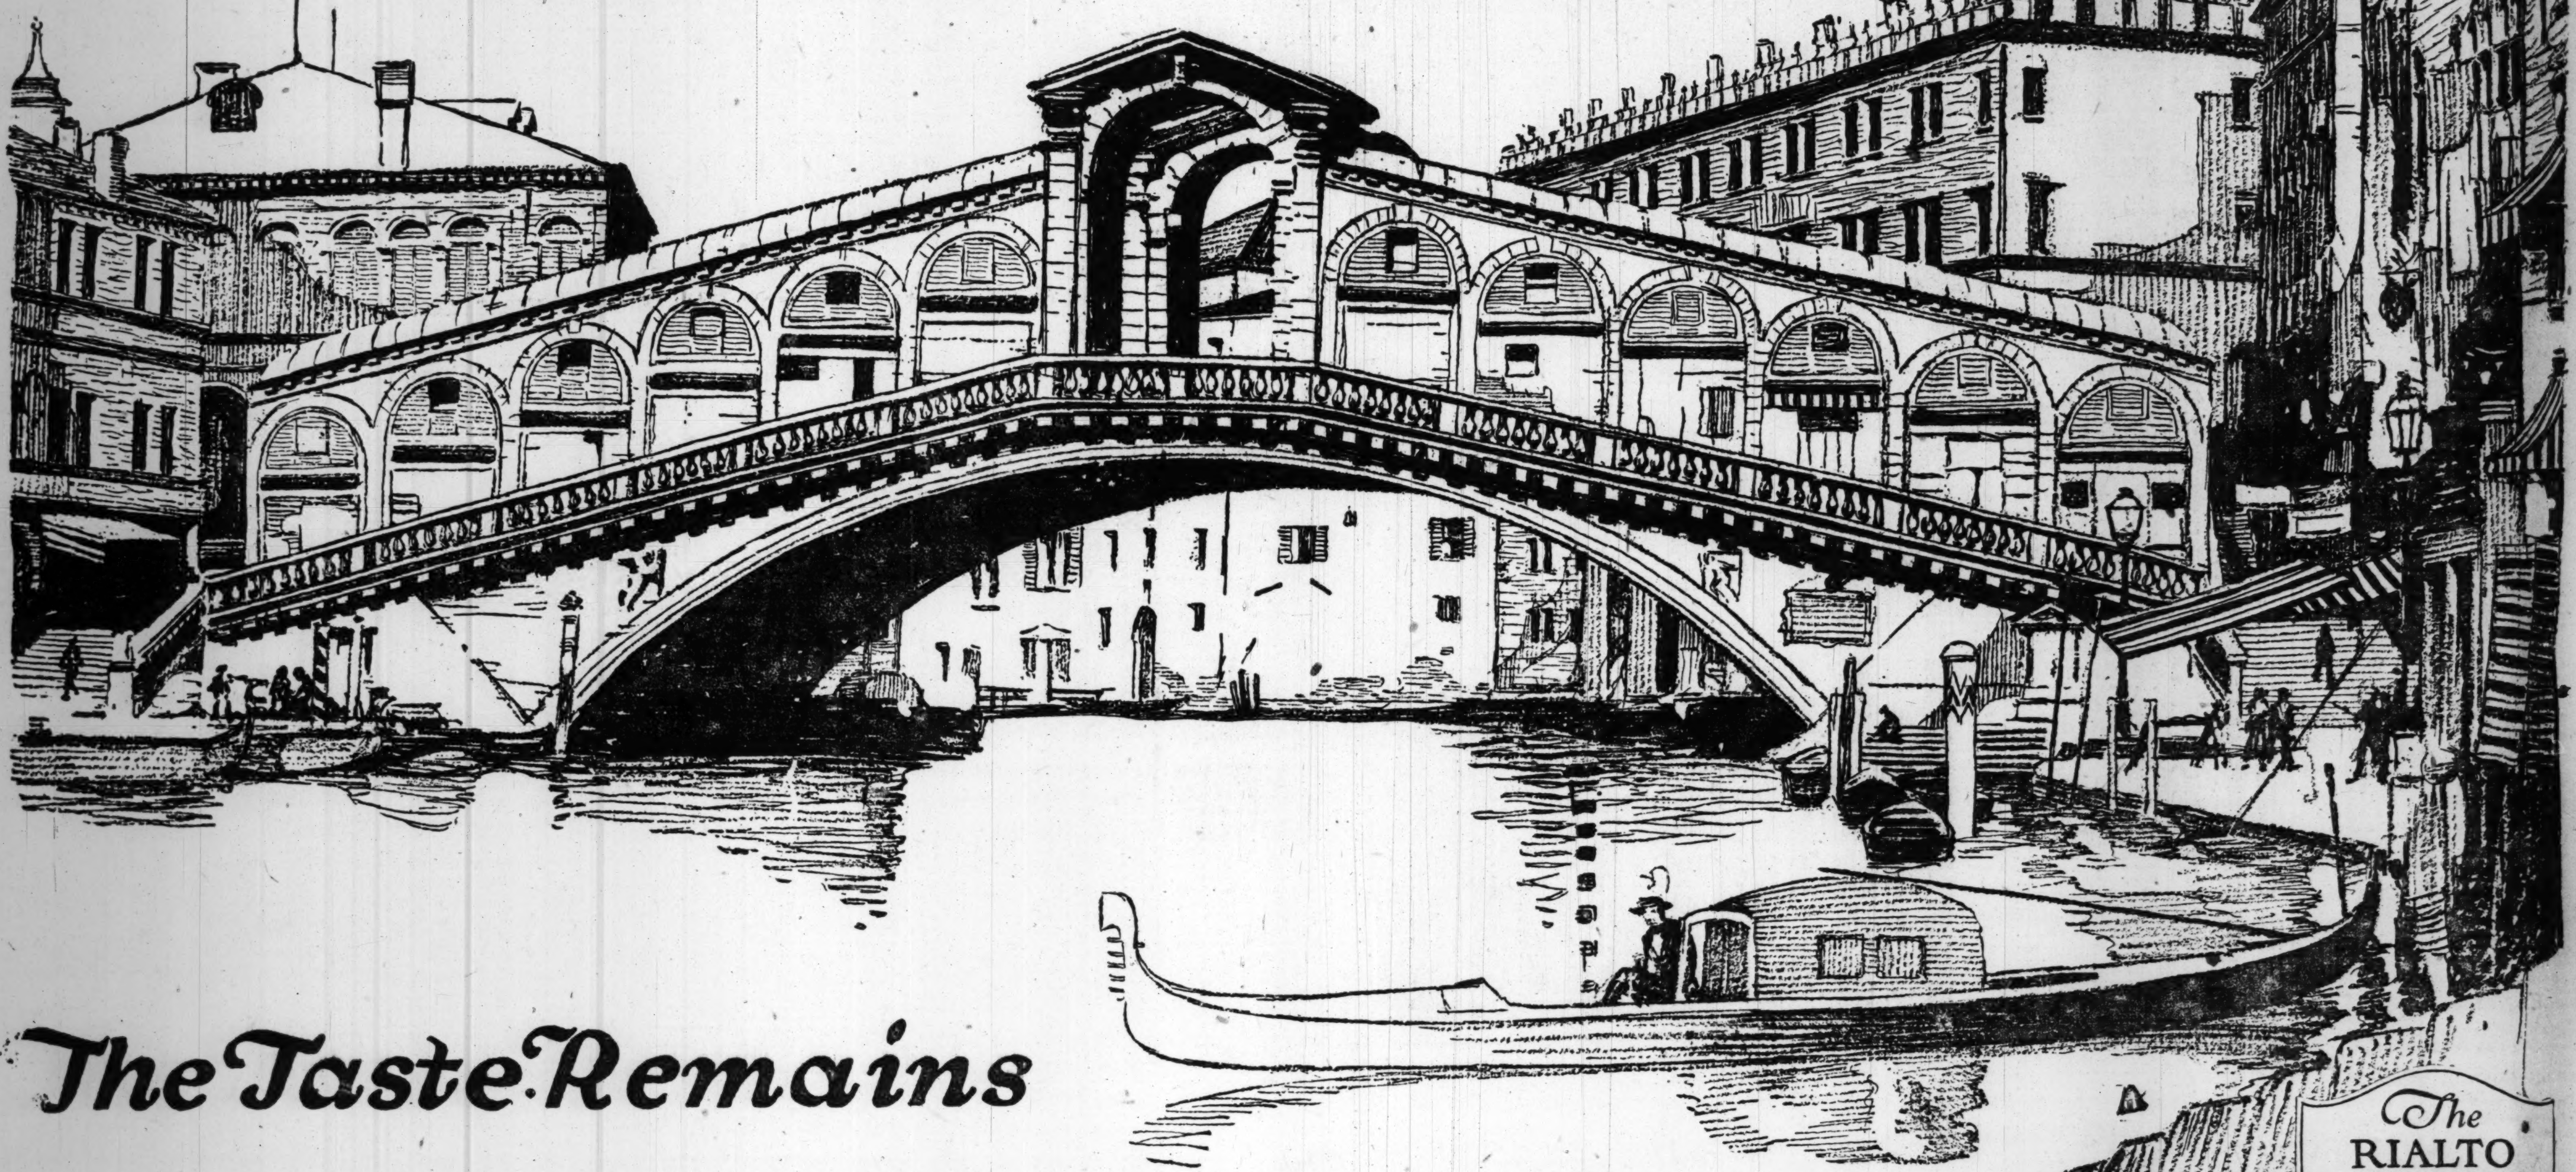
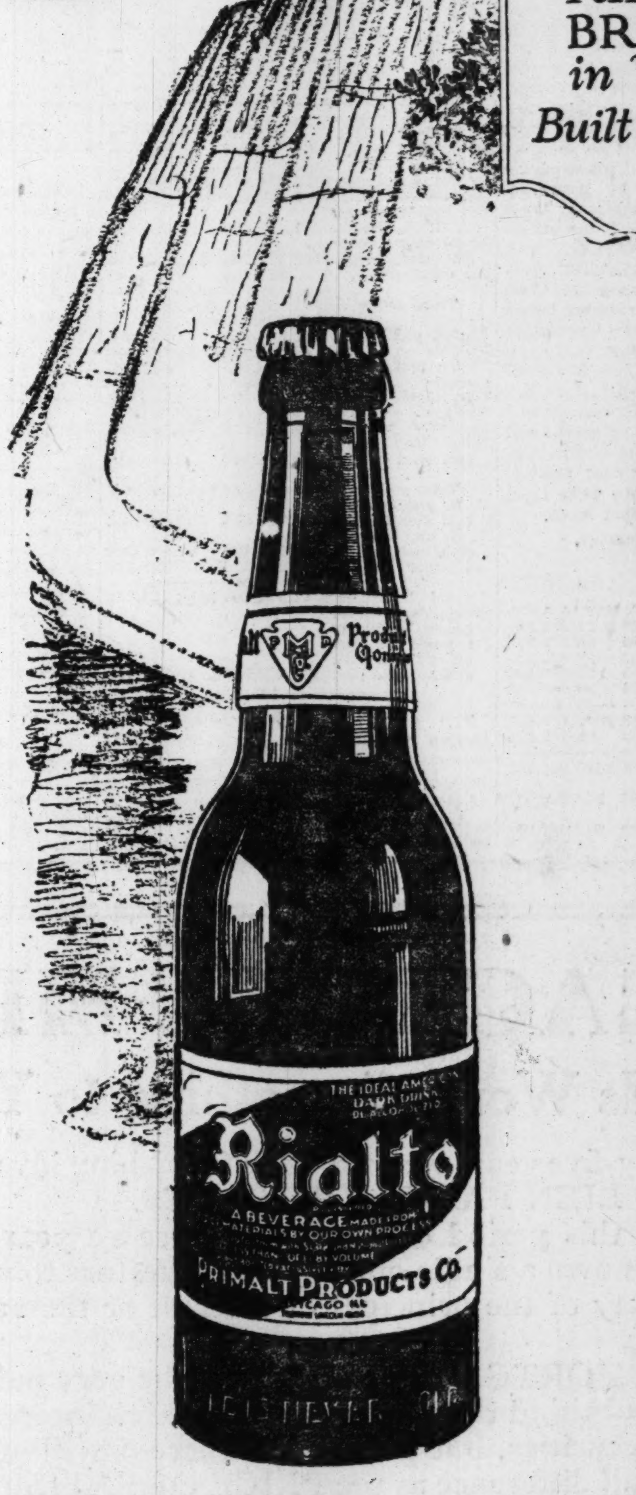
Prima and Rialto

(LIGHT) (DARK)

DE-ALCOHOLIZED OLD BREWS



The Taste Remains



The RIALTO BRIDGE in Venice Built in 1588

PRIMA (light) and Rialto (dark) are genuine malt brews, made and aged according to the old established brewing process. After full fermentation has taken place and the aging process completed, the excess alcohol is extracted by a patented method. All the health values and all the original flavor, which have for years made these two brews first favorites, remain unchanged.

Prima—is the light beverage, the same in appearance, in its satisfying taste, and pleasing characteristics that it has always been.

The thirst-quenching, refreshing "tang," the old familiar bead which is the evidence of proper brewing, and the old satisfaction which you have always experienced in drinking Prima are maintained.

Rialto—is the dark beverage—heavier in body for those who have preferred the darker brews in the past.

In its preparation, as in the preparation of Prima, only the choicest malts and hops are used.

Full fermentation maintains the original properties without which no malt brew can be acceptable.

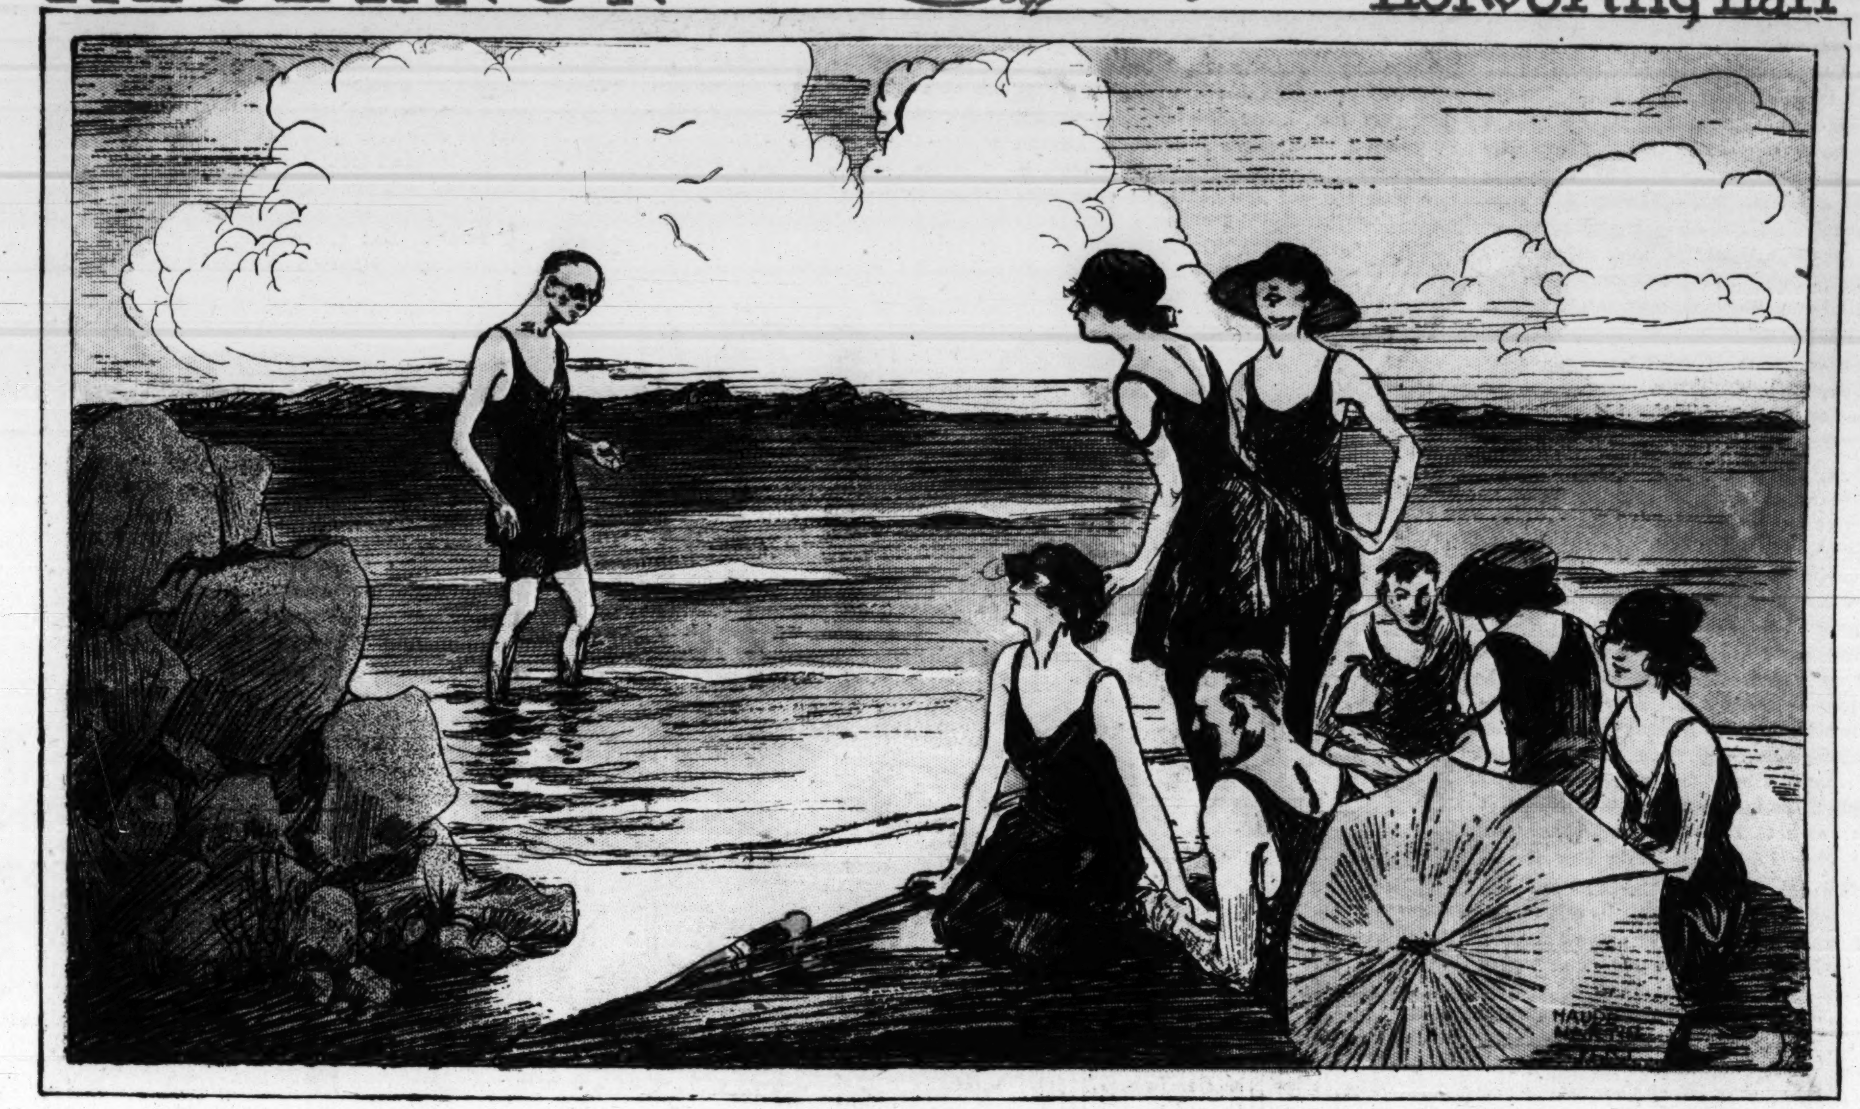
ALGERNON

by

Holworthy Hall



"The little girl with the red cap was calling me 'Algernon.' I hope the next time she goes off that float she dives head first into a jellyfish!"

A Perplexing, Though Moral, Tale of Midsummer Madness, an Archaeologist, and a Kiss

IT was in June that Algernon and I went down together to the little river and somehow got ourselves, without the aid of a shoe horn, into the cottage his great-aunt had left him two years ago. Apart from its size it was rather a decent little cottage, low and gray and hip roofed, with trim lines, like a catboat, and a big lawn, and a healthy trumpet vine over the veranda. The only jarring note was a painted sign over the front door, Bide-a-Wee. Algernon ripped this down at once, but because he was a conscientious man and remembered that his great-aunt had been a sweet, banal old lady who liked to have everything labeled, he presently put up a fresh name plate, somewhat more original and certainly more descriptive. It was The Vacuum. You created one every time you drew a long breath indoors.

The river was practically in our front yard. First, however, there was a macadam highway (known locally as the Stun Rud), and then there was a strip of grass with no gardener to love it; a crumbling bulkhead, a thin slice of beach, and tidewater. Diagonally opposite us, at the river's mouth, arose a crenelated ridge of yellow sand dunes, and beyond that, and to the right of it, rested the sea and the sunsets. On pleasant days the sand dunes stood out as clear and sharp and American as you please; but when there were clouds overhead and the river turned silver white, with here and there a splash of monotone like the tint of old weathered shingles, then the perspective was for all the world like an old Japanese print, with Fujiyama (considerably out of drawing) in the background. That was the way Algernon first saw it and he never forgot it. Neither did I.

He was my friend, faithful and just unto me, and I therefore hasten to correct the impression that "Algernon" was any part of his true name. He was Henry Banks Spurrier, archæologist. He knew more about the Aztecs than the Aztecs ever knew themselves or cared; and he was never so happy as when he was unearthing some family skeleton of an ancient people or prying into the domestic difficulties of a tribe which perished long before Ptolemy put on his first short trousers. He was tall and lean and dry and studious—a bit of a fatalist—the type of man who's apparently predestined to go through life without a nickname, and to derive a great deal of happiness out of chess and the Edinburgh Review. In his manner of dress he was late Victorian except for his cravats, which were almost prehistoric; but he had a sense of humor and a startlingly modern vocabulary, so that it was easy to forgive him for being intelligent.

The trademark of Algernon was hung upon him by a girl he had never met. He came up from the beach one morning looking rather sickly; passed me without saying a word (I had just come in from the postoffice, too) and went into his own room and closed the door. The water was still pretty cold and I had already warned him against staying in too long, so that my intuition was prompt and incorrect. I went after him to administer aspirin, and found him dripping generously on the floor while he stared at himself in a crinkly antique mirror.

"Dammit!" he said reflectively, as I halted in the doorway. "When you come right down to it I haven't got any chin to speak of, now, have I?"

"Chin!" I said. "Chin! Well, who was speaking of it? I wasn't."

He put on his glasses—they were uncommonly large and had tortoise shell rims—and smoothed back his none too luxuriant hair. Not even his mother could have called him handsome, and I was only a friend.

"But I wasn't brought up near the water!" he said protestingly. "I know I look like a fool in it. Or out of it, too, for that matter. But I can't feel it's my fault exactly. Hanged if I can."

I went over to see if he had any symptoms of fever.

"What in thunder are you driving at?"

He turned around and laughed, very suddenly. It wasn't his usual laugh at all. There were several different ingredients in it, and none of them was attractive. I couldn't imagine what had got into the man.

"Know the girls up in the big house?" I nodded; I had surveyed that joyous house party from a distance and envied youth its buoyancy. My friend went on: "They were all down on their float. Coupe of he-flappers with 'em, too. Been there half the morning. When I went down to look at the water somebody giggled. Then they all roared. Then when I went down again in my bathing suit and hopped in where the kids go they all roared again. Then I got the point. The little girl with the red cap was calling me 'Algernon.'"

"Well?"

His expression of injury had deepened.

"Don't say you haven't heard the story! About the chap who was brought up like a sissy—and how shocked he was on his twenty-first birthday when a girl told him there isn't any Santa Claus? I never saw anything so blamed funny about that story anyway. Only if you've heard it you remember how it describes Algernon——"

"Hm, yes!" I said. "I do seem to remember it. What of it? Sticks and stones 'll break my bones, but——"

"I thought she had manners," he said. "And I'm not particularly pleased to go out there and be a target for merry little quips like that, and I don't care a darn who knows it."

"The one in the red bathing cap? That must be the nice plump one, with the gray eyes."

He regarded me venomously "They aren't gray," he said, "they're green. And she isn't plump; she's fat."

Now, during an acquaintanceship of many years, I had never known him to notice a woman, to care for a woman's opinion, or even to honor the sex by so much as a slurring comment. He wasn't actively a woman hater, for this implies both notice and dread; he was a woman ignorer. As soon expect St. Anthony to become, in a lightning flash, susceptible and 17. I couldn't credit my ears.

"Look here, Henry——"

"I won't look anywhere! Wonder if that old fool of a housekeeper has carted off all the bath towels."

"Why, Henry, you're mad!"

At that he whirled on me.

"Of course I'm mad. She called me Algernon. And, by gosh, I hope the next time she goes off that float she dives head first into a jellyfish! I'd like to anchor one out there myself."

It was hard for me to realize that my old friend was speaking. As far as I knew he had never been the least sensitive about his appearance or his failure of the social accomplishments; indeed, he had often prided himself upon his permanent indifference toward the public.

"Henry," I said, "there's been a mystery committed around here. You wouldn't stir yourself up like this if there weren't a better reason for it than any you've given yet. What's the answer—another ideal shattered? Smitten from afar and all that sort of rot?"

Abruptly and most unexpectedly he put on a coat of bright crimson, which wasn't awfully becoming.

"Don't be an idiot!"

"Careful, there! You'll burn yourself. So it's an affinity, is it? I didn't know your astigmatism would let you see that far."

"No," he said scornfully, "I don't suppose you did. And you didn't know I'm a human being either."

"But, Henry," I said, to try the effect of a douche of cold humor, "you're married!"

"I may be married," he said sulkily, "but I'm damned if I'm blind. I guess I can look at her if I want to, can't I?"

I saw that it was no time to badger him. Even an archæologist is entitled to his visionings, and the little girl with the gray eyes had long since given me an impersonal smile. I admired my friend's taste, even while I marveled at its existence.

"Yes," I said, "you can look at her all you want to. It might interest you to know that I just met mother and father up at the post-

Mavis Face Powder and Compacts

THERE is a difference between Mavis and ordinary powders. Mavis Face Powder is not artificially "heavy" to make it stay on. It is light and pure—soft as the petal of a flower. It cannot injure the skin as some "heavy" powders do, and yet it stays on better.

MILLIONS of women prefer Mavis, because the difference in powders shows in their complexions.

DO NOT be misled by extravagant claims of inferior products. The name of Vivaudou is a guide to quality.

office, not more than twenty minutes ago. They're very nice. They know who you are, too, and we're invited to call."

His change of expression was remarkable. Then it changed back.

"No, thanks. Leave me out of it."

"But why should I?"

He elevated his chin, caught a glimpse of it in the mirror, and jerked his head down.

"After that? Hardly. I'm not in the habit of having cheap witticisms fired at me—not if I can help it. Enough is enough, and too much is plenty."

"Nonsense. They're young folks, Henry. They don't mean anything. Weren't you ever young yourself?" I was sorry for this as soon as I had said it; it was sure to hurt him.

"No," he said shortly. "I wasn't. That's what makes me so infernally jealous when I see 'em cavorting around there. That's why it isn't so very humorous to have 'em pin that thing on me. It's so mighty near true. 'Algernon!'"

"O, give it a drink!" I said. "Don't act like that, Henry. I said we'd drop in on 'em this afternoon. Come on over and be reasonable. I'm going."

"Go ahead, then. I won't."

And he didn't. But I did; and Algernon was offended because I said I had a good time.

The girl with the gray eyes was one of those immortal paradoxes which keep the world from going stale with ennui. She was wonderfully vivid and alert, with a captivating sort of blunt boyishness; and yet she seemed always to be living behind a tenuous veiling of reserve—to be guarding, with a reticence so delicate that sometimes you began to doubt its very existence, the thoughts she really had. It wasn't shyness, it wasn't affectation, it wasn't even the old fashioned measure of demureness—I didn't know what it was—I discovered later that it was simply an innate horror of sentimentality—at any rate, I made a mental note of it for use when I described her to Algernon.

In his anger he had lied like a pirate when he said that she was fat. Not to dwell upon it, she was what I should call delectable; she had the pretty curves which mean health and abounding vigor and cheer the soul of any man who hates to dance with a lath. She wasn't exactly beautiful, but she was adorable. Chance had denied her the meaningless features of an out and out beauty and given her instead a personality and a magnetism which took your breath away. The wind could blow her hair six ways for Sunday with only the effect of making her more adorable yet—and this is a test not meant to be despised. Her disposition was as happy as the sea when the sunshine and a single reef breeze play on its surface. Her voice was a trifle throaty—it made you look at her mouth, and after that you forgot what she was saying. That she was the sort of a girl I should fall in love with was axiomatic. But that Algernon should do it was staggering.

I went back to Algernon and found him writing a laborious letter to his wife. Mrs. Spurrier was spending the month with her parents; Algernon didn't like them, and that made it unanimous. That was also what had made it possible for us to have this brief vacation together.

"You missed it," I said. "She's a corker."

Algernon made a terrible grimace, but didn't look up.

"She's a brat," he said quite firmly. "An unmannerly little brat."

"Some day," I told him, "you'll lose your head and talk sense. They all want us to swim with them tomorrow morning."

This time he looked up with a vengeance.

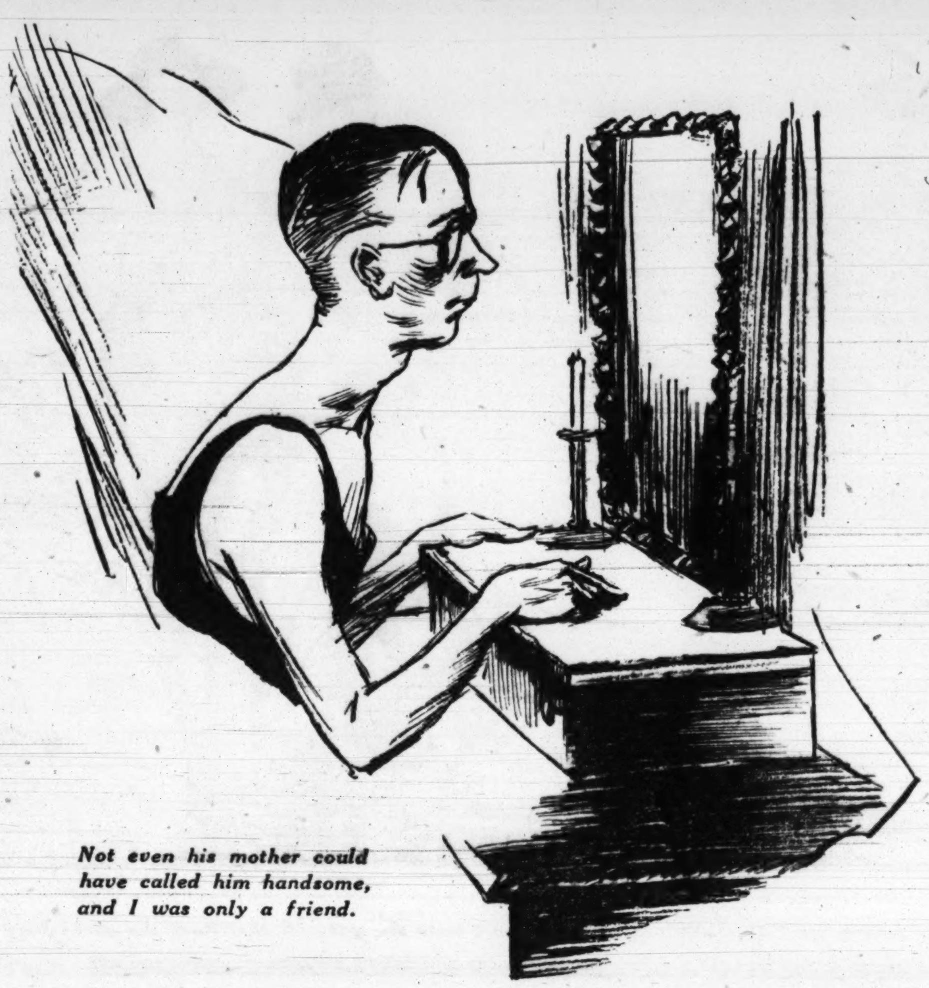
"Fat chance!" he said. "Me? Paddle around up to my ankles with a lot of young otters snickering at me? I can see myself! What's she like?"

So I told him and he listened very attentively and didn't interrupt. But I observed that he added only another line or two to his letter before he folded it up and went out to walk.

It's high time for a word or two about Mrs. Spurrier; not for her own sake, but for Algernon's. She was five years older than he was, dryer, thinner, and colder, and wore larger spectacles. She, too, was an archæologist and one of distinction, and she rued the day on which she had been born a woman.

The story of their marriage might have been romantic, but it wasn't. Algernon had once been booked for a prolonged expedition into South America, and she was already an expert in that field and nobody else was available. He had to take her with him, and they were both ultraconservatives. So he married her, and he would rather cut off his right hand than to admit it was a ghastly mistake.

Algernon's wife ought to have been a mother to him and not a walking museum of antiquities. As a matter of fact, she didn't care two cents for him as a husband; she wasn't interested in husbands. He was a permanent endowment fund, and that was about all. She had insisted on leaving the "obey" out of the wedding service; and she must have had her fingers crossed when she said "love." It wasn't in her, and they both knew it. It had simply been a marriage of convenience, and now neither of them knew exactly how to let go.



Not even his mother could have called him handsome, and I was only a friend.

Knowing Mrs. Spurrier as well as I did, it was easy for me to concede that Algernon owed very little adulation to her memory. Knowing Algernon as I did, it was almost impossible to believe that his emotions were lively enough to hold warmth anyway. Yet here was circumstantial evidence as old as time. No man could develop such painful resentment, such unfair resentment, against a girl unless he were on the verge of being in love with her; yet how could Algernon have got that far when he had merely seen her once or twice at long range? It occurred to me, after some thought, that perhaps his profession shortened distances for him. Anybody who can feel chummy with the Chaldeans may, after all, be quite capable of stirring up a passion through a telescope.

Needless to say, he did meet her; but it wasn't on the float. I don't know how it happened, but when I came back from the tennis courts the following afternoon (which was cloudy) I found them standing on our bulkhead and looking across at the sand dunes. Algernon was explaining the theory of Japanese art to her, and out in the mid-channel the minnows were leaping madly from schools of invisible, pursuing mackerel.

"Anybody want to go mackerel fishing?" I asked.

Shirley shook her head, and then Algernon, very much on the trigger, shook his.

"Well, I'm going," I said. "And I'll bet money I bring home a dozen."

"Question of skill," said Algernon. "I won't bet."

Shirley was puzzled. "What on earth does he mean?"

"Why," I said, "you might not guess it, but Mr. Spurrier's one of the prize gamblers of the universe, and the luckiest. Only, he's got two theories; he won't bet on anything that isn't pure chance, and he won't bet on anything but an even chance. There's 1 per cent of skill in mackerel fishing, so he won't play."

"O!" She smiled at Algernon. "Thank you ever so much for the lecture, Mr. Spurrier. I understood some of it—really." And then she was gone. That was the way she did things. Here one minute, gone the next; like a mischievous dryad on tiptoe. I understood her, but Algernon's face was a study. He thought he had been marooned for cause.

"Humph!" he said. We went a few steps toward the cottage. "Might as well go mackereling now," he grudged. "Tide's pretty low, though."

"It isn't below the second rock on the beach," I objected.

"For ten dollars?" he suggested subtly. We peeped over the bulkhead, and Algernon won by an inch.

The fish bit fairly well, but Algernon was lacking in enthusiasm and strong on silence. After a twenty minute hiatus he burst into confession.

"There are two things in this world that I hate like poison," he said, "and one of 'em's to bore people."

"What's the other?"

Algernon snorted. "The other's simply to be me. She wants us to come over some evening and dance. They've got a phonograph." He laughed raucously. "Dance! Wouldn't I look too sweet for anything? The last time I danced was in Borneo. And it wasn't voluntary, either."

"I can dance, though," I said.

"That's all right. What about me?"

"Sit out," I said.

Algernon lifted his head sharply, as though it were a brand new conception. "That's different," he said. "That's different."

. . . .

In the course of time—and this was after a picnic or two, and a supper, and two phonographic dances, and a ride to Oxford to the movies—Shirley approached me on a quest for information. I was sitting under the shade of the sheltering trumpet vine when she materialized as lightly and unexpectedly as a humming bird. At one instant I was alone; in the next she was sitting there on the lawn beside me, smiling with mouth and eyes, and enjoying my astonishment. That was all right; I could get a thousand times more enjoyment from looking at her than she could ever get from looking at me.

Of course I didn't suspect then that she had come for information; as a matter of fact, I didn't suspect it until long afterward. But somehow I found myself talking about Algernon. And instinctively (I can't imagine for whose account it was) I blurted out treachery.

"You know he's married, don't you?"

"Most nice men are," said Shirley. She had a habit of raising her eyebrows as she talked; it kept one's attention from wandering.

"Well," I said, "he's had a most extraordinary life. He was a professor when he was born. His parents had it all figured out that anything he wanted to do was wrong. He wasn't allowed to learn to swim for fear he might get drowned; and he mustn't play rough games because he might break his neck; and he couldn't have anything to do with girls because they might interfere with his studies—O, he had a peach of a time! He doesn't do anything that anybody else does, and he loves poetry. He's Algernon to the dot, isn't he?"

Shirley never did anything by halves. Her blush actually ran down her throat.

"You don't—why, what are you saying?"

"Stop bluffing!" I said. "You're right—he's an Algernon, and you know it, and I know it, and he knows it. Between you and me, that's bitten him pretty hard. But call him by it to his face, and he'll love it. You can do that man a tremendous amount of good if you want to. He never had any home, and he never had any fun, and he never had any playmates. He never had any youth, either, but he's getting just the least faint reminder of it now. You know he's crazy about you, don't you?"

Shirley said nothing, but her eyes widened and she looked down.

"You're putting rose color on a drab wall," I said. "And I hope you aren't too much bored."

She gave me an instantaneous glance under her eyebrows. "It's funny how a man like Alger—like Mr. Spurrier could ever take to gambling, isn't it? Or were you just joking?"

"No, I wasn't. And it isn't funny at all; not when you think it over. He took to it in college. You see, he never drank, and he never smoked, and he always worked like a dog, and day and night he found a curious sort of relaxation in gambling. He wouldn't play poker, but he was great on almost anything else—as long as there wasn't any question of skill and it was always an even chance. He got so crazy about it that he used to make really important decisions by tossing up a coin—'Well,' he'd say, 'it's an even chance, isn't it?' It's the only stimulant he ever had. And he's the luckiest man alive. He can't lose. Luck just simply barks his heels. It's uncanny."

"O, he must lose sometimes."

"Surely. But the bigger the stake the luckier he is. Honestly, you can't beat him. It can't be done."

"He must have a good deal of money," she said.

"No, he hasn't."

She shifted the subject then, but it was plain enough already that Algernon had begun to amuse her, and that his one amazing weakness was interesting, first, for its very nature, and, second, because it pointed to such a curious inconsistency. And to a girl of her age he must indeed have been a curiosity. The world would have called him still a young man, and he was surely destined to be rather more than a mere celebrity; he was incased in a thick veneer of misplaced dignity, and he was acting now like a lion broken loose from a menagerie. He had all freedom before him, but he didn't see how to make use of it. The lion, suddenly released, wanted to frolic like a cub in the open, and didn't know how.

No one had ever taught him to conceal his feelings. There were half a dozen other girls in the set, but I doubt if he could tell them apart. He lived for Shirley. He used to sit ten feet distant from her, and even at that disadvantage visually embrace her in public. He followed her relentlessly, and clumsily, and unashamed. It was funny, but it was also pathetic, to see her dance away from him, and to see him, lately so confident of her presence, turn a dead stare of utter helplessness upon the neighborhood.

In conversation she was no less elusive; she had poor Algernon, who could talk archæology in five languages, stumped in his mother speech for the proper answer to the simplest question. He realized that his repartee was elephantine, and it galled him; he used to come home and curse at the mirror for what it showed him of stupidity, and more than once he swore that he should never see her again. These resolutions lasted sometimes for as long as half an hour, and then he would abruptly begin to talk about her to me.

"I like those clothes she wears," he said. "What are they—calico?"

"I think it's gingham," I said. "If you mean the one she had on today, especially."

"Well, it looks sort of unsophisticated," said Algernon, "and that's what I like."

Incidentally, Mrs. Spurrier dressed like a Belgian refugee.

It was about this time that conscience began to sit on Algernon's soul; and it was inevitable that sooner or later he should talk to me about that, too. Perhaps it was equally inevitable that his mood should be ferocious.

"I suppose you think I'm a skunk," he blurted. "If you do, say so. Get it over with."

"No," I said, "I don't think you're a skunk at all."

"Well—what?"

It was harder to pick an expression than I had imagined. "I think you're out of luck," I said.

"How do you mean—out of luck?"

It was harder to explain than it had been to choose the original expression.

"It seems to me," I said, "that every man's entitled to a certain amount of youth. Some people get robbed of it—the way you were yourself—and there isn't any burglary insurance that'll cover it. And I can't say that there's anything very culpable in your being fascinated by youth when you see it. Everybody is. I am myself."

He looked at me sidewise. "Do you really believe that?"

"There's only one emotion that'll keep a man young—or make him young," I said, "and as long as you behave yourself, I don't see that it's anybody else's business what you do, or what you think."

"Not even—hers?"

"Whose—Shirley's?"

"No!"

"O!" I said. "Why—in the long run, I think you're justified in liking anybody you

By Katherine Newlin Burt

"O, not yet!" Mrs. Beaufort begged.

"She's been here only a few weeks," protested Winifred wistfully.

Alice swung the battery of her blue eyes upon her sister.

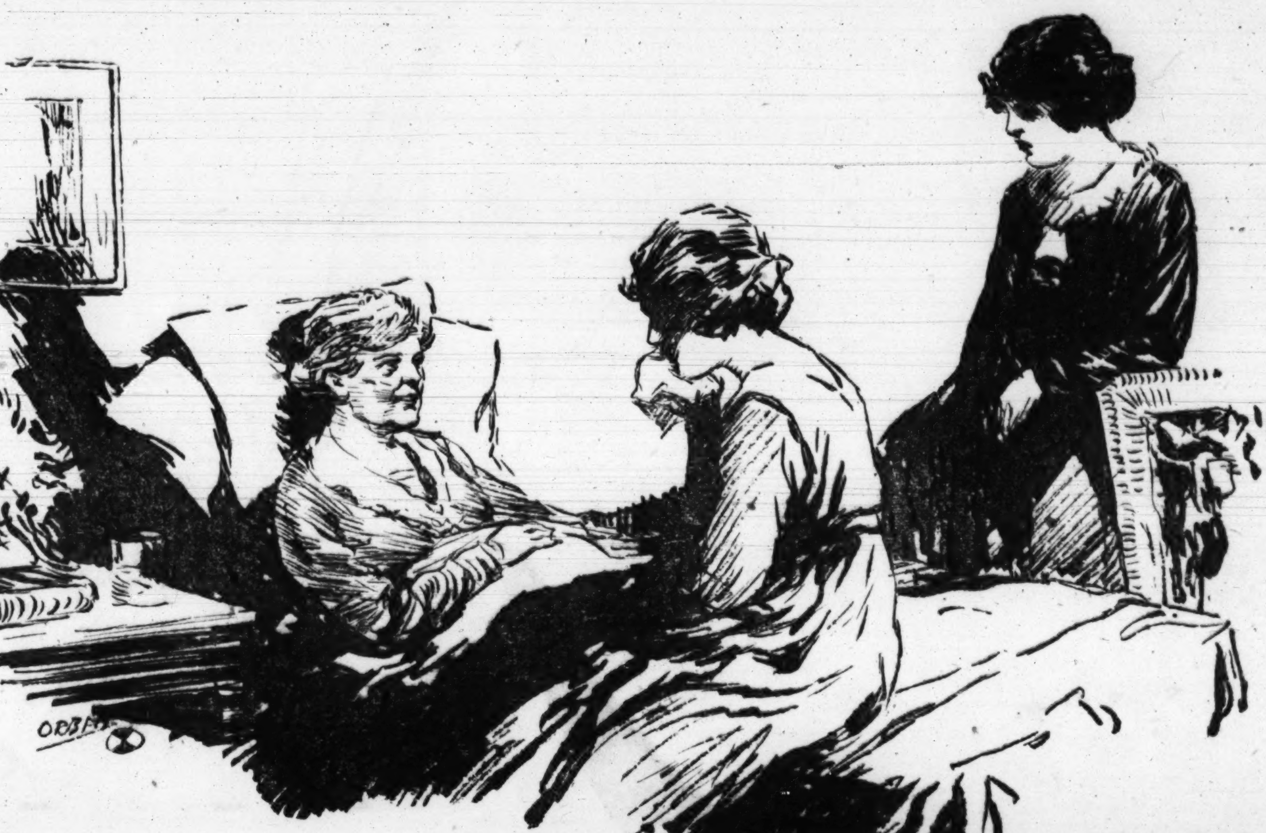
"You are a goose about Merrial," said she wrathfully. "You and madre are spoiling her, and any one can see that she's been spoiled to death already by her precious 'dad.' For my part, I wish we could hand her over to Aunt Jane for the rest of the summer. That might stir her up a bit. I'd like to see her 'rattled.' She's never confused, nor embarrassed, nor shy. She's always such a cool, self-possessed little piece! Aunt Jane might——"

"Come, Ally, you've spoken your mind with truly American freedom for the last half hour," smiled Mrs. Beaufort, with rebuke in her smile. "Suppose you try the republican remedy of self-government. If it weren't such a pelting day, I should advise a walk after lunch. Winifred looks like a ghost, and I know five or six miles of hard tramping would convert you to a semi-indulgent cousin."

And she slipped a hand into one of the tall girl's hanging ones, and led the way downstairs.

Alice struggled for a smile.

"No; it wouldn't," she said, bluntly, at last, and wheeled to the window, where the blur of rain across the gay garden painted for her a Turner canvas.



"Well, madre, you are going to forgive her, of course; you always do. But I can't—I simply can't."

Just as luncheon was announced, and every one was wondering what had become of Merrial, they heard the honking of Dr. Unwin's automobile.

From it for an instant shone the wet and rosy face of the young doctor, who smiled to a descending somebody. Alice, in no mood for sociability, started to flee from the room just in time to greet Merrial's entrance by the door. She stood on the threshold like a laughing, rain drenched fairy, raindrops shining on her uncovered curly head, and even on her eyelashes, her small, white face glistening with rain. Little rivulets trilled from her mackintosh, and her shoes gave forth the sound of a trodden swamp.

"Merrial! You are soaked!" cried Mrs. Beaufort, while Winifred fell upon her mackintosh.

"Aren't I?" laughed Merrial, with reckless disregard of grammar. "But I've had a scrumptious time. Dr. Unwin picked me up half way home. At least, I picked him up. His face, plumping out above the rubber thing, looked more like a nice American sun than anything I've seen in England. And he brought up the box for me, too—bless him! He's taken it in to Hubert's room."

"But, Merrial, dear," said Mrs. Beaufort, "we didn't see you go out. Where have you been?"

Merrial, who had stepped out of her damp shoes, stooped to pick up the small, wet things. When her face reappeared, it was flushed, and her eyes dared criticism.

"I have been," said she slowly, "to see Aunt Jane."

There was a little silence, during which Merrial's eyes flew from one to the other of the astonished faces. On Mrs. Beaufort's they rested last with a shrinking little prayer in their courage. They seemed almost pitifully to beg time, to deprecate a hasty judgment.

"I am very glad you went without waiting for the girls," said Mrs. Beaufort rather gravely.

"Did you enjoy it?" demanded Alice, speaking for the first time, and with considerable grimness.

Merrial's pupils suddenly dilated, her face flushed from chin to brow. "It was terrible," she said softly. "I—I have never seen anything like it!"

"Like what?" demanded Winifred, in a puzzled tone, while Alice stared.

"Such an ugly little house; such old, uncomfortable things. And, Aunt Margaret"—Merrial put an impulsive hand on Mrs. Beaufort's arm—"O-O! Aunt Margaret, how alone she is—how desolately alone! And how proud; and how pi-ti-ful-ly poor! Why"—with an awed drop of tone—"she does all her own work, every bit, and there isn't a rocking chair in the house, and—and—" Here Merrial's eyes spelled tragedy. "And she hasn't even a porcelain tub—not one!"

For an instant her English audience wrestled with their mirth, then it burst forth. Winifred buried her face in the nearest sofa cushion, Alice dropped into a chair, and Mrs. Beaufort herself could not altogether restrain her soft, apologetic mirth.

"Is all that so very terrible, dear?" she asked. "Would life be unendurable to you without a rocking chair or a porcelain tub?"

Merrial drew herself away, and gave them all a bewildered, reproachful look that promised laughter as soon as inner conviction should permit.

"O! not to me, perhaps, Aunt Margaret. But I enjoy roughing it. Aunt Jane is pretty old now, and—O, dear!—I do think she'd be happier with rocking chairs and things."

"Did—did she offer you quince preserve?" gasped Winifred, coming up from her cushion like a "nice American sun."

But the mention of quince preserve, though it calmed Merrial's excitement, did not lighten her mood. Rather, she grew sober and abstracted.

"Yes," said she gravely. "I ate great heaps of it."

Winifred's face went down in the sofa cushion again.

"I never tasted anything at all like it before," continued Merrial, with her big eyes fixed reminiscently on a point in space. "It is unique. Aunt Margaret," coming back to the present, "will you be hurt or angry if—if I go away for a little?"

Alice lifted her eyebrows. But Winifred cried out a protest, and Mrs. Beaufort flushed.

"Go away?" she repeated sensitively. "You want to go away?"

"I don't want to!" cried Merrial, putting both arms around her aunt. "But I think I must. Not very far away."

"How far?"

"Only about five miles and a half. I want to go to Aunt Jane. I want to pay her a long visit."

"Did she ask you?"

Merrial shook her head.

"No-o," she reluctantly admitted. She didn't. I'm going to be a surprise party. Maybe she won't like it just at first. But she can't very well turn me out, and—in the end, she won't be sorry. She needs me. And—I've a notion."

"What's your notion?" asked Winifred a few minutes later, following Merrial up the stairs.

Merrial stopped, and looked down with a renewal of her abstracted gaze.

"I shan't tell any one just yet," she said, with provoking firmness. "But later, maybe. I've got to change now. And then, after lunch, we must open the box."

"O, rather! The box! I'd forgotten the box. What's in it?"

"The things for Hubert that I cabled to Tripp for, after I came."

Hubert's delight over the mere outside of the packing case that had been sent all the way from America on his account was unbounded; and neither man, woman, nor child could have withstood the excitement of Merrial as, one by one, she affectionately drew forth from the box the remarkable objects it concealed.

"Tripp must have thought me quite insane. He says in his letter: 'Mine not to make reply, mine not to reason why!' But he's not forgotten one single thing, I do believe."

In fact, from the old sombrero with its bullethole to the lariat and saddle, the cowboy outfit of Tripp's own younger youth spread itself complete before Hubert's illuminated eyes; and when thereto were added an Indian jar, a Navajo blanket, gorgeous with zigzag stripes, and a group of strange, hand painted animals of clay, the boy was past a word of gratitude.

"I thought," she whispered to her aunt, "that he might like to start a collection. You don't mind, do you? The litter and all? You see, it's not like trash. The Indian things are real. Tripp and I knew the Indians that made some of them."

In the midst of the excitement Alice stole away. Her mind had become a stage for conflict. She got into her mackintosh and went out. It was a relief to escape from Merrial's enthusiasm and Hubert's joy.

Alice walked with bent head against the rain. Of all things most distressing to her single-mindedness was this confusion of feeling. Hitherto the world of her acquaintance had divided itself readily into three sorts of people: those she loved, those she loathed, and those for whom she didn't "care a rap." As regards Merrial, at once Alice had given up all idea of indifference. One couldn't be indifferent to Merrial. She was too "pronounced." She was simply the most maddening mortal in the universe. Alice longed for an unbiased comrade with whom she might discuss this perplexity of taste and distaste.

Her mind reverted to Dick Houlton. He, now, would be able to understand. To be sure, he couldn't endure Americans, but that did not count against him with Alice. It did not even seem to destroy his claim to the post of an unbiased comrade. Mr. Houlton had been always so sympathetic. He had never found her too blunt, too honest. Some men were so absurdly sensitive. Alice remembered dance partners that had found her persistent snubbing painful. But Mr. Houlton! Well, after all, perhaps she had been more gentle with him, more womanly. He had made her feel more like a woman, with his quiet deference, his whole hearted attention to her speeches. He had never laughed nor sneered. He had respected her opinions. He had even believed in woman's suffrage, had spoken of the good things which he heard had come in progressive countries by the zeal of its women voters.

"And if the woman of the new countries, such as America and Australia, with her slighter mentality, her more nervous and erratic organism, can do so much, what may not be done by the Englishwoman—such an Englishwoman as yourself, Miss Beaufort?"

Alice flushed at the memory of the adjectives that had followed. They were such as to please her honesty—not flattering where she knew herself weak, but truly praising where praise was justly due. Praise of such kind is certainly the strongest of character creators. When she saw herself as Mr. Houlton must have seen her—strong and true and unselfish—Alice winced at her own unqualified strictures upon Merrial.

It was only human nature to endow the American girl with a "slighter mentality" and an "erratic organism," but, having done so on Dick Houlton's authority, Alice began on her own to bestow more generous attributes. By the time she came back to the house, heart and cheeks were in a glow, and, thanks to exercise and "Mr. Houlton," Merrial, for this time, escaped being called to account for her "torture of madre."

But Merrial's self-satisfaction was more difficult to attain. She wrote a letter that night:

"Dad Dear: I've done what you've always warned me not to do: put too many irons in the fire; and it's a pretty hot one at that, and I'm feeling scorched, if not actually burned. But I'm not going to ask you to pull me out of the fire; I just want you to help me stoke up, for fear one of the irons gets cold before I'm ready to strike it.

"I want you to write to that nice and wonderful Dr. Reval, in Boston, and ask him (as a great favor to you, not to me; don't forget that, or he might misunderstand; you remember he was very nice to my father's daughter). He will do it for you, because you really gave him his start. Let me see—yes, ask him if he isn't coming over to England soon, and say that there's something you want him to do for you, professionally, as a great favor; that you cannot write him all the details, but that I know all about it, and will he write to me and let me know whether he could tear himself away for, say, a couple of weeks, from his hospitals and things, and when. After I've heard from him I'll write him all the details.

"Dad, dear, this is the most important of all the irons I've got in my fire—and I think he's probably the only human being who can hammer it into shape for me. So be a dear, and write him so that he simply cannot refuse. The sooner he can the better, of course—but any time is better than not at all.

"I'm having a lovely time. They are all so sweet and good, and their way of being so is so different, often, from our way, that I have to keep pinching myself and saying: 'No, that's not unkind; it's just the funny, frank, ultra-truthful English way of being kind.' O, it's really wonderful.

"I haven't seen Dick again. But I have been to see Aunt Jane, and you can address letters to me now at Holmbury, care of Miss Jane Coke. I'm going to stay with her for a while.

"Tripp has sent me the most wonderful box of western stuff—all the stuff we used to use on the ranch when we were children. I asked for it for Hubert Beaufort, as he is just crazy about everything to do with cattle punching and life in the west. I found he had a whole shelfful of stories of American life, his favorites, and had never really seen any of the real stuff. He's delighted with it—and Tripp is the best dear old scout to have taken all that trouble for me.

"Good-by, dad, dear; don't overwork—and get after Dr. Reval, pronto, won't you?

happen to like. I think all of us are. And if you want the plainest sort of speaking, old man, my private opinion is that this is the best thing that ever came into your life. You've chirked up like a robin in the springtime. It's a great stimulus, and it can't do anybody any harm."

"I hope," he said, "you give me credit for a little more—feeling than that. Why, if I ever thought—why, you don't suppose I'm bothering about what's good for me, do you?"

"Aren't you?"

He started to be angry, but caught himself and laughed. "I don't give a whoop for your opinion about that, anyway. It isn't youth that's got me; it's—it's—all I want to know is if I'm making a blooming fool of myself."

"You are—and I envy you," I said. "Go to it."

Yes, we were very good friends. In his entire life he had never before enjoyed the services of a confidant, nor had he ever possessed any thoughts, or emotions, which needed one. But during the subsequent week he raved to me as though I had been his sister. There were moments during this week when I went out back of the barn and sat in the sun to smoke and think about beautiful abstract virtues, such as loyalty and duty. It's rather absorbing to speculate on these things, especially when they apply to somebody else. It was absorbing to wonder exactly how much loyalty—or, better, how much deadly conservatism—Algernon owed to a wife with whom he had exchanged a fair amount of mind, the smallest imaginable fraction of heart, if any, and no soul whatsoever. That is, should I have called him disloyal because he had fallen in love with a real person? Or, in other words, discovered life and worshiped it?

Disloyal to whom, or to what? To his wife, or to the community, or to Shirley, or to himself? Take them one by one; his wife didn't care what he did, because she hadn't a normal emotion in her anyhow; society wasn't in danger of being shocked by any antics which poor old Algernon could ever perform; Shirley was frankly diverted, and even if he'd been free she wouldn't have married him on a bet, and Algernon was growing positively radiant under the new influence. He was breaking through his shell; seeing the world with undimmed eyes; learning his first lesson in the bright colors of happiness.

Theoretically, I suppose that a moralist might have called him indiscreet; as a matter of practice, I approved highly of him and stayed back of the barn until he had had plenty of time to dodge around the corner and go to walk with Shirley. He confided in me; he concealed nothing; but it embarrassed him to be seen starting out on his peregrinations.

We had now come into July, and there was less than a fortnight left to us before Mrs. Spurrier was scheduled to arrive and I to depart. I can imagine, vaguely what must have been fermenting in Algernon's brain. He was going through the final period of a regeneration, and at the end of it he was to be condemned to lose its benefits. The door would close, and there would never be any return.

Fifteen years had melted away from his demeanor and from his philosophy. His acute stodginess had vanished and he had taken to borrowing some of my clothes. He had an eager, joyous expression about the eyes which simply doesn't belong to the department of archaeology. There was vigor in his step and a new tone in his voice. No one could possibly have dreamed that in the autumn he planned to begin a new book to be entitled "The Social Structure of the Assyrians."

Fortunately, the last week was already consecrated to community enjoyment, and I was glad of this, because every instant was precious to Algernon. There was to be a picnic on the sand dunes and another on shore, a moonlight motor ride, two dances, and innumerable small frivolities in daylight. I was especially pleased about the picnics. I don't suppose that Shirley's parents would have approved of any independent journeyings with Algernon—not that he was dangerous; simply that as a married man he was technically out of the game—but it is very easy to lose two people out of a large assembly, and on a picnic it's almost impossible not to.

Algernon seized me as we entered the cottage after the first of the week's outings.

"My God!" he said hoarsely. "She called me 'Algernon'—I swear she did!" He was shivering violently. "What do you make out of that?"

"I don't believe I'll wire Mrs. Spurrier to come any sooner," I said.

Algernon clutched at my arm. "Don't you say things like that, whether you mean 'em or not!"

I looked at him as calmly as I could. "She means she likes you a lot. Is it as bad as that, old top?"

"It's worse," said Algernon, and after a second's hesitation he turned and bolted.

. . . .

He was still a joke to all the young folks except Shirley, and I fancied that unless her sympathies had been aroused he would have been a greater joke to her than to any one else. But it takes a woman of superb heartlessness to see anything funny in a man who is sincerely and irrevocably and uselessly in love with her, and I refused to believe that Shirley was heartless. She seemed to me to be thoroughly unsentimental, but that was different. It was a safeguard.

I suppose that a married woman who finds herself adored by a bachelor is equally flattered whether the bachelor is old enough to be her father or young enough to be her son. But an unmarried woman, learning that she appears as an angel to a benedick, must surely entertain a trifle of demoralization mixed in with the flattery. And Algernon's desperation must have been terrifying—not by reason of what he might say to her but because of his inability to disguise his thoughts. And she was such an awfully nice girl. It must have cost her an effort not to obey her instincts and avoid him.

As the week wore on his symptoms became more and more apparent. He went through the invariable routine of youth, from loss of appetite to insomnia. He indulged in little conversation and he could sit on our bulkhead and stare at the sand dunes for half an hour without uttering a syllable.

"Do you honestly think I'm lucky?" he demanded suddenly.

"More so than anybody else I ever knew."

"I always felt," he said, "that when I played for all or nothing I had to win—I just naturally couldn't help it. That is, provided there was an even chance. I've done that five times now and I've always won. I hate a sure thing; I won't put a plugged nickel on a sure thing! it isn't sportsmanlike. But I don't like the short end either. I must be a sort of fatalist. Every time I shoot the whole works, when it means anything vital, I'm positive it's coming out right. Not that I'll win necessarily—I always have, but that's beside the point—but I'm sure it's coming out the way that's the best for me in the long run. That sure is fatalism, isn't it?"

"That's very interesting," I said, "but what's it got to do with anything else?"

"O, nothing," said Algernon. "I was just thinking."

. . . .

Our final picnic was arranged for Saturday evening on the sand dunes. At the last moment there was a rustle of parental objection, because a fleece of clouds was drifting up from the southwest, but as an intermediator I was highly successful. Eleven of us set out in three skiffs and a dory; I rowed Algernon and Shirley in a skiff.

"There's your Japanese print again!" said Shirley, half way over.

They were both in the stern, so that I saw his expression. Of course, he had a perfect right to look at her whenever he chose, but it did strike me as peculiar that the casual mention of a cloudscape should produce the reaction. Then I recalled where he had first met her.

We landed on the dunes; we made camp. And this was none of your hand tailored picnics, with sandwiches in waxed paper and coffee in thermos bottles; it was an honest, coöperative endeavor with a utilitarian fire and slightly more fingers than forks. Algernon was a fire tender and Shirley was an assistant cook and the other nine of us were sheer background as far as they were concerned.

Then we sat around the fire and sang modern songs for a while and gradually became silent. Presently, without the slightest warning, Algernon cleared his throat. "I'll sing you something," he said—and he did. I should hardly claim that his voice was musical, but it had a sort of imperative ring to it, and everybody listened and nobody laughed.

It was one of those heavily cadenced airs that you hear south of the Mediterranean, part melody and part animal, and it was all about the desert, and burning yellow sand, and a low red planet and a high white star. If Algernon had sung anything current it would assuredly have been ludicrous, but this thing was quite in his own line and he got away with it. It sent cold chills up and down your spine and made you wish you'd brought a Winchester along.

About half a minute after he had finished somebody said: "What was that?"

"'Mahomed Akram's Night Watch,'" said Algernon shortly, and with that he got up and stalked out of the circle of firelight and out of the picture.

Conversation rose and fell, and finally an engaged couple decided to take a stroll over the dunes, and then followed a couple which was getting itself engaged as fast as it conveniently could, and by and by no one was left at the fire but Shirley and myself. And we were incommunicative until I had either to say something or yell.

So I preached her a sermon, partly because she needed it but chiefly because I needed it.

"I'm afraid poor old Algernon's come to the end of his rainbow," I said. "Mrs. Spurrier's coming tomorrow. And I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart, while there's time, for being so sweet to him. You've been a darling."

"No, I haven't!" she said.

"There may come a time—or there may have been one already—when you've felt badly about these two or three weeks. Not on your own account, of course, but on his. Because he's cared so much for you. Let me tell you something. You've waked up in him what no one else ever did. You've given him the only spiritual outlet he ever had in his life.

"It's a curious thing about Algy; he's got a great big streak of the wild man in him, but it's been tamped down so hard that nobody'd guess it in a dog's age. He's an archaeologist by the accident of brains. With a normal bringing up he'd have been a man in a million. And you've brought out something in him that's going to count, and count a lot. I'm not extravagant; I mean what I say; it's perfectly possible you've done something for the whole world when you've given Algernon some of the midsummer madness that he always lacked.

"You see, a man has a right to his own spirit. He has a right to have it grow when it will and where it will. He owes it to himself and to everybody else around him to have the largest possible capacity of understanding, and sympathy, and faith in the world. Algy's soul was asleep, that's all. You've waked it. And, as his oldest friend, I do thank you."

There was a curious little smile on her lips.

"Do you imagine she will?"

"She's a fool if she doesn't, but that's neither here nor there. O, I'm conservative enough, as a general rule, but this is different."

"W-why is it?"

"Because it's Algernon," I said. "If he made a habit of this sort of thing, or if he'd ever done it even once before. But that's nonsense; he simply hasn't got it in him. Say what you like; I know what you've meant to him this summer. And all I hope is that you haven't hoodwinked him."

Her eyes had coals in them as she gazed at me."

"I wish I could tell you things——"

"What things?"

"But I can't."

"Why not?"

For answer she scrambled to her feet. "Let's walk, shall we? And—and I don't think I want to talk any more, if you don't mind——"

So that we walked for a hundred yards and met Algernon coming back. And then I remembered that I had left my pipe in the bow of the skiff and went off to get it.

In due time the party collected on the shore, all but Algernon and Shirley. I was their boatman; so that I told the others to go ahead and I'd come along as soon as I'd located the absentees. They set out obediently and I smoked two pipes, slowly, and then went along the water's edge, whistling as loud as I could.

I had paused for breath when I almost stumbled over them. They were sitting on the jetty, very close together, and Algernon had his arm around her. I slunk back as quietly as I could make it, but the human ear can't be closed as readily as the human eye. Algernon had found his tongue, and he was telling her exactly what he thought about her and how he knew it was no use.

There was just one tremendous hope in my mind. Mrs. Spurrier, the hawk visaged intellectual, the loveless, the uninspirational, was coming tomorrow morning. Algernon's little flare of humanity was finished. The Spurriers would stay a week and depart—they lived in Boston and Shirley three thousand miles away. Algernon would never see her again; he wouldn't dare, even if she did. And I knew Algernon. I had one tremendous hope—that she would let him kiss her. Just to complete the drawing; just to put the signature to the sketch. He would never forget it, and there would be nothing else in his life so well worth remembering. Could he not have that one eternal spark of youth before the door closed and he went back to his dry, dry books and the long years of the married anchorite?

I approached again, vehemently, tardily.

Just before they heard me Algernon kissed her.

All three of us were silent as I rowed home.

. . . .

In the morning, which was again cloudy, Algernon was cheerful enough, but he announced the premonitory warnings of a hard cold.

"I think I'll stay in bed a while," he said, "and take some dope. There's some two grain aspirin tablets over there on the bureau. Would you mind?"

There were two tablets left in the box; he took one, diffidently, and I brought him a glass of water. "Anything else?"

"No thanks. I can look at the view." Following his gesture I saw the sand dunes silvered against the sky. "You might get the mail, though. It ought to be in by now, hadn't it?"

I went up for the mail; Shirley was on her lawn, and in her wave of greeting there was an odd shyness which I understood and appreciated.

There was no mail for Algernon, but there was a letter for me in Algernon's writing. I opened it, wondering.

"Dear Old Boy: Haven't I always said I'd gamble against the world on an even chance? Well, it's come to that. It's my world against your world. And I'm lucky; I'm the luckiest man who ever lived.

"It's hell to have an imagination, but it's heller to know that you can't remedy one awful mistake by making another one. I'm perfectly sane and sober. In fact, I'm smiling as I write this. It's past midnight, and I'm going to sneak up and drop this in at the P. O. so you'll get it at the right time—fifteen minutes after I send you for it.

"This is between you and me, old man. We'll let luck decide. Luck can hand down just as good a judgment as law can. Luck's got to. I want you to know, for obvious reasons. A little grand stand now and then is relished by the best of men. I know that whichever way it works out it'll be the best for me. If I go, I go; if I don't—stay with me and help, won't you?

"I could have made it a sure thing, but that wouldn't have been fair to fate. Why not give fate a chance—when she gives us so many? There were two pills in the box; didn't you notice? One was aspirin, all right; the other was white bichloride of mercury. I put 'em in the box just a second ago. I don't know which is which. An even chance, and I'm always lucky. Hurry home, dear boy—God bless you!—and see how luck's decided the game. I wonder which would be lucky for me—and Shirley—and Mrs. S.? Do you know? I don't. Let's find out.

"ALGERNON."

Blue Ribbon Fiction

MICE AND MEN

THE STORY THUS FAR—Merrial Houlton's normally sunny outlook on life is clouded by two regrets. First, the estrangement between her dead mother's English family and her father, with whom Merrial's relatives have had nothing to do since her mother was married and went to live on a western ranch. And second, the hurt she has inflicted on Tripp Hart, an old time playmate from the west, whom she has sorrowfully rejected as a suitor. When her father tells her he has failed in business, Merrial announces that she is going to England to visit her mother's people while he is getting on his feet again, and to carry out certain plans about which she will tell no one. The family in England —Alice and Winifred Beaufort, their mother, and Hubert, an invalid brother—receive her with mixed emotions, but she proceeds blithely to make friends in her own way. Things, she finds, are rather at sixes and sevens. Her own brother, Dick, who has been in England at school, turns out to be a hopeless expatriate, ashamed of his American origin, which he has kept a secret. Winifred Beaufort is unhappy over a love affair with Kenneth Stanton, a young man who appears to be neglecting her. And though Merrial is beginning to get on with the Beauforts, there remains the disturbing necessity of calling on Aunt Jane Coke, the martinet of the family, who has been most unrelenting in her attitude toward Merrial's father.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

Tactics vs. Tact.

"AREN'T you ever going to bed, Merrial?"

It was Alice's voice, and it came from the softly opened door. Alice stood there, tall and straight, in her dressing gown, a thick chestnut braid hanging down over each shoulder. The candle in her hand made pretty shining places in the smooth turns of the plaits. Her face was flushed and her eyes were drowsy. She looked altogether softer and sweeter than usual.

Merrial smiled brightly up at her.

"Come in!" said she, folding her letter and putting it in the waiting envelope. "Let's talk. I've a letter to address, and then—nothing."

"But it's after midnight!"

"Shocking! But you couldn't lose your color if you tried, and I have none to lose, so why bother over our beauty sleep? But why are you up so late—if you're so shocked at me?" Merrial muffled her laughing question in deference to the hour.

"I've been writing to Elfreda Rivington at Oxford," Alice answered hesitatingly. "She comes back very soon for the long vacation."

Merrial dramatically seized her head with both hands, eyes distended—the very picture of bewildered astonishment.

"Rivington! Elfrida Rivington! Who is she? What is she? Rivington! Can't I ever hear a name without feeling that I've heard it before or know something about it! Who is Elfrida Rivington, Alice?"

Alice was rocking with subdued laughter at her cousin's assumption of vivid dramatics.

"She's my cousin; they live near here, at Rivington House. Aunt Ellen, Lady Rivington"—Merrial jumped—"was my father's sister, that's all."

"Lady Rivington, my deah!" echoed Merrial, thunderstruck, recalling Dick's ravings. Alice didn't like the tone; she thought Merrial was taking her off. "And she's your aunt! I simply don't believe it! It's too much! First there's 'Kenneth Stanton,' and then, before the day's well over, comes 'Lady Rivington.'"

"But what have they to do with each other?" asked Alice, utterly at sea. "I wish you wouldn't be so mysterious! Why shouldn't I write to my cousin, Elfrida Rivington, when she's up at Oxford?" She was blushing furiously now. And that gave Merrial the clew.

"Ah, yes—she's up at Oxford, too," smiled Merrial. "I wonder if she knows my namesake, that English Mr. Houlton you spoke of yesterday?"

"Of course," said Alice shortly. "He stayed with them down here; that's how I—we met him."

"Do tell me more about him; he sounds very interesting"—and Merrial donned her irresistible manner. "Is he really as nice as he sounds?"

"He's most unusually nice, we all think," Alice confessed with shy animation. "Aunt Ellen liked him so much, when Elfrida introduced him to her up at Oxford, that she asked him to a house party, and he's been down once or twice since. Somehow he has a prejudice against Americans. He is very cultured, you see, and fastidious, and—O! I'm making a mess of it. Sorry, Merrial!"

"O, don't mind me!" she laughed. "You've given me your Mr. Houlton's number, as we say in our vulgar American slang, and that's just what I wanted. Well, it certainly is a queer world—don't you think so, Ally?"

"I don't quite see why." Again she felt a bit nettled. "You certainly are in tremendous spirits tonight, aren't you?"

But suddenly Merrial had changed.

"Yes," she said soberly. "That is—no. I'm feeling tired, and I think I'll turn in, Alice."

"Very well, get into bed; I'll turn the light out for you."

Merrial obeyed. Above the covers her soft, curly head looked like a child's.

Alice suddenly bent down to kiss her. It came over the English girl that she had not been very kind and that Merrial was a long way from home.

"Good-night!" she said awkwardly.

Merrial's hands had tightened round her neck. She was whispering:

"How much do you like your Mr. Houlton, Alice?"

"Very much."

"O, dear! O, dear!" she almost sobbed.

And then Merrial, refusing any explanation whatever, settled down definitely into her pillow and Alice had perforce to take her puzzlement to bed.

But the definiteness lasted no longer than ten minutes or so, during which Merrial tossed restlessly about. At the end of the ten minutes she slipped out of bed and reopened her letter to Tripp Hart and started writing a postscript:

"P. S.—Tripp! I've just discovered the beginnings of a perfectly horrible tragedy, and I'm at my wits' end to know how to stave it off. I must write to you about it, not because you can help, but just to divide the responsibility, as it were. And I can't say a word to Dad. You said I was still to be your bestest chum, even though I couldn't say yes to that troublesome question you asked me. So I'm taking you at your word.

"Well, this is what's happened. That idiot Dick, who has a violent fit of Anglomania (as I told you), has met the Beauforts without knowing in the least who they are or that they're his own first cousins, and has evidently begun to make love to Alice, the eldest—posing as an Englishman, if you please, and either saying or implying (I can't believe he'd really lie outright) that he has no American relatives. I don't mean that he's an idiot not to know who the Beauforts are; that's Dad's fault. He never would speak of any of the English cousins—and though Dick has probably heard (even if he doesn't remember) that mother was Theodora Coke, of course he wouldn't know that her sister married a Mr. Beaufort. But it's really his own fault, just the same—because if he hadn't played at being English and denied any American connection Alice Beaufort would have found out who he was, and that would have avoided this awful muss.

"What on earth can I do? He'll have to own up to his nationality, of course, sooner or later, if he's seriously 'sweet on her,' but it's a nice job for his sister to 'show him up'! And yet if I let it go on he may go so far with Alice—she likes him tremendously evidently, and is the kind who'd take a thing like that terribly hard—that it will just about spoil her life and turn her into another Aunt Jane. (She's too like her as it is.)

"I never have believed it right that Dad should keep us—and apparently Dick especially—so much in the dark about the English side of our family, even though they did behave so badly to him. And so he's partly to blame, poor old dear; but I wouldn't worry him with it for the world. Even if Dick could ever explain to Alice about his silly deception and satisfy her, there's that awful first cousinship; the Beauforts would never allow her to marry him—her first cousin—I'm certain. Isn't it simply fierce? Well, you can do nothing, though I wish you were here. I mean, of course, to punch Dick's head and smash his old monocle and make him into a decent American again. I love the English, but I loathe an Anglomaniac!

"P. P. S.—He met Alice through her aunt, Lady Rivington, and was raving to me about the Rivingtons and their house parties and all that. Promised to introduce me to them 'later'—I suppose when he felt I was properly qualified for the honor. O, dear! O, dear! Dick is a No. 1 sized nut. Thanks, old boy, for letting me pour myself out thusly! Your bestest pal, MERRIAL."

. . . .

Several weeks had elapsed since Merrial Houlton's arrival at the Grange, during which the Beauforts' strenuous American cousin could not be accused of "letting the grass grow under her feet." She had certainly contrived "to start something," though she herself was fully aware that it remained a debatable point whether she would arrive at a successful conclusion in any one of her thorny undertakings.

Only one member of the English household could yet be said to have come completely under her spell and that was Hubert. Her breezy camaraderie acted upon him like a tonic and the lack of any sort of commiseration in her attitude toward him, while it puzzled Winifred and half affronted Alice, roused the normal boy spirit in him with clearly beneficial effect.

She had not been at the Grange three days before she had impetuously cabled to Tripp Hart out west, at a length which, had her aunt and cousins seen the message, would quickly have roused their suspicions as to Merrial's supposed poverty:

"Send at once every variety your discarded juvenile cattle puncher stuff, costumes, gun, lariat, and whole outfit, by quickest route, to your chum. MERRIE."

Probably no one realized the nature of Merrial's treatment fully except the young physician who attended Hubert regularly; as for Dr. Unwin, he "took his hat off" to this common sense attitude toward his patient and made his cordial approval of it very clear to the Beauforts. It might even be said that the surreptitious opportunities he sought, in order to obtain confidential consultations with his volunteer assistant, exceeded the bounds of professional etiquette. But Merrial took full advantage of Dr. Unwin's coöperation to learn from him all she could of Hubert's case. For what had she endured the attendance at Dr. Reval's clinic in Boston if not that she believed he might become an important factor in this particular one of her "plans"?

And this morning, in Hubert's interests, it would seem that Merrial Houlton was just about to give the coup de grace to all her carefully prepared plans.

"I can't help it; they must think what they like about me," she muttered to her reflection in the glass as she put up her hair with defiant twists and thrusts of hairpins. "It's a case of tactics versus tact, and since I don't seem to be able to get at it any other way I shall have to make a frontal attack. If I find that it's right to ask Dr. Reval to come over I must be able to tell him every detail before he comes. I'm going over the top after breakfast."

Whereupon Mrs. Beaufort had been deftly detached from her reserves and had been maneuvered up to her niece's bedroom. There the dear lady had unconsciously allowed herself to be deployed into a comfortable chair, upon which position her enemy instantly opened fire without further parley.

"Aunt Margaret, didn't you think that was rather a hard sermon the vicar preached yesterday? Rather a cruel idea, I mean?"

Mrs. Beaufort quickly fell into the trap.

"No, my dear; I think it was very true. In this life we do very often find ourselves obliged to seem cruel in order to be truly kind."

Merrial paused, as if considering this in the light of her experience. She sighed. "Of course it may be so; but it's much easier to accept that doctrine when one is kindly hurting the other person than when he is kindly hurting you. But yet, if it's true, one must believe in it both ways, I suppose."

"Certainly one must. It cuts both ways, as you say."

Merrial fixed her eyes firmly upon her aunt.

"Will you prove it to me?" she asked quickly.

Mrs. Beaufort was a little startled by the tone, but looked at her smilingly.

"I think I'm 'game,' my dear," she said. "Only are you sure that you've got to be cruel and that in the end you will have been kind?"

"I'm sure that's what I want to be—kind, I mean, in the end. Won't you trust my judgment, Aunt Margaret, and let me do my best?"

The question was so seriously put and with such obvious sincerity that Mrs. Beaufort, after only a moment's pause, replied:

"Yes; and now what is it?" She smiled again, a little nervously. "I'll stick by my guns, dear. Don't be afraid of that."

"I want you," said Merrial distinctly and slowly, "to tell me every last single thing about Hubert's accident, and every least detail of what has been done for him since."

Mrs. Beaufort went white to the lips; her heart seemed to stop beating; her eyes, first glassy with horror, then looking her niece with dumb misery, slowly filled with tears of horrible anguish. Her lips trembled piteously as she protested:

"Merrial, my dear, don't; please, please don't! You can't know what you are asking. Ah, please."

Merrial had never known a moment when she was so near to relinquishing a fixed purpose. She knew that if she attempted to utter one word she would weaken and have to face defeat. She remained stonily silent, her eyes fixed unwaveringly upon her aunt, mutely reminding her wretched victim of the promise given.

Mrs. Beaufort took a long in-drawn breath.

"I promised you, Merrial—and though I did so, not knowing what you intended, I shall keep my promise. You cannot know what torture you're putting me to; but I shall try to remember that you mean it for the best. And yet, God knows, you're mistaken; no kindness to any one can come from this."

And then had followed the story of Hubert's accident, for which his mother had always felt herself responsible. Over and over again in this painful recital Merrial had halted it to probe still deeper, with questions so direct and searching that there gradually gathered in the eyes of Mrs. Beaufort a look almost of horror for her niece. Unflinchingly Merrial saw her job through—and, having got all the information, supported her aunt to her bedroom and tenderly put her upon her couch and left her there to rest and recover. Then she put on a mackintosh and sallied forth into the cold drizzle of an English "rainy day," without a word to any one. Her own face was white and set as she closed the front door beind her.

"It's simply atrocious!" cried Alice. She was sitting on the edge of her mother's couch an hour later, her eyes and cheeks alight with indignation. Winifred, standing at the foot, looked less indignant but even more distressed.

"It wasn't like Merrial," the latter remarked in a puzzled tone.

"O, you're silly about Merrial," Alice stormed. "She can make herself fascinating—every one knows that. But to come here and deliberately torture madre! To bring up all that dreadful time when Hubert was hurt and to ask questions as if—as if she were a doctor and could do any good by digging it all out. I can't bear it, and I won't! I must say something to her. It's unbearable." Her voice shook with a real feeling of the cruelty of it.

"Hush, Alice dear," her mother whispered, looking pathetically at her daughter sitting rigidly upright beside her. "My head's getting better; I'll get up in a little while." Her eyes closed again, the corners of her mouth drooping, and her face still white and weary from the pain of the ordeal she had gone through.

Alice sobbed openly; Winifred's eyes filled.

"Don't dearest," Mrs. Beaufort comforted, stroking Alice's hand. "I'm quite sure she meant to be helpful—she didn't torture me just out of empty curiosity. We mustn't be unjust to her, dear. It was her way of showing interest. She—perhaps it wasn't tactful, but she meant to be kind, I know she did."

Alice dried her eyes.

"Well, madre," she said with a quaver, "you are going to forgive her, of course; you always do. But I can't—I simply can't. And if she doesn't stop it I've got to speak out. I'm not a mere girl, and I've got to see that you're not made to suffer again like this."

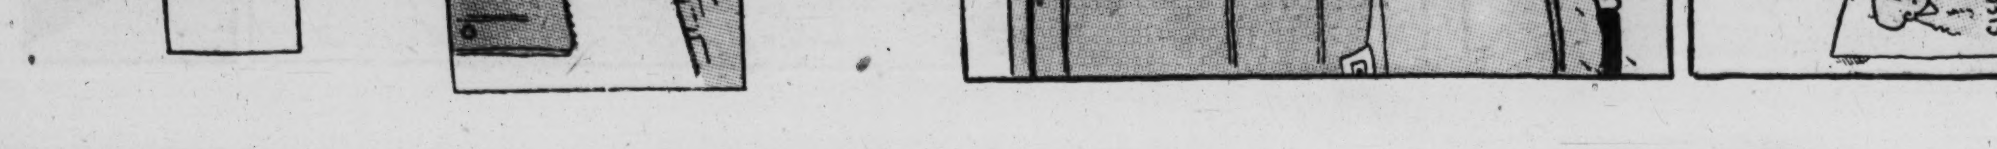
Mrs. Beaufort sighed, recalling her painful examination. "I could have stood it better," she confessed, "if she hadn't been so appallingly businesslike and cool."

"Poor madre," murmured Winifred.

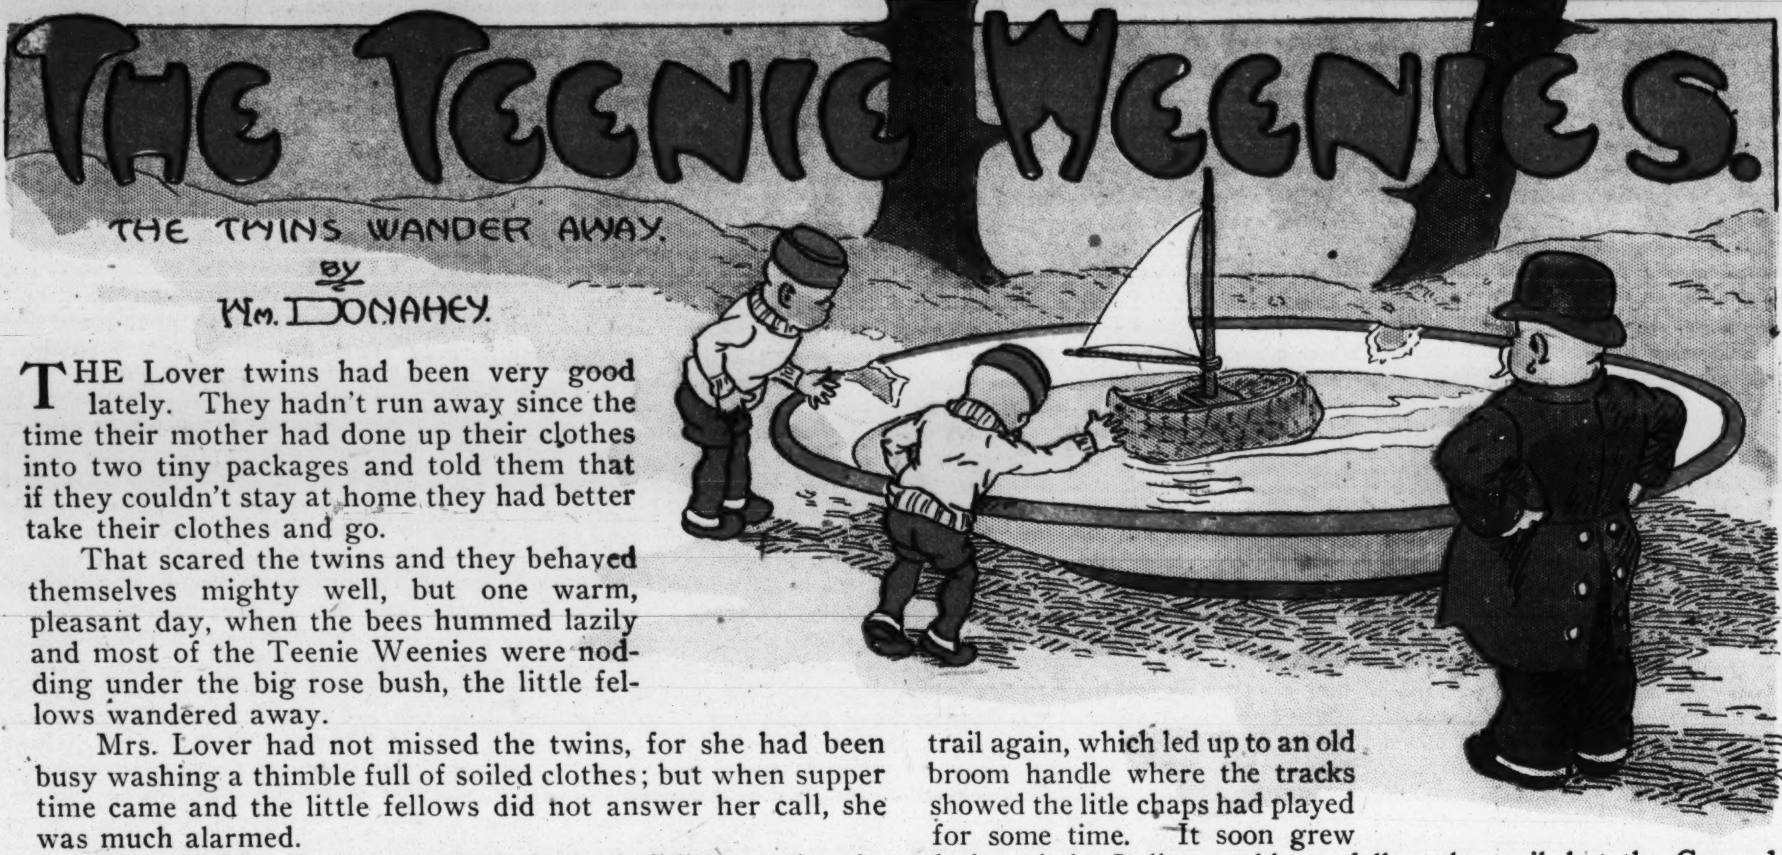
"But you know"—Mrs. Beaufort sat up and rallied herself—"we mustn't forget that there's a difference in her way of doing things. She—she's not like a young girl, that's all. She never is. We can't judge her by the usual standards."

"Why not, I'd like to know?" Alice had risen to her feet and was standing like an angry boy with her hands clinched at her sides. "Why can't we judge her? Mustn't an American girl conform to womanly standards? Mustn't she be sympathetic and gentle and tactful? Well!"—with a sudden drop of tone—"I know I'm not tactful myself, but heaven knows I try to be, and every one pitches into me when I'm not. You never say that I'm not to be judged by the usual standards. O! It's time Merrial was taken to see Aunt Jane!"

To an outsider the threat might have sounded absurd, but her hearers took it seriously.



THE TEENIE WEENIES.



THE TWINS WANDER AWAY.

BY
WM. DONAHEY.

THE Lover twins had been very good lately. They hadn't run away since the time their mother had done up their clothes into two tiny packages and told them that if they couldn't stay at home they had better take their clothes and go.

That scared the twins and they behaved themselves mighty well, but one warm, pleasant day, when the bees hummed lazily and most of the Teenie Weenies were nodding under the big rose bush, the little fellows wandered away.

Mrs. Lover had not missed the twins, for she had been busy washing a thimble full of soiled clothes; but when supper time came and the little fellows did not answer her call, she was much alarmed.

Mr. and Mrs. Lover searched all the buildings under the rose bush, but they could not find a single trace of the little fellows. They questioned all the Teenie Weenies and found that the Policeman had been the last to see the missing children.

"I saw them about two hours ago," the Policeman said. "They were sailing that peanut shell boat the Sailor made for them, in a saucer back of the hospital."

The Teenie Weenies hurried to the saucer, but the little fellows were not in sight. The little peanut shell canoe floated on the water just where the twins had left it. Mr. Lover called loudly several times, but received no answer.

"Maybe they are playing over on the ash heap," suggested the Old Soldier.

The little folks set off for the ash heap where the Indian soon found the twins' tiny tracks in the fine dust. The trail led up to an old bottle which was half full of dirty water.

"Oh, dear me!" cried Mrs. Lover. "Maybe they have fallen in and drowned."

After a great deal of work the Teenie Weenies tilted the bottle and poured out the water, but the twins were not there.

After looking about for some time the Indian picked up the trail again, which led up to an old broom handle where the tracks showed the litle chaps had played for some time. It soon grew dark and the Indian could not follow the trail, but the General ordered torches brought up and the little fellows searched every inch of the big ash heap. The little folks peered into every sardine can and bottle on the heap, but not a sign of the twins could they see.

"Me pick up tracks in morning," grunted the Indian. "Me see better when it light."

But in the morning there were so many Teenie Weenie tracks over the ash heap where the little searchers had tramped that the Indian could not follow the twins' trail.

"Lookin' for the twins?" asked a bird that fluttered down and landed on the board at the top of the ash heap just as the sun peeped over the top of a high board fence.

"Y-y-y-yes," cried the astonished Teenie Weenies. "Have you seen them?"

"I certainly have," answered the bird. "They're safe and sound in my nest and they were sleeping like a couple of kittens when I left them."

"Where did you find them? How did it happen?" asked the excited Teenie Weenies.

"Why, I was flyin' along just before dark last night and I heard some one crying. I looked down and on the other side of this ash heap I saw the twins holdin' on to each other and bawlin' with all their might. I flew down and they told me that they were lost and as it was gettin' pretty dark I was afraid to fly over to your place with them, so I picked them up and carried them to my nest over there," said the bird nodding his head at a tree close by.

Mr. Lover ran over to the tree and almost before the bird had landed on the nest the little chap had scurried up the tree.

The twins were wide awake by this time and they gurgled with joy when they saw their tiny father. The little chaps were soon carried to the ground and packed off to their home on the shoulders of the Teenie Weenies.

Mrs. Lover was so happy when she saw her children she sat down and cried for half an hour.

"Why did you run away and frighten your mother almost to death?" asked Mrs. Lover when she had dried her tears.

"We didn't run away," answered the twins. "Honest, mudder, we's very careful not to run—we just walkeded away, then we got losted."

To make the Teenie Weenie doll, cut out the Clown and paste it on a piece of cardboard. When it is thoroughly dry, cut away the cardboard around the edge of the picture. The doll can be made to stand up by pasting a flap to the back of the figure.

THE CLOWN.
TEENIE WEENIE DOLL.

The Way of the Widow by May Wynne

A Tale of Young Love and the Wisdom That Comes When Years of Discretion Arrive

IT is distinctly set forth for those interested in the question that to hate is sinful. Yet Gerry hated as she stood under a beech tree in Mapleton woods and heard Tom proposing matrimony to her rival.

Poor Gerry! She had given Tom Berriton her impulsive little heart and it appeared the gift was prematurely bestowed. True, he had not definitely asked for Gerry's heart as he was demanding that of the widow, but Gerry had had reason to believe he loved her. That day of the Derevales' dance, for instance, when they had danced together the whole evening, and Gerry had waxed defiant afterward under a maternal reproof because she was sure he had felt just as she had felt, and it had all been so beautiful —so rose colored—so exquisite. A waltz tune haunted Gerry's whirling brain now, only to be displaced by a still more thrilling memory of a windy day in March, a bough blown across the road, Tom's arm about her and the look on his blanched face as he asked if she were hurt.

If she had not run away that day in a swift, unreasoning desire to delay the thrilling moment of confession Tom would have asked her to be his wife. And now? Now he was proposing to the widow, whose beauty and loneliness, hospitality and charm, had taken every male heart in Cherington by storm.

Do you wonder Gerry listened? If the crime were punishable she was punished.

"I love you," Tom was saying, with a break in his deep voice which told of suppressed passion. "You must love me in return, Mary. I feel such love as mine creates love. You are so wonderful. I knew when I first saw you you must be the woman in my life."

"Wait," replied Mrs. Delawly, and from where she stood Gerry could see the beauty of the upraised face as the widow looked from her seat on a low bank up into the eyes of the man standing beside her. "I want you to wait, Tom, and think. How and why do you feel I am the woman you have been waiting for?"

"Because you are yourself," he cried hoarsely. "Your wonderful, adorable self. Till I met you I hardly knew what it was to speak seriously to a woman. I looked on them as things to be petted, protected, humored, and loved—possessively, not as equals—or, rather, superiors who in sober truth can be the guiding stars of life, inspirations to make of us men nobler creatures than we had believed possible."

"Ah," said Mary Delawly, "so that is how you love me."

And she sat, her white chin cupped in her hand, her gray eyes gazing into the heart of the summer wood.

But Gerry, like a sunbeam that had lost its radiance, leaned back against the beech trunk, spent with her own misery.

Tom should have said all that to her—only differently. The widow had no right to steal a girl's lover—and—and—O! the world was a cruel place, and the men in it crueler still with their open confession of treating hearts as playthings and women grown as children, and—and O! how Gerry hated Mary Delawly, who, like some subtle enchantress, lured men from their true selves and their truer sweethearts. But she must go on listening to all that was being said, for if that woman mentioned her name she felt she would kill her.

But her name was not mentioned and already the widow had risen to stand facing the man.

"I am going to say 'yes,'" said Mrs. Delawly. "No more than that till in three months' time you ask me again the same question you have asked me today. I should not wish our engagement to be announced, and we will leave the lovers' game till three months hence. Yet I am your promised wife, your dear friend. Will that content you, Tom?"

Of course it did not content him, though he conceded that half a loaf is better than no bread, and tried to tell his wonderful Mary what he would be to her after his time of probation in the halcyon days of lovers' rapture.

"Ah, yes," said Mary Delawly, "in three months' time."

And she went with him up the glade, neither of them noticing the child who lay in a crumpled heap at the foot of her beech tree, sobbing her heart out because men are deceivers ever, and the way of widows a snare and threat against the innocent happiness of sweet maidenhood.

Tom met Gerry with a smiling face and happy eyes next day. He had decided that he had always regarded little Gerry in the light of a sister. But Gerry was in one of her moods—that sort of mood which suggests a fluffy Persian kitten with arched back in sight of a dog.

Tom went away worsted and regretful. He was one of those delightfully selfish men who want all the plums without being the least aware that he is greedy. So, because Gerry showed claws under a velvet soft manner, he went to his Mary.

She was gardening—not daintily as Gerry gardened, but in deadly earnest. Digging, sowing, measuring, as if her life and well being depended on the growth of—carrots. Tom was young enough to think women gardeners should be interested only in roses.

And Mary was not inclined to relieve ennui by sparkling badinage. She talked of the poor, their rights and wrongs, with earnest feeling. Tom remembered he had told her she was the only woman he talked to in earnest and was ashamed of being a trifle bored. He wondered whether Mary could ever enthuse over strawberries and cream, or make ices for a weary week worker on a Saturday afternoon.

After all, the love of a woman and the rest of home come as relaxations after the burden and heat of the day. If a woman wants to be a man's equal she had better not marry.

Tom pulled up sharply. He had forgotten his ideal.

The next time he met Gerry she was dancing down a river path bordered by forget-me-nots with a 3 year old sister perched upon her shoulder. East or west, north or south, you could have searched the world wide without seeing so dainty a picture. Gerry's blue eyes were raised, tender and adoring, to the wee cherub with its aureole of curls, and Tom commented that after all Gerry was a woman, and a woman in her tenderest mood, holding a child in her arms. He asked to join a picnic party near by, and himself went with Gerry to gather forget-me-nots to decorate the feast. For an hour he forgot his ideal of womanhood and laughed like a boy as he played with Gerry and the bairns.

It is good to be young and gay, and without care, so Tom went on his way smiling. He had promised to be at Limes cottage by 5—he arrived at 6. Mrs. Delawly was just returning from the village, the flare of the setting sun was on her face. Some men would have admired the beauty, seen thus in maturity, for the sake of expression, but they would have been men of mature years themselves, with reverence rather than distaste for the crowsfeet which the radiant sunshine showed.

Yes, crowsfeet! They were there, long, deep, unmistakable. Heretofore Tom had seen his lady love in shaded lights and the dim daintiness of a rose colored drawing room. Now, she seemed deliberately to blazon the signs of age before his eyes. He saw that her beauty was fading, that there were tired circles where there should have been downy whiteness for black lashes to sweep.

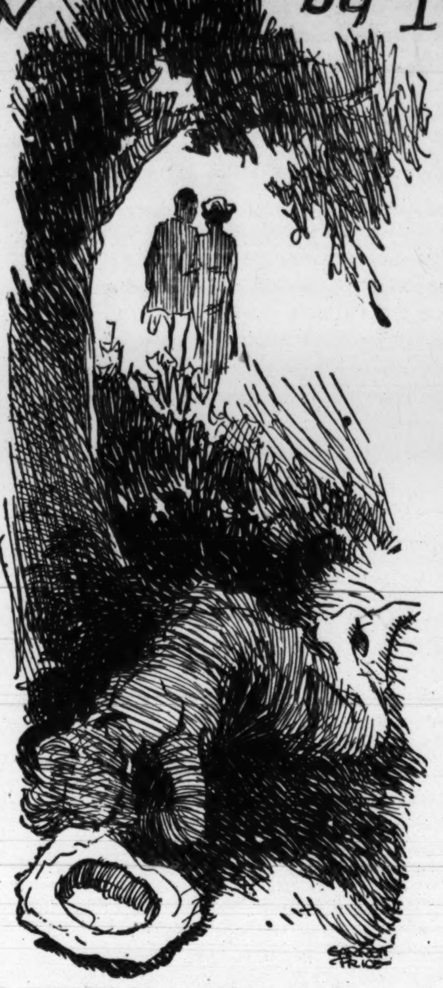
Tom thought of Gerry—and saw Mary Delawly, but he did not understand the latter's smile when she held out her hands.

"Come in," she urged. "You were not here at 5, so I popped down to the village—I have so many friends there."

He ought to have been pleased to hear she had friends, but he was not. He wished to fill all her horizon and frowned because the latter was too wide. He remembered how Gerry had been wont to sit by the hour listening to his words of wisdom. The widow had too many words of her own to make a good listener, and she claimed his attention to her theories as a right.

Tom was beginning to draw up a mental list of rules which he thought would be good for the weaker sex. First and foremost, a woman should not be given overmuch to her own theories, but be content to listen to those of her husband whilst she busies herself in affairs domestic.

Somehow he could not rid himself of a vision of Gerry dancing along a flower decked path laughing up at a laughing baby girl. It seemed to give him food for dreams of the ideal home, the ideal wife, and the ideal bairns. Then he came back to another ideal—that of a womanhood, self-radiant, splendid, but masterful. Queenly to reign—possibly to govern. And he recalled a truism that a man should be master in his own house. Once he even went so far as to feel that Mary made him tired.



A crumpled heap, sobbing her heart out because men are deceivers ever.

With Gerry it had been different—she was so joyous, so childlike, so gay. It rested him even to think of her, even as it rests a brain fagged man to pick up a light novel at the end of a laborious day. It seemed strange that Mrs. Delawly never perceived what was amiss.

So the months went by. Gerry had been visiting a married sister, and Tom missed her horribly. She was so refreshing, so cheery, such a good chum. He never got brain fag in Gerry's company.

When he was with his ideal he got quite considerably bored. She was too much in earnest with the things of life; he almost felt in her presence that he was in the company of another man—and that is the last thing a man wants to feel in love making. As time went on Tom began to wonder what the real love making would be at the end of probation; the wonder left him cold. Mary Delawly was so practical, so convinced in all she said and did, it seemed absurd that she should ever wish to come to him for guidance or protection, and there is that in most men which requires to give both to the one beloved.

Tom had noticed the crowsfeet, too, more than once. Mary worked too hard—for others, and to be tired is not becoming when one reaches the end of the thirties. Ten years hence his ideal would be an old woman. Again Tom visioned Gerry dancing along in the sunlight with a golden haired baby girl crowing and clapping from a place on her shoulder.

"I have been offered a place in the county council at Sidboro," Mary told him. "I am so pleased. There is so much a woman can do in that position."

"You will wear yourself out," retorted Tom irritably. "You ought to rest more. I noticed yesterday how you were beginning to stoop."

She turned to raise and fasten a rose branch against the wall; she did not look at him.

"Life is so short," said she, "one must do what one can."

And she knew that Tom was thinking of an ideal woman, young, loving, irresponsible, whose one object and aim in life was to make a cozy home nest for her lord and master.

Tom often thought of that home nest. He supposed Mary was too "brainy" to care about domesticity. He—er—would be very proud of his clever, beautiful wife.

And so the three months came to a close.

The widow was seated in her library awaiting him. There were many papers on the desk, businesslike papers. The room was businesslike, too; there were evidences everywhere of Mrs. Delawly's many interests. She did not look quite natural seated over the tea things; it seemed to Tom that all the time she was thinking of the next job she would have mapped out to do. The sense of rest and cozy lingering to chat was impossible. Yet—they were going to talk today. The next "job" must wait.

Tom felt desperate. He knew what was expected, for Mary had written to tell him probation was over. Yet—how can one play the lover to time? It almost seemed as though she waited watch in hand, saying, "When the love making is over I have to get on with my writing."

Well, they had both better get on with it. He ought to feel in raptures over the prospect.

"Mary," he said hoarsely, "I am asking you what you told me I might ask when the probation was over. Will you have me for lover and husband?"

Her hands lay idle in her lap. White, capable hands, not small and soft and cuddly like Gerry's. He saw her look at them as if in resolve.

"No, Tom," she said simply, "I would rather have you as a friend. A dear and valued friend, no more. You will find a sweetheart nearer and dearer without looking far. We both know and love her. I shall be glad in your happiness as though I were your sister—or mother—but you yourself know now that the other is impossible."

It was the twilight hour, but the ruddy glow of sunset crowned her head. For the first time he saw white hairs amongst the brown. Impatiently he pushed back his chair and stood up. Was he regretful now it was over, or only immeasurably relieved? Being a man, he must needs grumble.

"So it is over," said he; "after all our planning, all our dreams."

"Your plans, not mine, Tom," she replied, "and you yourself shall tell me I am right." Standing as she did he saw her beauty fading, the tired look more noticeable in her eyes. Yes, she was right.

"We must always be friends," he pleaded, holding out his hands and knowing that somehow he was losing what was good and wonderful and—not quite understandable. "Did you never mean that we should be more?"

Who could have told that she lied in replying—lied loyally, for love's sake.

"No," she said, "I never meant to. I wanted you to find out. Now go to her."

He went without regret, feeling he had been mocked and cheated, yet glad that it should be so since high ideals are less desirable for everyday content than cozy home nests, a loving little wife, and the pattering feet of children. He did not linger on his way when he went in search of Gerry.

And the wonder of it was that Gerry was waiting—as the woman too often waits—only she did not know she was magnanimous—she only wanted Tom.

. . . .

The widow sat on along in the gloaming. Surprising as it may seem to you, she neglected her county council correspondence, her village club accounts were left untotaled. She sat alone whilst the light died out of the evening sky.

It was still not dark when the door opened and a girl slipped in. It was Gerry. The elder woman did not seem surprised, and smiled when the child came and knelt beside her, whilst she slipped one arm around the slender waist.

"So you are happy, little Gerry?" she asked.

A sob broke in the girl's throat.

"Why did you do it, why?" she whispered, "for I know—you loved him, too."

There was silence in the little room. Some questions are hard to answer because there are some people to whom it is impossible to lie. Strange though it may seem, Mary Delawly could not deny the charge which this child made. Yet no one could ever know the secret but they two. Each knew that.

The widow rose and, moving very softly, lighted the lamp near. When she came back to Gerry she held a miniature in her hand. The face that looked up from out of a setting of blue velvet was that of a little, little child, blue eyed and golden haired.

"She died ten years ago," said Mary Delawly, softly. "My wee daughter. It was—for her sake, dear, that I longed for your happiness. For myself there is the past. It is to youth that the future belongs."

But, for all her own joyous happiness, Gerry clung sobbing to this friend whom she loved, then went out on tiptoe as though leaving some chamber of quiet sleep on her way to find her lover.

The widow was alone once more.

My New Way of Selling

How I Learned the One Great Secret of Salesmanship in 12 Hours

"YOUNG man, my advice is, to get into the selling end of the game!"

"But——"

"No buts about it, if you want to go ahead —sell. It is salesmen we want today—Salesmen. If you can sell things, you will never have to worry about securing a position or demanding a good salary."

"But, Mr. Cranshaw, I have had no experience—know nothing about it, why——"

"Then learn, sir—you've asked my advice and help, and there it is."

Deeply puzzled, I left his office. Like so many other young fellows looking for their first job, I had no very definite aim. I didn't mind hard work or small pay, as long as I felt that the future held some opportunity. I had called upon my father's old friend, Mr. Cranshaw, to help me decide what calling he thought promised the most. The above conversation was the result.

Mr. Cranshaw is an experienced business man, and I respected his opinions. With his aid I found a job—and a fairly good one as jobs go—with a large farm-machine manufacturing company.

As soon as I learned something about my product I went out on the road. The optimism of youth was with me. I had a tremendous amount of self-confidence. My product was a good one.

But I ran into a snag when I came in contact with the hard-headed men who till the soil.

They were of all types, keen and shrewd, progressive men, who wanted to see an actual gain—return for every penny spent; old-fashioned men who didn't take to newfangled methods; big business men who ran immense farms as a side issue. Every one presented a knotty problem. It seemed to me in my early days that each man had to be "sold" in a different way. I kept a separate "method of attack" for each individual.

But I was not a success. I made few sales. Every now and then I put over a fairly big order, but I was not a consistent seller. The firm was not satisfied and they said so. I was costing them more than my work was bringing in. In a very frank talk one morning they told me that if something didn't happen at once I would be called in from the road.

Well, needless to say, I was discouraged. I thought things over. The success of my brother salesmen and competitors puzzled me. I observed them closely and tried to learn what it was that brought them their big sales. I noticed, to my surprise, that the men whose totals were the largest were the ones who seemed to work the least. But I could find no one trick that any of them possessed which I had not tried.

One day I met a hardware salesman in the smoking room of a train. We talked about the usual things for a while; then we branched into selling methods. In the course of his conversation he told me how, after many years of mediocre success, he finally learned the one great secret of selling, and what that secret is. It was simple as A, B, C.

It almost bowled me over. The simplicity and practicality of this great basic rule of success dazzled me. My guardian angel must have been watching over me when I met that salesman.

"In the last nine weeks my sales have topped the list."

With impatient eagerness I started to put into practice my new-found knowledge. The startling suddenness of the results was almost uncanny. After my next turn on the road the senior member of the firm personally congratulated me. My sales on that one trip were larger than the total of my three previous efforts. In four short months I became the best salesman on the firm's roster. I was leading even the old-timers. And from that time to this I have never once relinquished that lead.

Mr. Cranshaw's promise had come true—"Get into the selling game, if you want to go ahead," he had said—and I had.

But before I had found the all-comprising fundamental secret of salesmanship I had been as near a failure as a man can be. The rapidity of my sensational rise seems almost unbelievable—even to myself.

Don't misunderstand me: I am not trying to pat myself on the back. I am not an unusual man in any way, and do not claim to be. What I am driving at is this: If I, a young fellow who almost missed my chance, could, in the short space of four months, become a top-notch salesman, merely by the mastery of this one principle—others can do the same. And I must add my opinion to Mr. Cranshaw's: the selling game does hold the greatest promise of all for the future success.

This thing which so quickly placed me in my present highly-paid position of master salesman was a knowledge of the One Great Secret in selling, and its 100 Devices, as told in Arthur Newcomb's astonishing 7-lesson course in Super-Salesmanship. This course, I firmly believe, is the nearest existing thing to a Royal Road to Success in Selling.

It is not, like so many other salesmanship courses, a theoretical treatise. It is old-fashioned, common-sense brass-tacks. Like all other sciences, selling has for its foundation a certain permanent, bed-rock law. Ignorance of this is the reason so many salesmen fail.

Mr. Newcomb takes this law, shows it to you, explains it, and then shows you how to use it. It is your weapon. And it is worth more than all the tricks and stunts and theories of selling put together.

Mr. Newcomb does not teach or preach. From his years of experience as salesman, sales manager and student of the selling science he has condensed into this remarkable book the one great selling secret—and its one hundred simple devices which all successful salesmen must have. He gives you this secret—that is all there is to it. No matter what you are selling, the rule applies. Mr. Newcomb says: "This is the way to do it. Now go ahead." And it works. It always has worked. It has been tested and approved by every man who ever sold anything. Consciously or unconsciously, every sale that has ever been made, was made by the application of this one tremendous truth.

But do not take anybody's word for it. You can be the judge yourself. It will not cost you one penny. Simply tear out and mail the coupon. We will send the course to you absolutely free for five days' approval. Examine it carefully, test it out thoroughly. Apply the great Secret and notice the results it brings. Then, if you feel that you can get along without it, send it back; you will owe nothing. But we feel confident that you will want to keep it.

But you must act quickly, for this unusual offer may be withdrawn at any time. Detach the coupon and mail it today.

GOODBYE, CORNS

Gets-It ends corns. Millions have proved that. You put it on, it dries at once, the pain and soreness stop short. You go about your work or play and in a little while you peel the corn or callus right off with your fingers as simply as peeling a banana. It's just common sense.

"Gets-It"

is as safe as it is simple. It leaves the skin smooth and free. It makes cutting and working over corns unnecessary, and, remember, ends corns. Costs but a trifle at all Drug Stores.

Smart Coiffures

are more easily attained—and retained—by applying Liquid Silmerine before doing up the hair. And the effect is far more beautiful and charming. The hair has a brilliant sheen or lustre, gleaming and glowing under certain lights like a thing of life.

Silmerine is a valuable aid in producing any curly or wavy effect desired. The curl or wave lasts ever so long, and has all the appearance of "Nature's own."

Liquid Silmerine Is agreeable to use, is perfectly harmless—serves as a beneficial dressing for the hair, keeping it soft, silky, fluffy. Easily applied with brush; is neither sticky nor greasy. Silmerine is obtainable at drug stores and at toilet counters generally.

See Superfluous Hair Roots Come Right Out

New, different, better than all depilatory and electrical treatments is the marvelous Phelactine process. It actually removes the roots as well as hair on the surface; does this very quickly, leaving the skin perfectly smooth and hairless. Get a stick of prepared Phelactine from your druggist, follow the easy instructions, and with your own eyes watch the hair-roots come out! You'll be astonished and delighted. Phelactine is odorless, non-irritating, and so harmless you could eat it.

How to Bathe Face to Remove Wrinkles

Since its remarkable astringent and tonic properties became known, clever women all over the country have been using the Saxolite face bath to "tone up" their faces, remove wrinkles and draw flabby cheeks and neck back to normal. After using, the face immediately feels much firmer. The skin tightens evenly, thus reducing lines and sagginess. The formula is: Powdered Saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in witch hazel, one-half pint. These harmless ingredients are of course obtainable at any drug store.

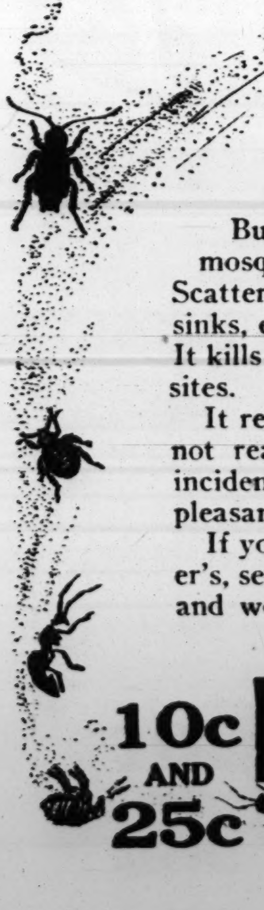
DEATH TO FLIES, ANTS, ROACHES
HARMLESS TO HUMANS

There is no excuse for house vermin while Bull Dog Brand is obtainable. Do not let these pests contaminate your food, clothing and sleeping rooms, tracking filth and spreading disease germs wherever they go. Once the common house fly was thought to be a useful scavenger. Modern science teaches that he is often a messenger of death—that he is simply crawling with deadly organisms.

Bull Dog Brand is a powder made from the heads of pyrethrum flowers (flowers naturally deadly to insects). It is non-poisonous, containing no paris green or other poisons. It is harmless to children or animals, but quick and certain death to flies, ants, roaches, bed bugs.



The patented Bellows package is the blower. It fits the hand. Punch the small end, press the large end, and shoot a fine stream of this death-dealing insecticide into cracks and holes.

Bull Dog Brand is equally effective against mosquitoes, flies, cockroaches, ants, bed-bugs. Scatter it along baseboards, in closets, around sinks, etc. Blow it on animals, trees and shrubs. It kills fleas and other animal and vegetable parasites.

It reaches corners and crevices that liquid cannot reach. There is no disagreeable dampness incident to its use. The slight odor is decidedly pleasant. No one will ever know you have used it.

If you cannot buy Bull Dog Brand at your dealer's, send us 25c together with your dealer's name and we will send you a trial package post-paid.

Elastic Brassiere

is made entirely of porous woven surgical elastic web, which "gives" freely to every movement of the body, yet firmly holds the figure. Lends grace with absolute comfort. Our patented method of construction and character of materials used make it equally desirable for street, dancing, evening or sport wear; white or flesh tint. Retail, Misses' lengths, $5.00 to $7.00. Adults' lengths, $5.50 to $15.00.

CAUTION. The TREO GIRDLE has feature strip of elastic waist-line band, and, therefore, supports the body above and below waist-line. If not at your dealer's, write for Free Booklet.

TREO "Paraknit" Brassiere is made of "PARAKNIT," a new kind of light-weight, open-work, elastic material, invented by the TREO COMPANY expressly for bust reducing, bust supporting brassieres. It is very flexible, and extremely stylish, and gives a perfectly natural and graceful contour to the bust. The diaphragm feature is of non-elastic material and is very advantageous, as it supports and reduces the diaphragm. Made in white or flesh tint in sizes from 34 to 50—at your dealer's at $3.00 and $3.50, or write for illustrated Booklet.

Beautify your Hair with

"DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a gottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

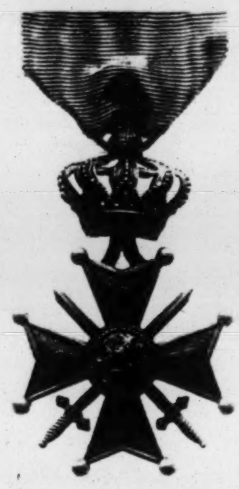
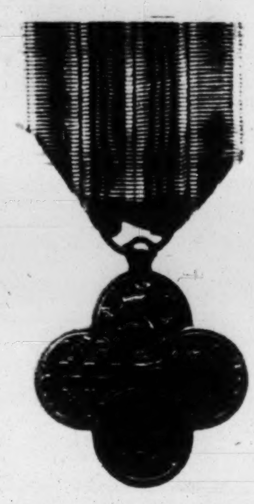
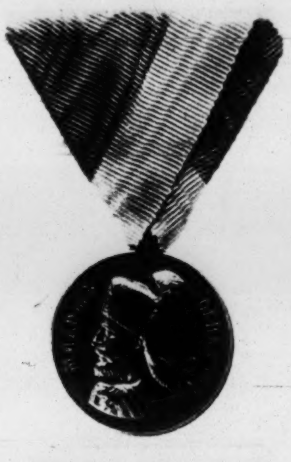
CROIX DE GUERRE—Instituted by French law on April 8, 1915. A citation on orders of the army carries a bronze palm on the ribbon, which is black and green.



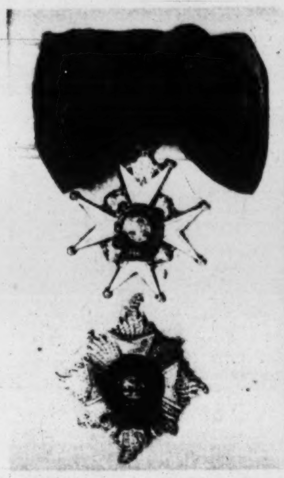
CROIX DE GUERRE—A Belgian order established in 1915 as an outgrowth of the world war. It is awarded for distinguished services in the theater of operations.



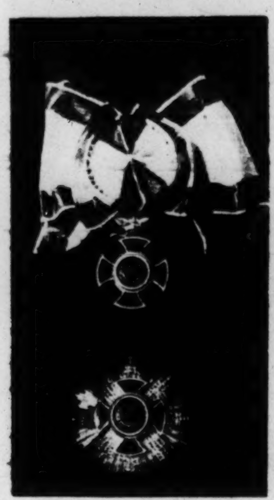
WAR CROSS OF CZECHO-SLOVAKIA—One of the two decorations recently established by the new republic and only given for military services.



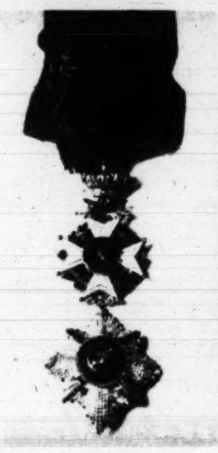
OBILITCH MEDAL OF MONTENEGRO—Founded in 1851 by Prince Danilo I. Awarded to officers and men only for extraordinary heroism on the battlefield, or to a general of a victorious army. It is very rarely bestowed.



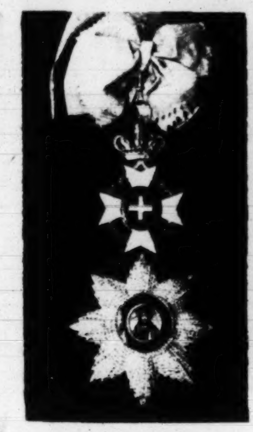
THE MOST HONORABLE ORDER OF THE BATH—The senior military order of Great Britain, instituted in 1399 by King Henry IV. It was presented to Gen. Pershing by King George V. of England.



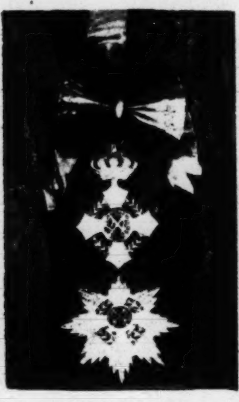
ORDER OF PRINCE DANILO I. OF MONTENEGRO—King Nicholas established this order in 1860 in celebration of the independence of Montenegro.



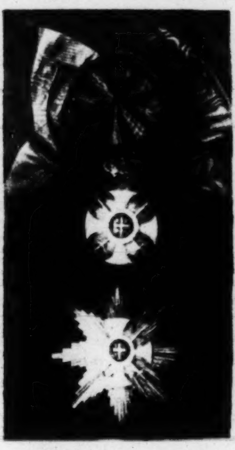
ORDER OF LEOPOLD OF BELGIUM—This is the senior Belgian order, instituted in 1872. It was presented by Albert V., king of the Belgians, in person.



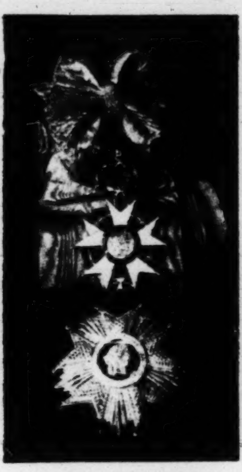
ROYAL ORDER OF THE REDEEMER—The senior order of Greece, founded in 1833 by King Otto to commemorate the overthrow of the Turkish rule and the re-establishment of Grecian independence.



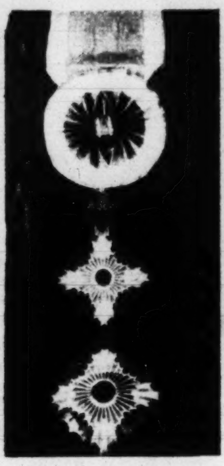
MILITARY ORDER OF SAVOY—Instituted by King Victor Emmanuel I. of Sardinia in 1815 to commemorate the re-establishment of the Kingdom of Sardinia after its overthrow by Napoleon. It is bestowed only for military services.



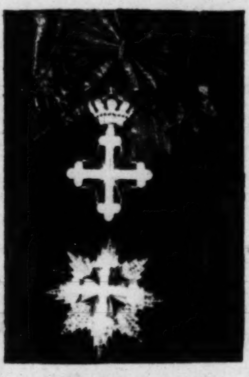
STAR OF KARAGEORGE OF SERBIA—It was founded by the present king, Peter I. of Serbia; to commemorate the deeds of his grandfather, Karageorge, founder of the dynasty.



LEGION OF HONOR OF FRANCE—Established by the great Napoleon in 1802 to reward both civil and military services. Presented by President Poincare.



ORDER OF THE RISING SUN—This is the older Japanese decoration, instituted in 1876 by the late Emperor Mutsuhito. It is conferred for both civil and military services.



ORDER OF ST. MAURICE AND ST. LAZARUS OF ITALY—The order of St. Maurice was founded by Duke Amadeus VIII. of Savoy in 1434 and the order of St. Lazarus established in Jerusalem by the early Crusaders. In 1573 these orders were united by Pope Gregory XIII.

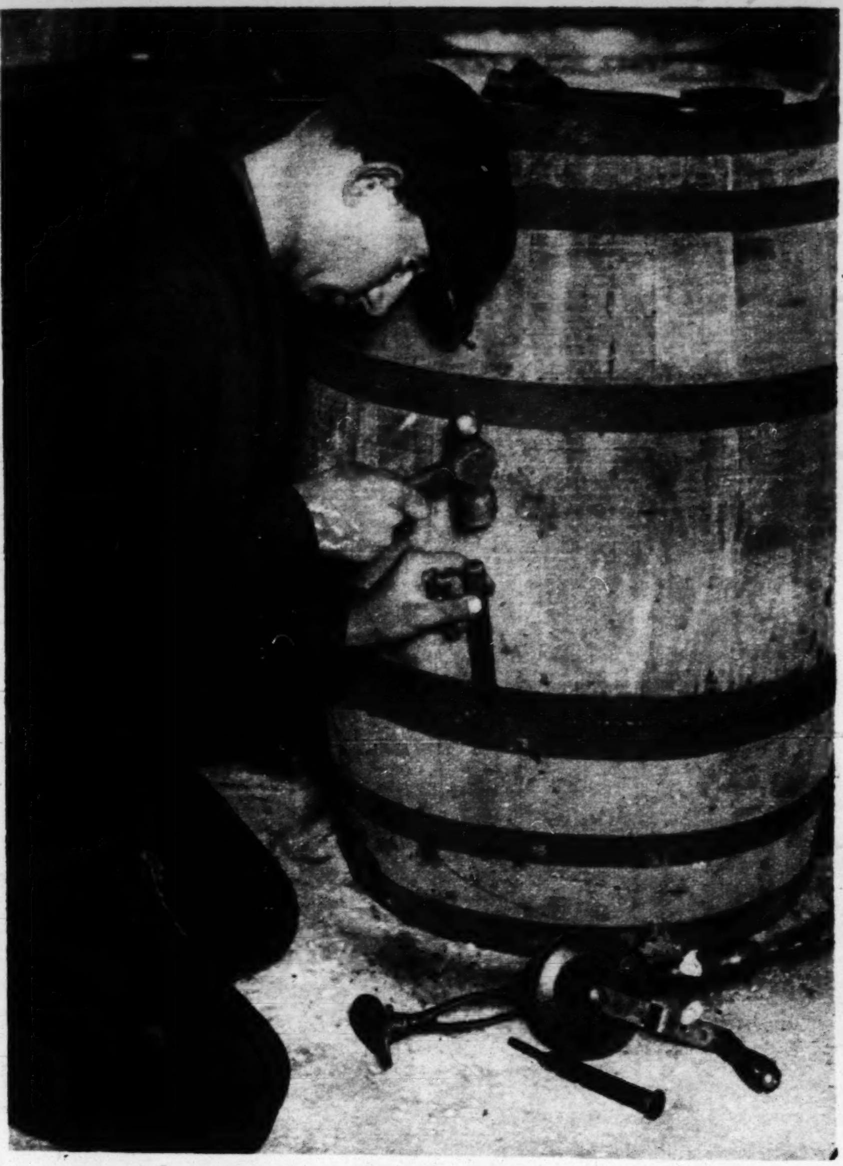
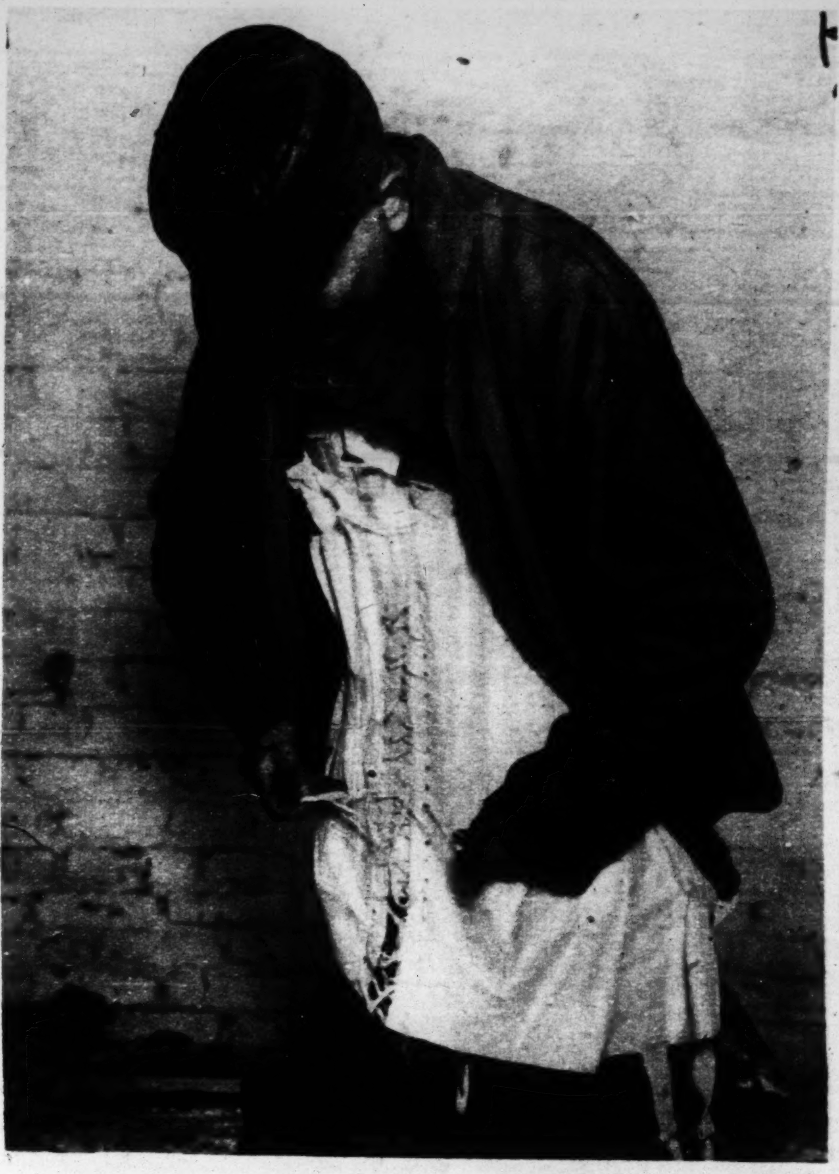
No wonder foreign consignees rage when they unload and examine shipments from America. Here you see the reason for the rage.

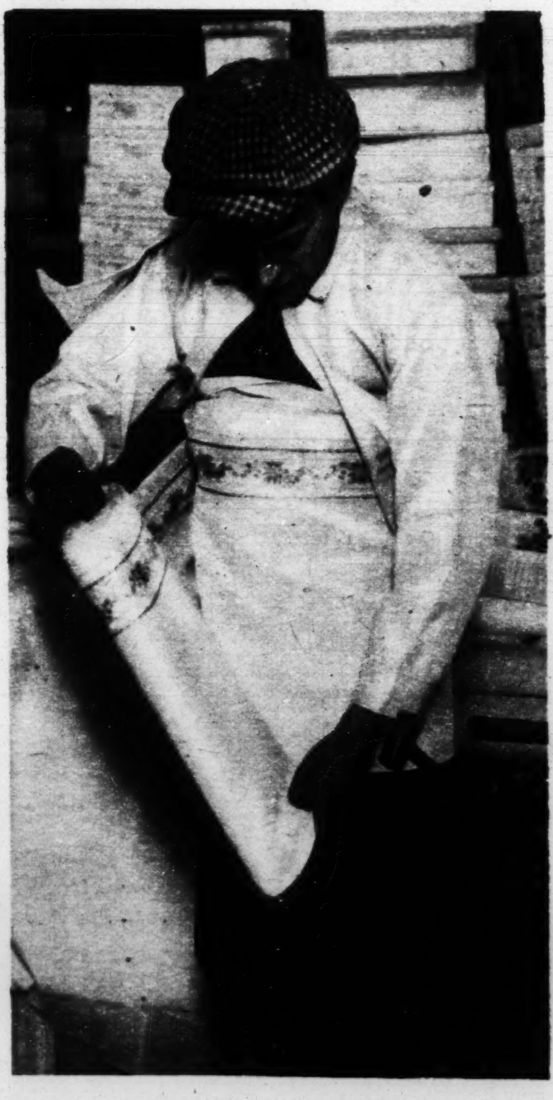
(Photographs from Press Publishing company.)



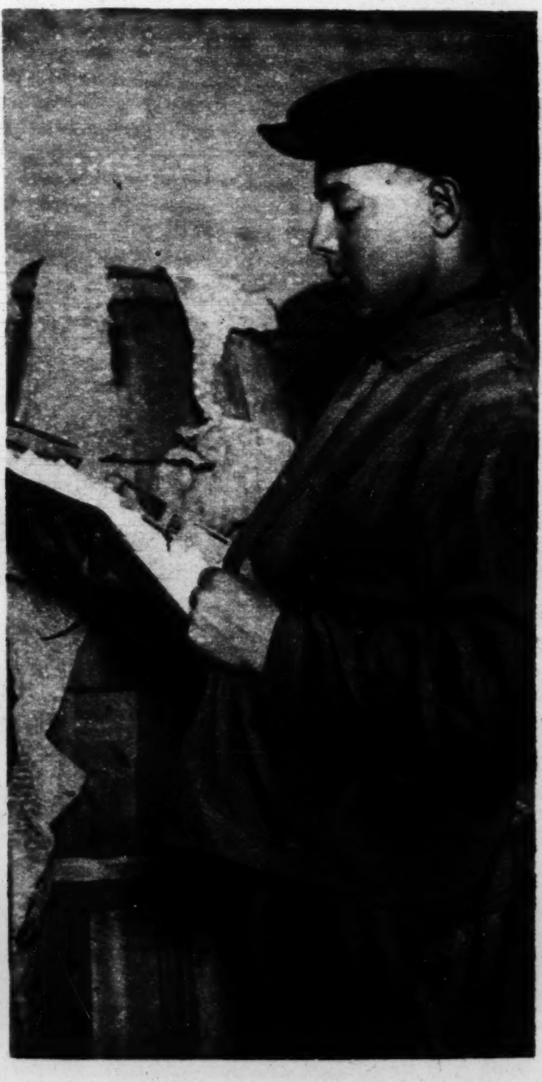
UNQUENCHING THE ALIEN THIRST—The New York booze beagles bringing home the makin'——of a spry young spree. They (1) remove a hoop· (2) bore a small hole; (3) insert a rubber pipe; (4) fill a hot water bag with the whisky; (5) tie the bag around their bodies and (6) walk ashore in safety.



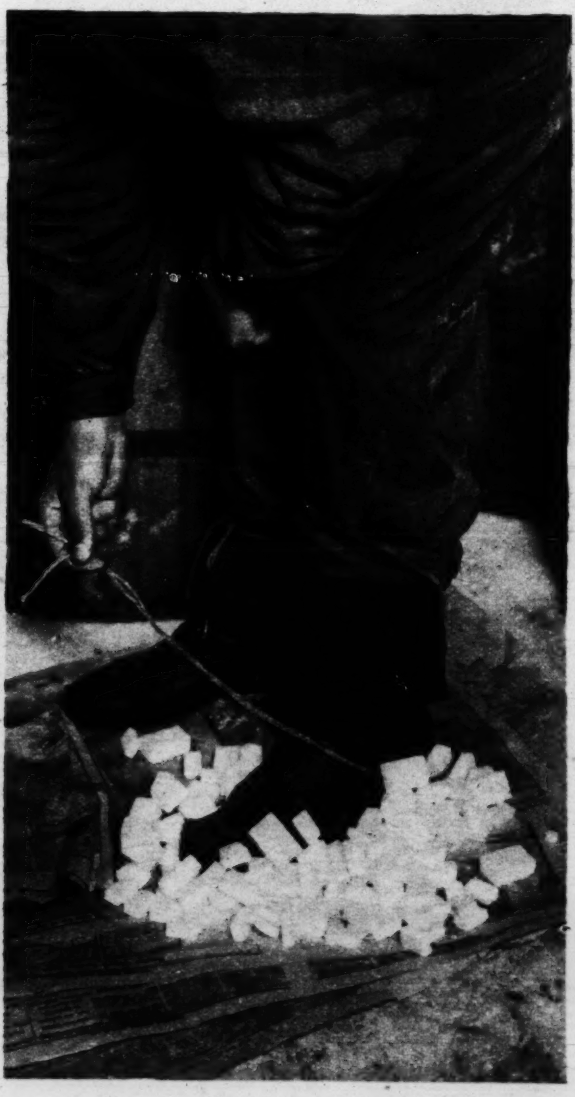
THE HUMAN FORM DIVINE INSPIRES—That is, it inspires the purchaser abroad with murderous thoughts. One of the prominent members of the Longshoremen's Debating and Social club is shown as he nabs the lissome corset. Note the dimpled hands drawing in the strings! He doesn't use the little things hanging down.



PILFERING PONGEE BY THE POUND—Is he thinking of Mag, his loved one, or Mike, the "fence"? Anyhow, he wraps yards of tricotine, voile, organdie, and other precious goods about his body, covers them with his jacket, and prances down the gangplank; a little stouter, perhaps, but proving that work agrees with him.



SWEETS TO THE SWEET—This chap is not one of the marsupial species, feeding his young; he is a firm believer in Hooverism. That is, he is conserving sugar; keeping the valuable commodity in America on the popular principle—American sugar for the Americans. The bottoms of his pants are tied to keep the sugar in.



PUTTING HIS DOGS ON A SUGAR DIET—One twitch of the string, and lo, this saccharine prestidigitator unloads his cargo at home, and the little ones there may eat all the sugar they yearn for. The flapping legs of the overalls prevent detection of the gathered-in trouser legs beneath, and the thief gets away.

The Charm of a Powdered Skin

The Trial Jar pictured in the coupon has shown thousands of women the La Meda way of applying face powder to the skin.

If you have not as yet sent for yours, there is a dainty little jar of awaiting your request. When you use La Meda Cold Creamed Powder you will realize, possibly for the first time, what a charm there is in a perfectly powdered skin.

La Meda
Cold Creamed Powder

Applied with the finger tips, there can be no unevenness—for every tiny crevice receives its protecting film of velvety freshness—yet there is never the slightest suggestion of an artificial or overdone toilet.

La Meda Cold Creamed Powder is not affected by wind, rain or perspiration—so is an especial boon for those who motor, golf, dance or engage in any sports out of doors. One powdering with La Meda will last for several hours and you will not need the continual retouch of a powder puff.

Being highly beneficial to the skin, it is recommended for constant, daily use. Tints—Flesh, White, Brunette.

Any druggist or toilet counter anywhere can get La Meda Cold Creamed Powder for you—or it will be sent postpaid on receipt of 65 cents for a large jar.

WHERE TWISTING THE LION'S TAIL IS A JOY FOREVER—This photograph shows one of many remarkable scenes staged outside of Mountjoy prison, Dublin, when 104 Sinn Feiners were dying as the results of a hunger strike. The Irish were careful not to start hostilities with the policemen, contenting themselves with yelling and milling about. The crowd shown here is shouting to prisoners whom they see through a cell window. The captives were released later by the British authorities.

THERE SHE BLOWS! OR SHE DID A LITTLE WHILE AGO—The old method of hunting the whale is still followed by the English crews. The harpoon gun is on the whaler's prow. It looks like a small cannon and about a pound of powder is used to discharge the harpoon, which weighs several hundred pounds. The lance head pierces the whale and explodes a bomb in it. Two lines of 1,800 feet are used. In this case, another whale was sighted, and the dead one was marked with a flag and left to drift. The seagulls see a chance for a dainty morsel before the whale is reclaimed and towed to land.

KLORIA

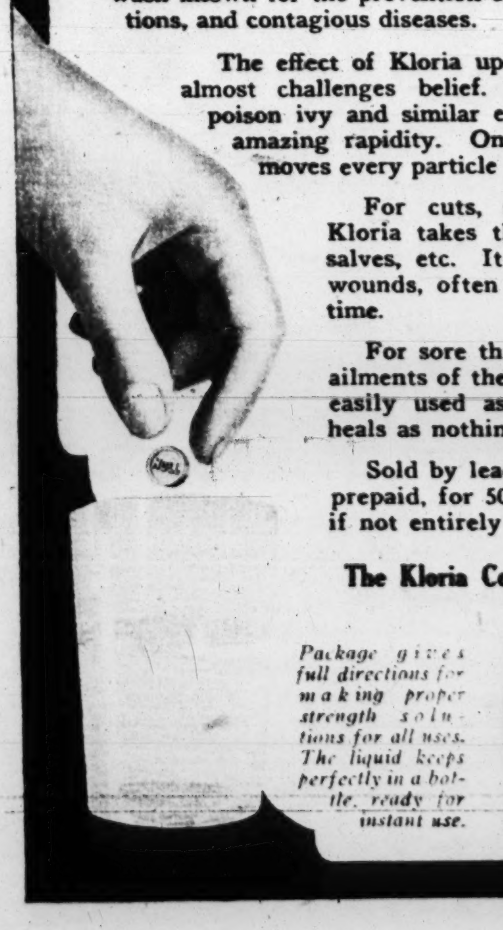
The War's Greatest Victory

The new healing antiseptic which saved countless wounded soldiers. Now used for infected gums, skin eruptions and other germ ailments.

When American scientists conquered the wound-infection which had been killing thousands of Allied soldiers, the world received a wonderful new key to health. All the old standard antiseptics, used for centuries, proved unable to control blood poison and lock-jaw among the wounded. The new chlorine antiseptic, invented to meet this need of the Allies, succeeded where all other healing methods had failed. Wounds often healed in one-fourth the usual time.

This same quick-healing antiseptic is now available for use in every home and factory. Any reliable druggist can supply it in tablet form, named Kloria. The concentrated tablets are used, with surprising economy, by dissolving in ordinary water.

Kloria destroys the most virulent germs on contact. It is over 100 times more germ-destroying than peroxide and other old-standard antiseptics. Yet it is non-poisonous, doesn't smart, is soothing and harmless, and may be used for any germ-infection of the mouth, nose, throat, or skin.



For tender, bleeding, shrinking gums, Kloria does what no other antiseptic has ever done—checks the germ cause promptly. All gum soreness and bleeding usually disappear within one week. It makes the most effective mouth wash known for the prevention of tooth decay, gum infections, and contagious diseases.

The effect of Kloria upon infections of the skin almost challenges belief. Eczema, barber's itch, poison ivy and similar eruptions fade away with amazing rapidity. One application usually removes every particle of dandruff.

For cuts, sores, burns and boils, Kloria takes the place of all old-time salves, etc. It heals as it healed war-wounds, often in one-fourth the usual time.

For sore throat, tonsilitis, and other ailments of the nasal passages, Kloria is easily used as a spray or gargle and heals as nothing else has ever done.

Sold by leading druggists or mailed, prepaid, for 50 cents. Money refunded if not entirely satisfied.

The Kloria Company, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Package gives full directions for making proper strength solutions for all uses. The liquid keeps perfectly in a bottle, ready for instant use.

LILY OF FRANCE CORSET

CHAS·A·STEVENS & BROS.

THE LILY OF FRANCE CORSETS

Women say La-may stays on better than any other face powder.

Up to the present time it has been almost impossible to get a face powder to stay on the face longer than it takes to put it on. You powder your nose nicely, and the first gust of wind or the first puff of your handkerchief and away goes the powder, leaving your nose shiny and conspicuous, probably just at the very moment when you would give anything to appear at your best. A specialist has at last perfected a pure powder that really stays on; that stays on until you wash it off. It does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder to make it stay on. This improved formula contains a medicinal powder doctors prescribe to improve the complexion. In fact, this powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores and irritations. It is also astringent, discouraging flabbiness, crow's feet and wrinkles. This unusual powder is called La-may (French, Poudre L'Ame). Because La-may is pure and because it stays on so well it is already used by over a million American women. All dealers carry the large sixty-cent box, and many dealers also carry the generous thirty-cent size. When you use this harmless powder and see how beautifully it improves your complexion, you will understand why La-may so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in New York. Women who have used all kinds of face powders say they cannot buy better than La-may anywhere at any price. Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th St., New York.

New Way to Wash Your Face Beautifies Your Complexion

Beauty specialists agree that the secret of a perfect complexion is a thoroughly clean skin. A specialist has perfected a new substance, Ara-Mara, which is not only excellent for washing the face, but it cannot injure the most delicate complexion. It will not, cannot grow hair. All you do is to gently massage it into the skin and wash with plain warm water. It not only cleanses thoroughly, but it lightens the complexion much better than lemon juice or face bleach. It is surprising to see how fresh, clear and wholesome the skin becomes, even after only one proper treatment. Those who use it declare it has done more real good than any complexion treatment they ever used. It's a wonderful treatment for enlarged, cloggy pores and irritations. It certainly is a great blessing to those who are afraid of wrinkles and who have dull, sallow, lifeless complexions. You can always get Ara-Mara at any big store. If you live out of town and your home dealer has not got it, you can order 50 cents' worth of Ara-Mara by mail of Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th Street, New York

"Let's p'tend like—"

MY little Kate and I were sitting together that sweet hour before bed-time, and her dear, childish treble had just said those words which always thrill a grown-up with the reality of a child's fairy-tale world.

"All right," I said, "what shall we p'tend like?"

"Let's p'tend like—like we were going on a long journey—way away—and we could only take just the bestest things—'sides you and me." My arm tightened around her. "I'll take dollie! What'll you take?"

"Well," I said, "suppose I take—Rover! He'll be just fine to take care of us. But aren't we going to let Daddy come too?"

" 'Course we will! And I know what Daddy'll take. He'll just take some soap!" And she nodded her head wisely.

"Why soap, dearie?" I asked, trying to hide my smile.

"Don't you 'member what he said this morning, Muvver? He said, 'Gosh! but I can't stand that soap down at the office! Won't you get a dozen more Pears' so I can take some down with me?' That's zackly what he said, now isn't it, Muvver?"

And it was—almost word for word.

What memories children have! Nothing ever seems to escape them. I remember how awfully embarrassed we were last summer when visiting Hal's eldest sister, and Kate gravely said to her one morning, "Aunt Louise, why don't you use Pears' soap? Muvver and Daddy say they just hate the kind you use!"

Wasn't that terrible? And yet, if we grown-ups got back a little of the truthfulness of childhood, I believe we'd be happier. And certainly Pears' is the soap that agrees best with one's skin—so why shouldn't we say so!

Kate hasn't the slightest idea what "toning" does to soap, but in that shrewd little head of hers she has worked out that there's something special about Pears'.

A Great WOMAN EDITOR—

who receives thousands of letters from women asking how to improve their Complexions and their Hands, gives this simple prescription as the "great secret"—

"Find the soap that agrees with your skin"

Why "HEAT-TONING" makes soap agree with most skins

Up to a certain point Pears' is much the same as any other pure, carefully made soap the same up to the point where others are ready to tint, scent and wrap for sale.

At this stage the makers of Pears' consider all soaps as still "green" or raw. To make it absolutely in agreement with the texture of the most delicate skins, Pears' is then Heat-Toned by the process worked out by Mr. Pears, 131 years ago.

Pears' Heat-Toning Process

In the Heat-Toning retorts, Pears' mellows from its first creamy color to a dusky topaz and then to wine color. There is not a bit of artificial coloring in Pears'; its coloring is as natural as the beautiful bloom is to the rose.

Just so, Heat-Toning is a natural, scientific process which refines soap, taking away the harshness and leaving it a beneficial cleansing agent which soothes the skin while it cleanses the pores. It is this toning process which makes Pears' different from all other soaps, which brings this one soap into harmony with the inner life of the skin.

What Pears' Does For You

"Raw" soaps are not good for the skin. The reason is that they are entirely too strong, go too deeply into the millions of tiny pores, and take away much of the natural oils which help to keep the skin young looking and fresh.

'Pears', through its Heat-Toning process, is mellowed to agree with the skin. This toning, together with fine ingredients, produces the soap which looks after your skin health and, at the same time, gives you a grateful smoothness and a delicate, elusive fragrance.

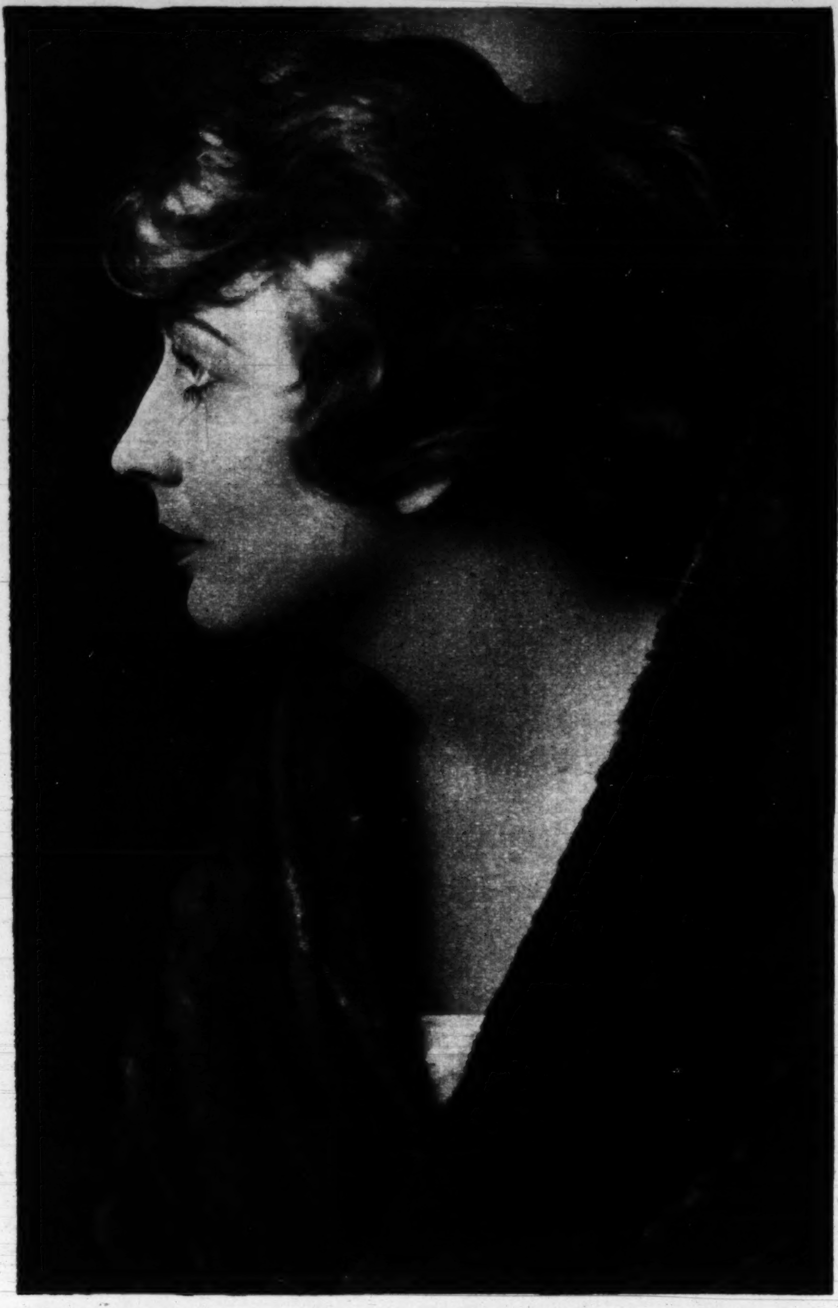
COLLEEN MOORE is one of the cleverest of the younger stars. Her middle name is Noylan.

She was born in Port Huron, Mich., in 1900, and after graduating from the Convent of the Holy Name in Tampa, Fla., went to Triangle, where she was immediately recognized as more or less of a wonder child. Since then she's been making good steadily. You remember her probably best in comedies and with Charles Ray.

Miss Moore is 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 105 pounds, and has brown hair and eyes. Keep your eye on this little lady. If they don't spoil her she's going to be quite somebody some day.

Mae Tinee.



DOROTHY DALTON has appeared here a number of times before. You are presented with her picture this morning, not because she's been perpetrating anything new or unusual—of course, you know she's been doing "Aphrodite" for the "legitimate?"—but that we happened to have a picture that seemed just exactly right for your motion picture album.

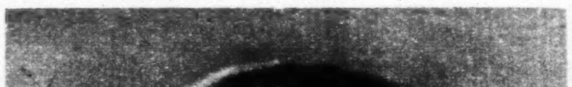
LIONEL BARRYMORE



ETHEL BARRYMORE

JOHN BARRYMORE.

THE BRILLIANT BARRYMORES AGAIN—This distinguished trio appeared in these pages recently in the conventional guise of grownups. Here they are at somewhat earlier and less familiar stages of their careers. The photographs were found by the Chicago Historical society in the collection of the late Will J. Davis, and are submitted herewith as rarities for your photograph album.

Lionel was born in 1877, Ethel in 1879, and John in 1882, which gives you some idea of when these pictures were taken. It is said of them that Lionel wanted to be a painter, Ethel a pianist, and John an illustrator, and that all were much disappointed when they found they couldn't. Such is life.

It Cools Without Ice
It Needs No Attention

Kelvinator is a practical refrigerating plant for your home. It eliminates the ice-man.

It cools your refrigerator automatically—without care. You get rid of the nuisance of sloppy, unsanitary, delivered ice without taking on the duty of its supervision.

Thermostat control performs this task for you.

Kelvinator produces a degree of cold impossible to secure with ice. It is a dry, even cold.

This even temperature keeps meats, eggs, butter, vegetables—fresh and sweet until you are ready to use them. They won't mold, nor get stale and musty. Your refrigerator is free from unpleasant odors.

In all Kelvinator gives you a home cold storage plant, as efficient in its small proportions as the big commercial plants where food is stored for months without deterioration.

With Kelvinator you can order food in quantity and use as needed, without fear of loss from spoiling. This helps reduce living cost.

It freezes ice for table use—the only ice that is safe to use for chilling drinking water.

Refrigerates Without Ice

R. M. OWEN & COMPANY, Inc.

Dept. 35, 1825 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago

Iceless Refrigeration for Every Home

Kelvinator is small, simple and compact. It is used in your own refrigerator. The job of installation is easy.

Once in, you can forget it. Kelvinator does its work automatically, day in and day out. It positively does not require a minute of your supervision.

Kelvinator is as economical as it is convenient. It saves the price of ice and keeps expensive foods from spoiling.

The protection to the family health is equally important. Delivered ice should never come near food because of the danger of contamination.

For even if ice is frozen artificially from distilled water, it must come to you through dusty streets in dirty wagons. It sits on the sidewalk in the dirt. It is handled repeatedly.

By the time it reaches your ice-box such ice is unsafe for use, a real source of danger.

This danger can only be banished by making your own ice. Commercial ice cannot be sanitary.

Are you pounding away your energy?

FRESH and vigorous in the morning—yet long before the day's work is done you begin to tire. By half-past three or four fatigue is stealing your strength.

This fatigue decreases the amount of work you can do. It makes pleasure less enjoyable. It lowers your resistance to disease.

A certain amount of fatigue is natural and inevitable—but too many men and women waste much of their precious energy.

One of the greatest of these wastes comes from pounding away your energy on hard, modern pavements. If you are a person of average activity you take 8,000 steps a day. Every step you take with hard leather heels or "dead" rubber heels acts as a hammer blow to your nervous system. The constant repetition of these jolts and jars tends to exhaust your energy—to produce that tired-out feeling you so often experience.

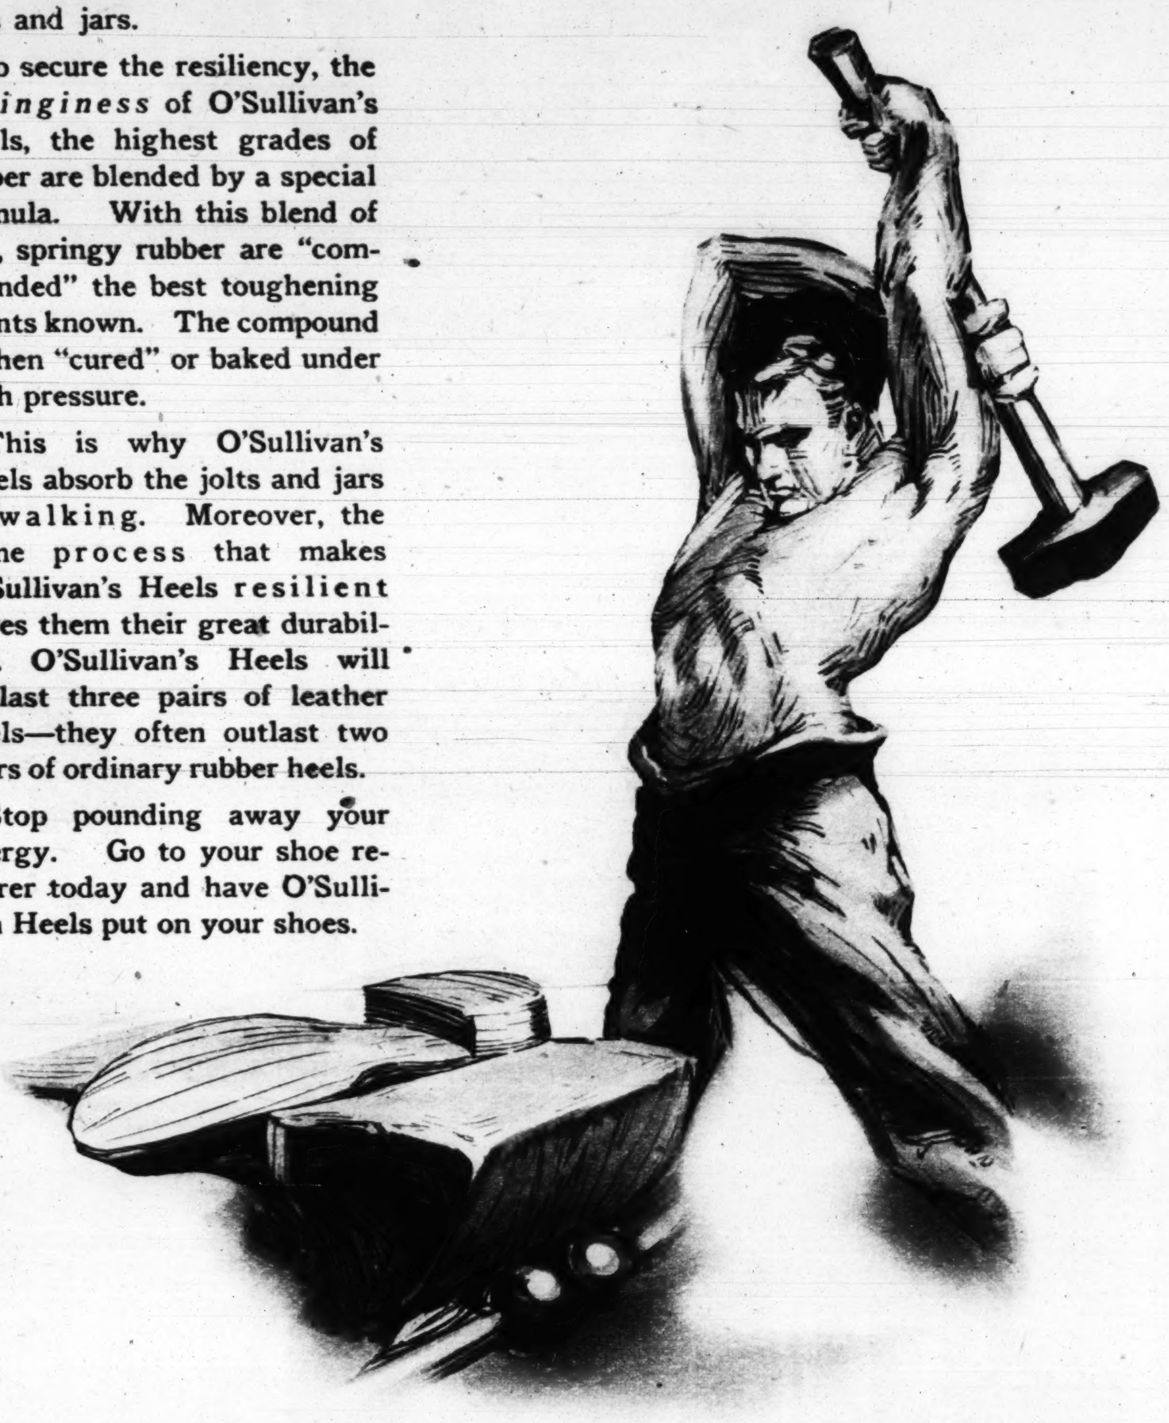
Remove this cause of fatigue

You can do much to prevent this condition. You can eliminate the shocks of pounding hard heels on still harder pavements. O'Sullivan's Heels are especially made to absorb these jolts and jars.

To secure the resiliency, the springiness of O'Sullivan's Heels, the highest grades of rubber are blended by a special formula. With this blend of live, springy rubber are "compounded" the best toughening agents known. The compound is then "cured" or baked under high pressure.

This is why O'Sullivan's Heels absorb the jolts and jars of walking. Moreover, the same process that makes O'Sullivan's Heels resilient gives them their great durability. O'Sullivan's Heels will outlast three pairs of leather heels—they often outlast two pairs of ordinary rubber heels.

Stop pounding away your energy. Go to your shoe repairer today and have O'Sullivan Heels put on your shoes.



Every step a hammer blow

Advancing civilization has covered over the soft dirt streets and paths of years ago with layers of hard, unyielding pavement. When we walked on country roadways the earth itself cushioned the jolts and jars of walking. Then, leather heels served their purpose. But today hard heels are doomed.

With every step on leather heels or "dead" rubber heels you are pounding away your energy. Each step acts as a hammer blow to your nervous system—tends to exhaust your strength. Yet you can prevent this needless waste of energy. O'Sullivan's Heels absorb the shocks that tire you out.

Glimpses of the Newest Modes for Outdoor Wear, as Seen in an Afternoon Stroll Through the French Capital and Its Environs.

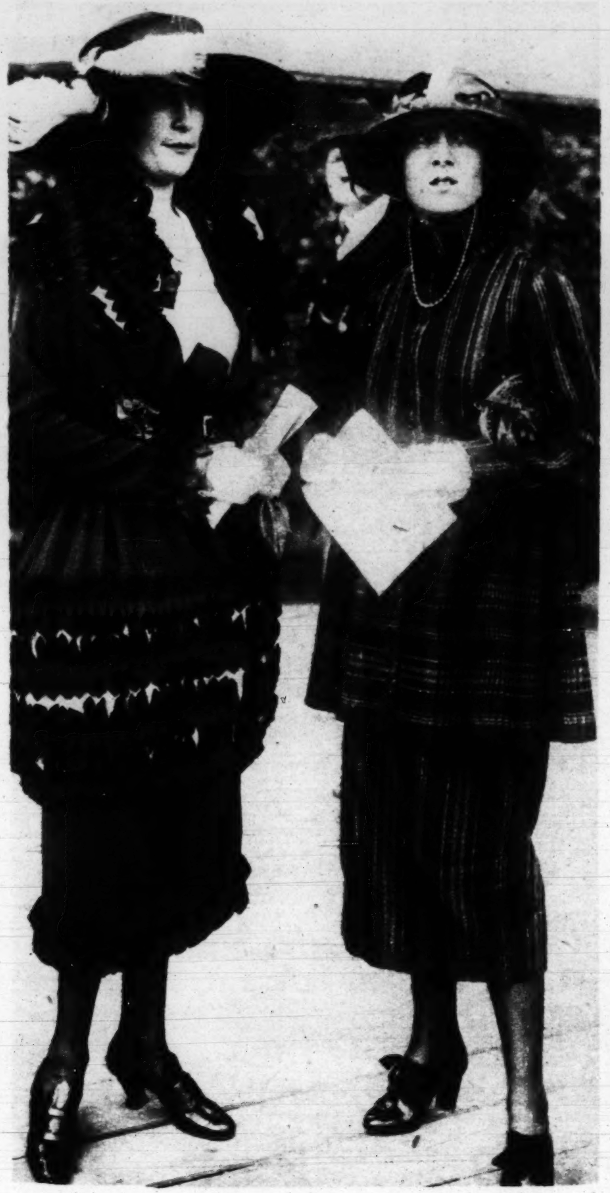
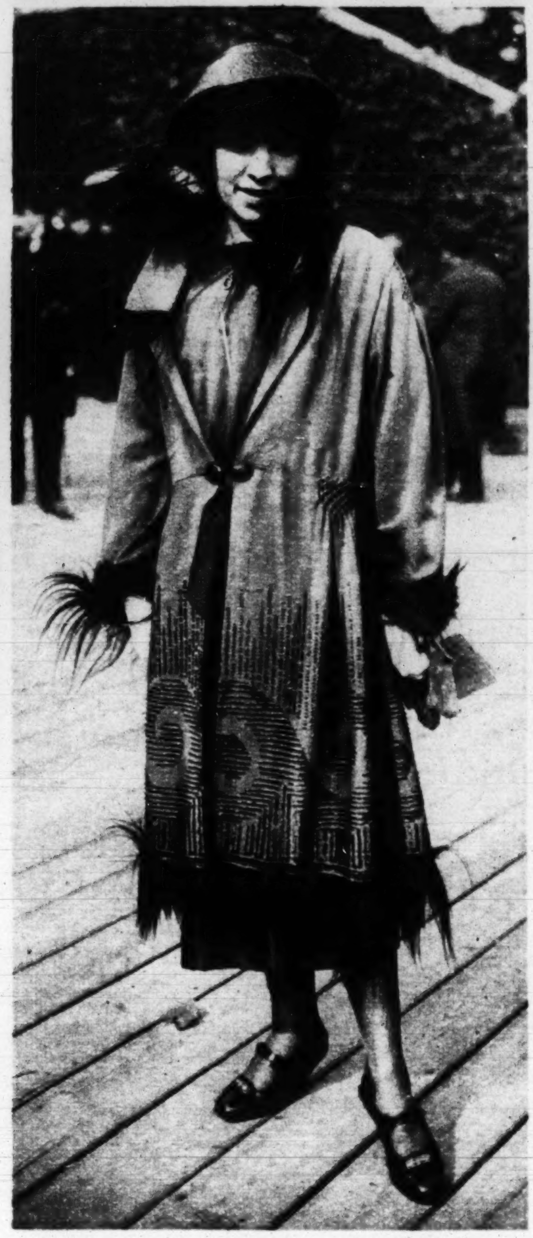
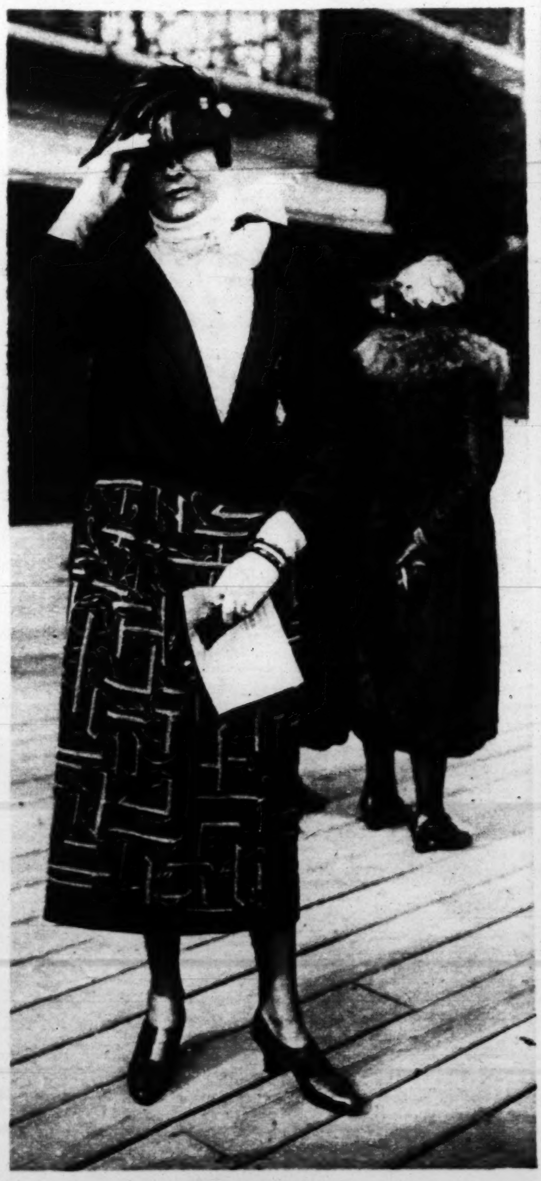
At Auteuil appeared this suit, extreme in its irregularity of cut, conspicuous in its spectacular purple and white coloring, and reaching in length quite to the ankle; this last by way of shrieking defiance at the ultra shortness of the sartorial skirt.



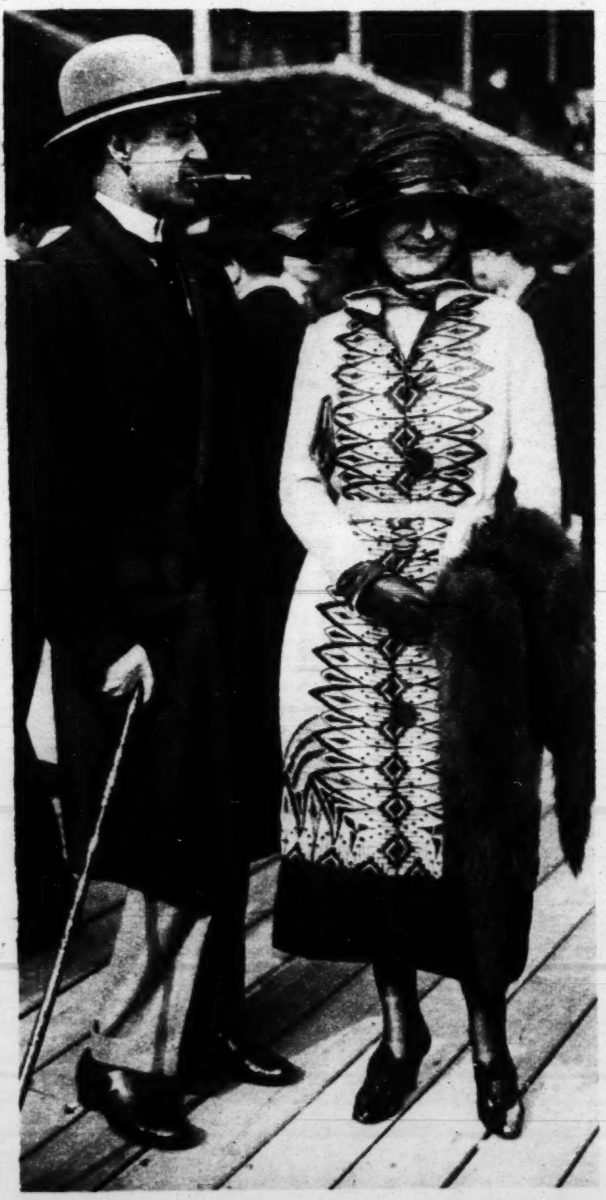
My kingdom for a change, cries Paris Fashion. And brings out such a suit as on the left, of peacock blue, extravagantly plaited, stiffly bouffant, and, at the right, of geranium red with stripes and plaids of white running down and up and around.



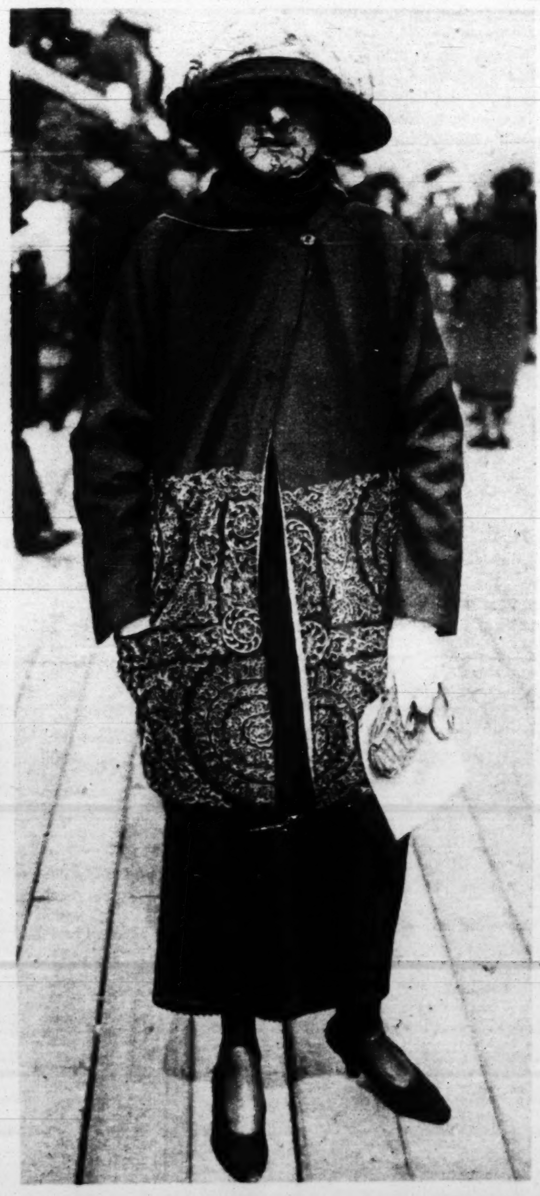
Oriental is this wrap of jet embroidered velour with its smoky edgings and collar of feathery darkness. It is less novel than bizarre, less extreme than different.



Vorticism in clothes as well as in art is one of the latest decrees from the city of fashion. Here curves and angles adorn the skirt, with severity of line in the waist, and topped by a flowering choker of organdie and satin.



Here a flamboyant note is struck in this coat of white broadcloth, gorgeously embroidered in jade green and blue. The same shade of green bands the bottom of the coat and faces the softly crushed collar.



Like a rare old tapestry of the Gothic period hangs this coat of mauve with its elaborately embroidered edge of ivory and gold. The line of the skirt has dropped to ankle length and is of plaited wistaria serge.

Good Morning!

Feeling great after a night's rest on a De Luxe Bedspring

That ready, wide-awake morning feeling after a solid night's sleep is what everybody has who uses De Luxe Bedsprings. People who have the "grumps" in the morning blame it on nerves or some physical disturbance, when the real cause in most cases is just the wrong bedspring.

Sleeping on the wrong bedspring throws the body out of alignment, and this puts strain on certain muscles which, in order to relieve the strain and get some rest, forces the sleeper to change positions very often during the night and to toss about restlessly.

The only bedspring which fully meets all the demands of the human anatomy in-so-far as healthful, restful, and relaxed sleep is concerned, is the De Luxe Bedspring.

Examine a De Luxe at your dealer's—compare it with other types of bedsprings—you will at once see the obviously superior, luxurious comfort of the De Luxe.

Finished in Rome gray enamel and made to last a lifetime. For wood or metal beds. Look for the De Luxe trademark on the side bar of the spring—it is your guarantee.

If you live in Canada, address The Andrew Jergens Co., Limited, 26 Sherbrooke Street, Perth, Ontario.

oily skin and shiny nose

How to correct them

With warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

This treatment will make your skin fresher and clearer the first time you use it. Make it a nightly habit, and before long you will see a marked improvement.

Blackheads

How to keep your skin free from them

Apply hot cloths to the face until the skin is reddened. Then with a rough washcloth, work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with clear, hot water, then with cold. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Dry the skin carefully.

To remove blackheads already formed, substitute a flesh brush for the washcloth in the treatment above. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads.

Skin blemishes—how to get rid of them

Just before retiring, wash in your usual way with warm water and Woodbury's Facial Soap and then dry your face. Now dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy cream-like lather. Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this soap cream and leave it on for ten minutes. Then rinse very carefully, first with clear, hot water; then with cold.

Use Woodbury's regularly in your daily toilet. This will make your skin so firm and active that it will resist the frequent cause of blemishes and clear your skin.

Wonderful colored flakes

10c

That give your faded blouses lovelier colors than you have ever been able to get before

NEW colored flakes that are made to give lovelier colors to everything you wear! They give the colors you have wanted to wash into your faded blouses and camisoles, but never could find.

The shimmering Twink flakes dissolve instantly in boiling or very hot water. They whip up into a bowlful of gay lather. You put in your yellowed blouse or your camisole, faded by careless washing, swish it about for a few minutes—and all in a twinkling it gets a smart new turquoise or bisque.

Colors that turn out right every time

Every one of the 21 Twink colors was selected with the help of the highest authorities in this country on the colors of women's clothes. These colors turn out right every time, clear and unstreaked—and so fast you can wash your blouse several times before its next Twinking. And Twink will not harm any fabric that pure water alone will not harm.

Get today two or three packages of Twink in your favorite colors and just follow the surprisingly easy directions that come with the package. The department stores, 5 and 10 cent stores and your druggist have Twink. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

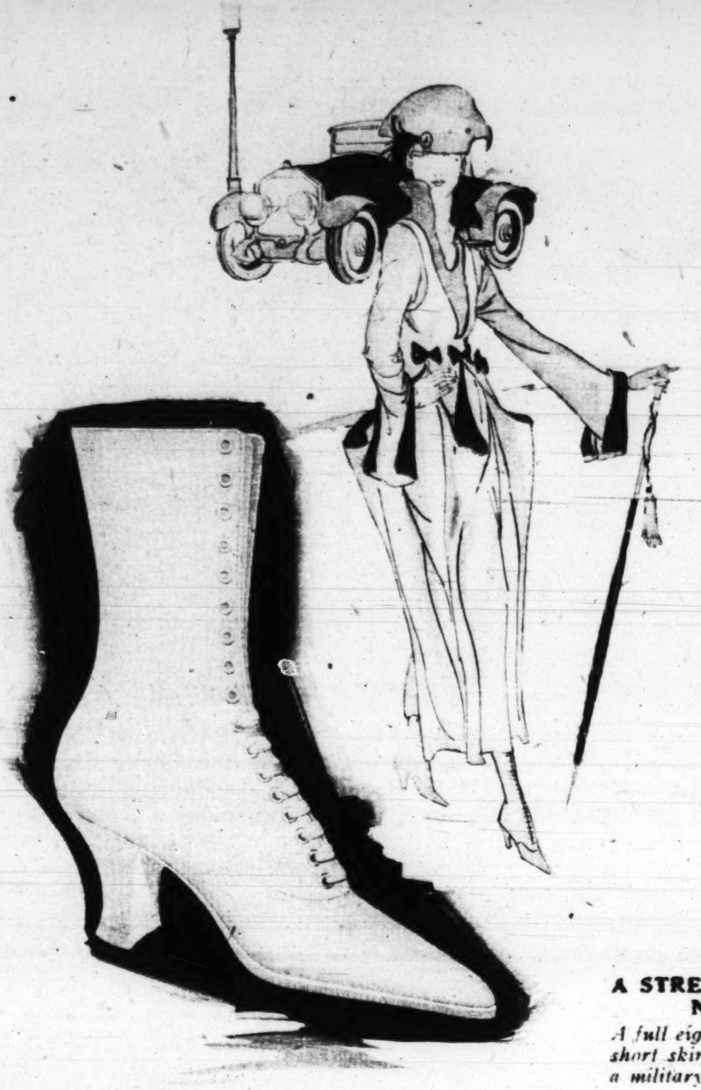
The footwear that American women have wished for

A wide variety of models in trim, stylish shoes—so reasonable you can afford a different pair for practically every gown



Many charming shoes for women —others for men and children

THE shoes you have been waiting for. Fashionable footwear with all the newest lines, in the season's most popular fabric.

Models that are just right for every kind of wear—that are appropriate with practically every gown—and so inexpensive you can afford as many as you need.

Keds are made of finely woven canvas. The shapes are always right. The models are planned by expert designers who are well in touch with style tendencies for the coming season. There are shoes with half Louis heels, with military heels, with low rubber heels, and outing shoes with no heels at all.

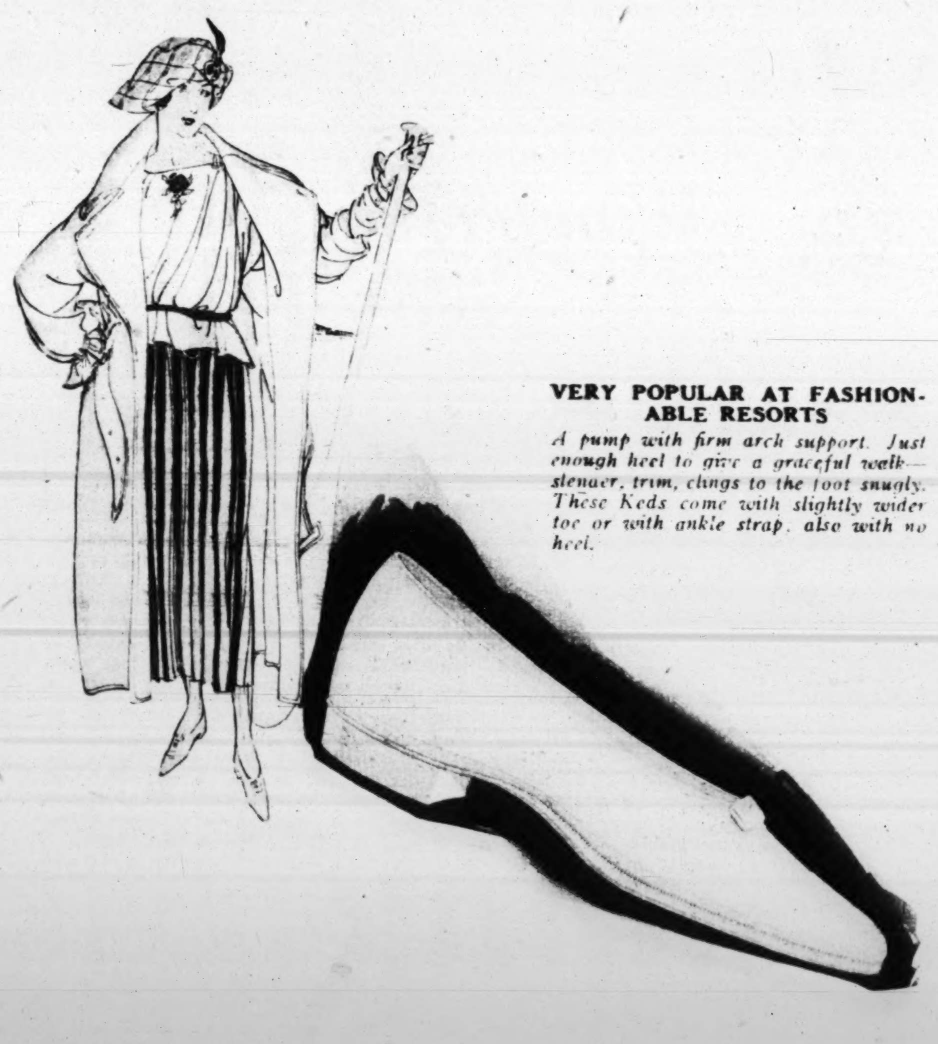
They fit snugly but are so flexible and light that they are most comfortable even in hot weather. The sport shoes are ideal for any kind of exercise—allowing the foot full freedom with just the right support.

An entirely new feature

This year the new models in Keds include shoes that are made like leather shoes—welt construction soles, firmly boxed toes and the reinforcements that give the shoe body.

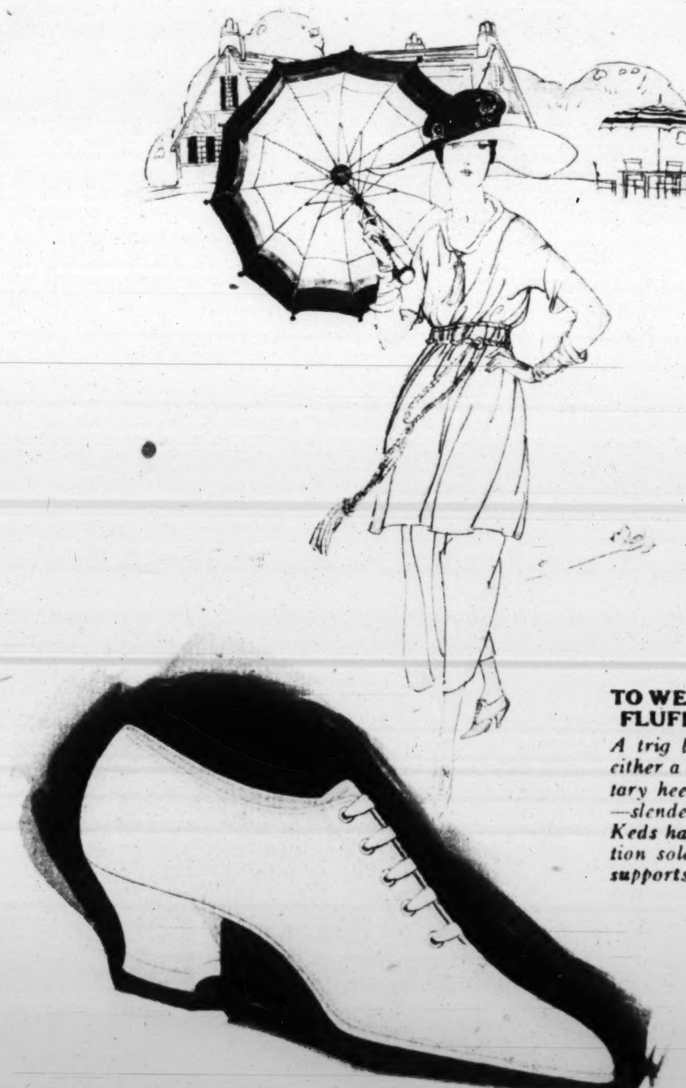
A STREET SHOE WITH THE NEWEST LINES

A full eight inches high for the new short skirts, these Keds have either a military heel or a half-Louis heel.



VERY POPULAR AT FASHIONABLE RESORTS

A pump with firm arch support. Just enough heel to give a graceful walk—slender, trim, clings to the foot snugly. These Keds come with slightly wider toe or with ankle strap, also with no heel.



TO WEAR WITH THE FLUFFIEST FROCK

A trig little oxford with either a French or a military heel—graceful vamp—slender lines. These Keds have welt construction soles and firm inner supports.

It means a more formal, dignified shoe—a shoe that has the style of the most expensive leather shoes.

Many charming models for women

For women there are numerous pumps and oxfords and high shoes—suitable for street costume or the fluffiest of your frocks. There are very smart sport shoes—both high and low—trig enough for the dressiest tea at the Country Club. And then there are the heel-less tennis shoes, always so satisfactory for knockabout wear. Many women have found them wonderfully comfortable for house shoes.

For rough-and-tumble-boys and the most conservative men

The men's sport shoes and tennis shoes are most popular every season. There are also more formal heeled shoes that are being widely worn for business and street wear.

Thousands of boys would find life very dull without Keds. They are the sportiest shoes you ever saw—light and springy for athletics and sturdy for everyday wear in school time and vacation. Many boys choose the high shoes with the ankle patch and leather reinforcements, others prefer the low shoes. They are made with smooth soles, suction soles for indoor wear, or corrugated soles, and in black or white or brown. Your boys will tell you all the fellows are wearing Keds this year.

Correct wide models for children

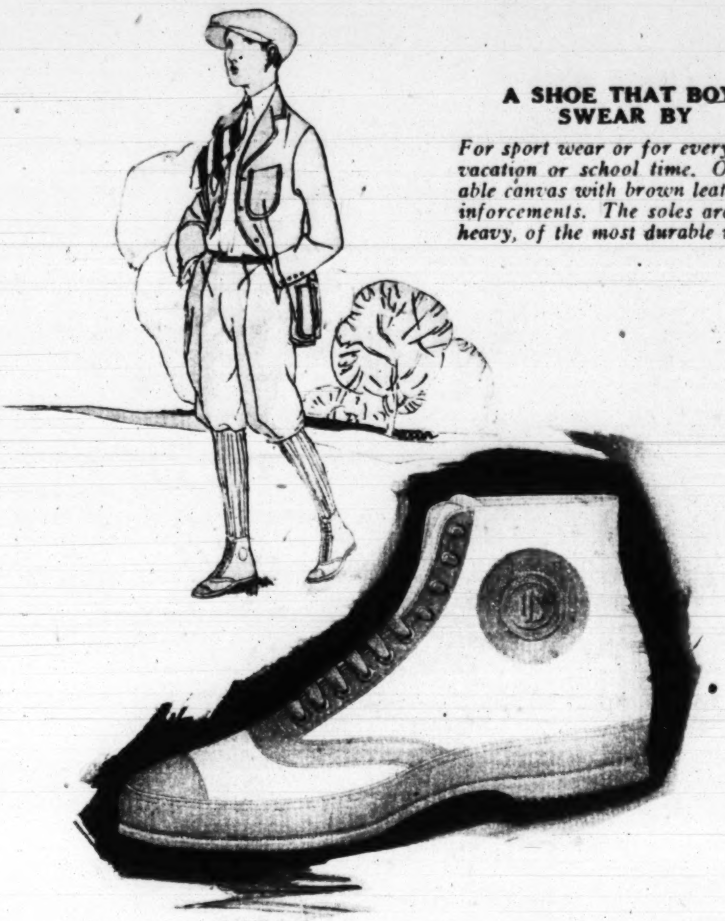
The children's Keds are made on the wide lasts that allow proper foot freedom. They are light and cool and give just the right protection for little feet that are not over-confident.

Keds are made only by the United States Rubber Company. All the resources and experience of this company have been used in perfecting a line of stylish, practical shoes for all the family.

At every shoe dealer's

You will find Keds at every good shoe dealer's. Ask to see the various models. Notice how wonderfully light and comfortable they are—how trim your foot appears. Look at the models for the rest of the family. The name Keds is always a safeguard—on the sole of the shoe.

For men and women, $1.50 to $7.00.
For children, $1.15 to $4.50.



A SHOE THAT BOYS SWEAR BY

For sport wear or for everyday in vacation or school time. Of durable canvas with brown leather reinforcements. The soles are extra heavy, of the most durable rubber.

COMMENCEMENT FROCKS for the GRAMMAR SCHOOL GIRL by CORINNE LOWE

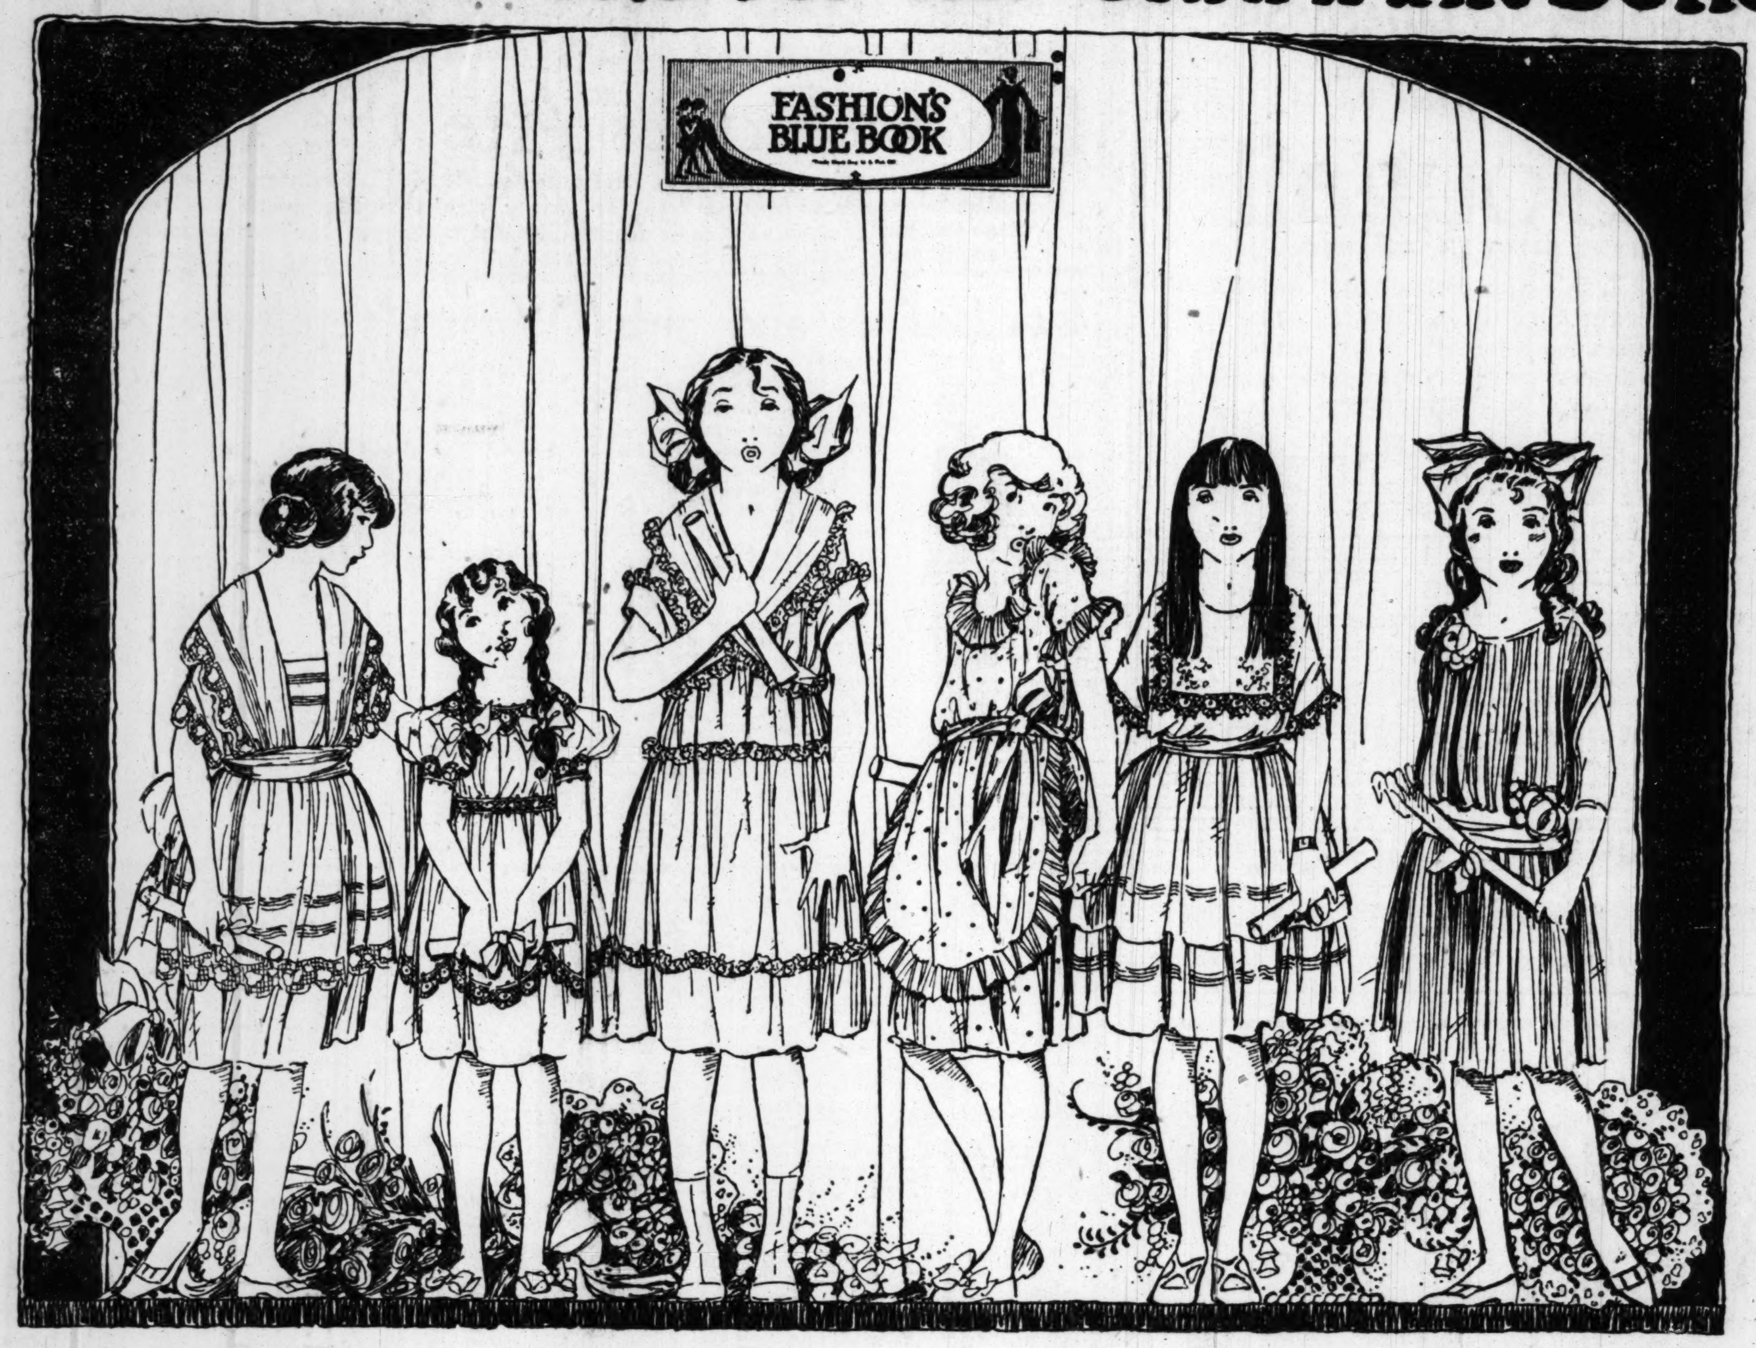
THE fundamental three "R's" may end happily in, first, a fine white voile with pin tucks and filet lace assistance; second, an organdy with Irish lace; third, a batiste with Valenciennes lace; fourth, a dotted Swiss with a real grownup apron effect and with ruchings of white organdy; fifth, a batiste with Irish lace and hand embroidery; and, last, a chiffon which has passed all final examinations in the fashionable accordion plait.



NEW YORK.—(Special correspondence.)—Tillie and Susie and Florence, you who have never cared much what kind of clothes they put on you, just so that they didn't make you go to bed when you were in the most exciting chapter of "Rose in Bloom," nor make you dry the supper dishes when you wanted to go over to your best friend's and talk about the note from Tom to Dorothy which teacher found—you are 11 or 12, and for the first time you are getting "fussy" about your clothes. You have your own ideas on the subject, gathered carefully from the fashion pages and journals, and they are always the things that your 20 year old sister is wearing.

Well, Tillie and Susie and Florence, unlike many of more mature and difficult aspiration, get their wish. Summer clothes for the young girl duplicate grownup modes. T. and S. and F. and their grammar school sorority bask in plaits and tunics and fichus, and all the other fashion privileges that are going. If there be any doubt on this subject, glance at the page of commencement dresses for the girl who is just ready for the thickets of the higher learning.

These frocks, while designed primarily for graduation exercises, supply models which may be used for every day of the summer months. For graduation dresses of today, like wedding gowns of today, are made for wear and not for moth balls.

The page begins at the left with a fine white voile trimmed with tucks and filet lace and tied with a sash of white satin ribbon. This frock echoes the tunic of 20 year old sister, and as tunics are not in tune with the chubby figure this frock is recommended only for slim Tillie. For Susie, who has perhaps not yet grown into her figure, we draw your attention to the little dress at the right of the page. This is white chiffon, and the accordion plaits of more mature fancy are here used with excellent effect. This charming little dress is trimmed with hand made flowers of satin.

The apron is another feature of adult modes which is being taken over this summer for the grammar school girl. This is illustrated charmingly in the model third from the right, and it occurs in a fabric which is being used widely this spring for the graduation frock of girls of all ages. This is dotted Swiss, which, having vaulted into favor for debutantes and matrons as a favored summer material, is receiving a great deal of attention from the designers of children's clothes. The apron, as well as neck line and sleeves, is finished with ruchings of white organdy.

For the girl of 10 is fashioned the second model from the left, an organdy trimmed with Irish lace. This lace, like the Irish political situation, is stirring these days. Thus the charming little frock of white batiste second from the right makes use of the same mesh in connection with the hand embroidery on the pigeon toed sailor collar. The last frock, the one in the center, is fashioned of batiste, with Valenciennes lace as trimming. The fichu or surplice finish is being used widely for the young girl's frock, and certainly it is as becoming to 14 as it is to 40.

White is certainly not a color that can longer be bought up by the graduate or the bride. It is used in every variety of costume at present. Particularly is this evident in millinery and in blouses. It is a notable fact, indeed, that many of the most stunning of recent French blouses are carried out in white.

Summer blouses supply a chapter all their own. The sports ones certainly twit Bakst and the rainbow with their lack of color. To see a short casque of green tricolette with one huge sunflower embroidered in beige and brown wools with orange center, this same sunflower being set at the bust line, is startling, but not more so than to find a large bird done in greens and blues brooding upon a copper colored tunic blouse. No design for a sports blouse should be friendless this year. You can use anything from an Egyptian scarab to a bunch of Watteau flowers and feel that you have done exactly right.

Many of the sports blouses are carried out in tricolette, which is extremely well adapted to the embroidery jazz band—and design. Wool jersey, too, is a favorite with smart specialty shops, and the French are particularly addicted to this fabric. Some of the tricolette blouses are perfectly charming. I have in mind just now, for example, a Copenhagen blue one strewn over with embroidered white daisies. Almost equally charming was another of rose tricolette, with motifs done in deep cherry tint.

The waistcoat blouse seems to have taken a great hold upon popular fancy, and many are the combinations of material through which it comes to life. Taffeta and tricolette are one of the most insistent of such alliances. Thus a beige taffeta blouse which I saw the other day had a waistcoat cut in two points, which was constructed of beige and black checked tricolette. The latter silk was repeated upon the ends of the long rolling collars, as finish for the short sleeves and as the girdle. White kid is a favorite material for the waistcoat material of these gilet blouses, and may be allied with georgette, taffeta, or tricolette.

As has been said, many of the new blouses are white. In tricolette this is particularly stunning. Of course, the white blouse generally atones by some one extremely daring bit of color and design. To witness, the designer has embroidered upon one snowy tricolette a peacock done in black just touched with gold. The trained fowl has his head inserted at the girdle of the casque and proceeds to give a diagonal service to the neck line.

Both in silk blouses and cotton, copper is a petted color. As a matter of fact, the tub blouses of voile and handkerchief linen have not romped about with so many tints in years. These tub blouses, by the way, may be either tuck-in or run-out. It really does not matter this season whether your blouse shelters your skirt or vice versa.

As has been said, white and black effects are exceedingly smart in the newest millinery. Often the combination is produced through the fashionable veil. Thus a white turban displayed at one of our most fashionable milliner's was of straw draped with a black veil. The latter was tucked up in coronet folds across the front of the hat by means of a shiny black substance and the veil dropped at sides and back.

A Sale That Offers Big Savings

ABOUT 400 WOMEN'S and MISSES' SUITS

$55.00—$75.00—$85.00

Reduced From $75.00 to $150.00

(In Many Instances Less Than Cost)

An Extraordinarily Welcome Sale of Out-of-the-Ordinary Suits at Uncommonly Low Prices

A SMART suit—well tailored and perfectly fitting—is probably the reason that the Chicago woman is so widely known for her good grooming. And these tailleurs, on sale tomorrow, are just the sort of suits that Chicago women want—and at these lowered prices they are doubly desirable. They are selected from our regular stock and reflect in every particular Stevens' incomparable style and tailoring.

It is most unusual for such high grade suits to be reduced at all—not before July, anyhow. So these premature reductions give you the advantage of a suit for a full season's wear at July clearance prices.

Strictly Tailored Models

IN countless distinctively individual styles—models straight or flaring, semi-fitted or belted, with the smartly new tuxedo collar or narrow shawl collar. Some are trimmed with heavy black embroidery or harness stitching and some with narrow braid buttons, while jet gleams on others. And a most unusual touch is given to many suits by the treatment of the pockets.

Women's Suit Shop, Fourth Floor.

The Youthful Eton

IN all the decorative little variations to which the Eton jacket responds so delightfully. Some with strange designs in exotic colorings or with tucks finer than you ever thought possible, while some show a smart braid finish. The skirts are plain, accordion or box pleated.

A Spring Suit a Necessity

OF course you've been intending to buy a Spring suit—but for one reason or another you've postponed the purchase. Perhaps it's just as well that you did. The late season has been a friend to you, for now you can get one of the suits you've been admiring—a $150.00 one, let's say, for $85.00. For these suits were not purchased to sell at a low price; they are the same high standard that makes Stevens' suits pre-eminently notable and were originally priced at $75.00 to $150.00.

The Fascination of Reductions

WE hadn't thought of it before, until a clever woman mentioned it the other day—but to shop in a store where reductions have been made is one of the most fascinating things in the world.

You feel the same zest as a capitalist. There's $150 that you had planned to spend for your Spring suit—now you get your suit for $85. That leaves $65 to be spent for a hat—but of course you're going to be able to get a stunning hat for much less—for many of our choicest hats have been reduced to $25, anyhow.

That leaves $40 for blouses, gloves and veils, and perhaps one of the new taffeta handbags, because there are reductions in nearly all of these departments.

Please make your selections carefully, as merchandise at reduced prices is sold without the privilege of return or exchange.

UNCLE JIM'S STORY

KIMBO SHARES HIS SUPPER.

"Oh a friend is a friend indeed,
Who gives you his supper in time of need."

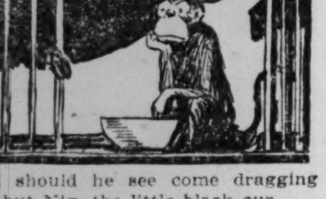
IT was Saturday night and Kimbo, the little green monkey, was eating his supper very slowly. "Funny I'm not a bit hungry," he thought. "Guess I ate too many peanuts at parade this noon." For all the children had been out of school on Saturday and they had been feeding Kimbo on popcorn and peanuts till his little monkey eyes fairly bulged out of his head.

Kimbo's cage door was open and the red sun shone in, warming Kimbo all nice and comfy. Just at this moment whom should he see come dragging along but Nig, the little black cur.



"Why, Nig, what is the matter with you?" squeaked Kimbo. He was so surprised he nearly dropped his bread and milk, for never had he seen such a pitiful sight as Nig. He was mud from head to tail, one eye was swollen tight shut and he limped along on three legs, holding one bruised little paw up in the air.

"Everything's the matter," barked Nig. But it was a wee, faint bark. "I'm just about dead from a wagon which nearly ran over me and I'm starving to death besides. And he looked straight at Kimbo's big blue bowl of bread and milk with some nuts on top.

"Well, this is no place to come to if you're hungry," snapped Kimbo, for the minute he saw Nig looking at his bread and milk he commenced to feel very hungry himself. "Trot right on and keep on trotting till you come to your own cage."

"But I haven't any cage," groaned Nig. "I'm only a cur you know and not worth a cent, I'm told. No one wants me. My master left town this morning to join another show and they've torn down his tent. I've no more home than a river rat." He gave his sore little paw a lick or two and then kept right on staring at Kimbo's supper.

"What's a river rat?" asked Kimbo, who was very curious about all kinds of animals.

"A river rat is a rat that lives by the river, silly," yapped Nig. "I used to hunt them when I was a puppy and, believe me, I could catch them too. I'd steal along the river bank—never making a sound of any kind—and then biff—bark—I'd jump on a rat's back—and the rat just died of fright."

"Well, you had better go back to the river and catch some more," said Kimbo, scowling. He never liked to hear stories of animals killing each other, for he was a kind hearted little monkey and wouldn't kill a fly if he could help it.

"I would if I could," moaned the cur. He actually had started crying, he felt sorry for himself. "But we are hundreds of miles from the river and I'm so homely I'd be stoned to death by some cruel boys long before I got there. You've no idea how mean boys are sometimes to a dirty dog. Now if I was handsome like you and everyone liked me I wouldn't be afraid to travel all over the world."

Now these were the wisest words Nig the cur ever said. For as I have mentioned before Kimbo was very proud of his looks and his cleverness and the fact that every one made such a fuss over him. Besides he thought he was about the handsomest monkey that was ever born and he liked to be told so, even by Nig the cur.

"Did you say you were hungry?" he squeaked in a much more friendly tone than he had used towards Nig before.

"Yes, yes, I'm starved—I'm dying for food," barked the cur, commencing to jump around on his three good legs in the hope of getting a taste of Kimbo's supper anyway.

"All right. I've eaten too many peanuts anyway," piped Kimbo and he pushed his bowl of bread and milk with the nice nuts on top over where Nig could get it. He did not want to give his supper away very much, but Nig did look so terribly thin and hungry!

"I don't believe you have had a meal for a week," he squaked as he watched Nig gulp down the milk. Gulp, gulp, it made just about four good swallows and it was gone. But such a bark of real joy as he gave!

"Gee, that was good! I feel lots better now. I feel just like going on and seeing if I can't find some one to adopt me."

"All right; good luck!" screeched Kimbo after him as Nig started off. Kimbo had caught a bad cold the night before and his voice was hoarser than usual.

Just then along came the husband of the snake charmer. He looked down at Nig and snapped his fingers.

"Hello, there, you little cur," he cried. "So your old Finnigan went off and left you this morning?"

Nig's tail began to wag frantically. Perhaps this was a man who would take him.

"Well, you got some spirit, anyway, if you are all mud and dirt," he said. "Come on—I always did like your ratty little bark."

And off went the two of them, Nig barking as hard as he could and his tail going like a windmill in a storm.

"Well, I'm glad he has found a home," said Kimbo. "But I wish I hadn't given him quite all of my supper."

But it was lucky for Kimbo he made friends with Nig, for it was Nig who saved Kimbo's life that very next week. I'll tell you all about it next time.

Lower Prices Are the Rule in This Store

—not the exception. It is one of the fundamentals of this business, so widely recognized that customers take it as a matter of course, to find our "regular" prices lower than the "special" prices elsewhere. These items were chosen from large and varied stocks for their desirability and timeliness; they will remain on sale for 3 days; there is enough of them to enable us to take care of those who come late as well as those who come early—a point worthy of consideration.

REMOVING SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

by Antoinette Donnelly

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, the Chicago Sunday Tribune.

THE stubborn hairs between the eyes, a number or which will give a peculiarly sinister look, and a growth of hair on the upper lip, the chin, or in front of the ear and running down the cheeks like sideburns on the comic opera butler, are the cause of considerable unhappiness among women.

I am asked a dozen times a day about this trouble, which may console some readers who have the impression they are an infinitesimal few who have been "marked and grudged against by nature." With the blonde haired woman the trouble is not apt to be as unhappy a one as with the girl with the dark haired growth on her lip; on the former it shows up less plainly.

Bleaching the hair, while a fairly slow process of elimination, has been known to eventually kill the growth where equal parts of peroxide and ammonia are applied nightly.

But the only satisfactory method for removing these superfluous hairs permanently is the slow but sure one of the electric needle in the hands of an expert operator. By this method any number of large hairs may be removed without leaving any scars or causing any pain to the patient. Usually the good operator confines the work to twenty or thirty minute sessions, because it is trying work for her.

Some skins, however, are so tender that electrolysis cannot be used. And, again, there is an important item that a good operator will warn her patient about and save scarring and soreness, which has been charged against the use of the needle. Not all skins scab after the treatment, but some do, and these latter invariably do because they do not refrain from the use of soap and water on the part under treatment. Neither should cold cream be used if there is any "scabbing." Hot water without soap should be used for cleansing or listerine or diluted alcohol.

I have been asked about the use of a depilatory for the removal of hairs on the face, but advise against it strongly because of its being possible to burn the skin unless it is applied with skill and dexterity and also that one should know every ingredient that goes into articles that are used on the face.

I know one woman who has used a depilatory on her face for a half dozen years. But she advises against its use for the reason that she will soon have to have the electric treatment now anyway, because the hairs are so stiff and bristly and the growth has increased with the years. She has had experience in a beauty parlor and claims particular skill in the handling of the depilatory, but says she has seen several cases of lips that have been burned by this treatment so that they looked as if they were grown together.

The hair on the arms being exposed on account of this year's style in sleeves may be treated to the ammonia and peroxide bleaching formula with some success. And if you are willing to follow instructions to the letter you may use this depilatory: Two drams of sulphide of barium and three drams each of oxide of zinc and starch. Mix well and keep tightly corked. When you apply this depilatory you add sufficient water to make a paste. The paste is then spread over the part and allowed to remain on for a couple of minutes. Wash it off and then apply a cold cream or soothing ointment. Generally you can tell when the paste has been on long enough by a slight burning sensation.

The above depilatory and instructions are to be followed in the removal of hair under the arms.

REAL LOVE STORIES

COAXING LILACS.

JANE worked in the office with me. She was capable and popular, but in no sense a city girl, although she had lived in the city since she was 10 years of age.

One morning she found a bunch of lilacs on her desk, put there by one of her many admirers. She buried her face in them and when she looked up there were tears in her eyes. She quickly brushed them away and tried to smile; however, the lilacs were torturing Jane—we all saw that, but discreetly pretended not to see.

Finally, at 10 o'clock, Jane left her desk and sought the manager. "I must go," she told him. "Those lilacs back on my little farm are calling me so." Yes, it was hers—she was an only child, and both father and mother had died, leaving her an orphan at 10 years old. She hadn't seen the lilacs since. The young man who, with his sister, owned the adjoining farm worked her little plot, too. They were friends of hers. She hadn't seen them since, but the boy had been her big boy champion when she went to the little red schoolhouse. They'd be glad to see her. Couldn't she go today—now?

The manager understood. Perhaps he had known a lilac scented playground once. At any rate, Jane was on the train in a few hours. She was to be gone only two weeks, but Jane didn't return. Instead the manager got a bubbly sort of letter telling him that the "big boy" had persuaded her to stay. His sister was to be a June bride, and—well, he and the lilacs—she did love them both so! M. Boarding House Tales

Scrambled the Boarders.

Eggs were an unknown article at the boarding house where I took my meals. It had been weeks since one had been seen on the table, and every day some comment was made about their nonappearance. Complaints had been made in vain, so when an ad appeared in a newspaper offering for sale an unlimited supply of fresh country eggs at 25 cents per dozen at the Star boarding house each boarder around the table suspected the other fellow of having played the joke.

Before confidences could be exchanged the telephone, which was in the dining room, began to ring. Orders came thick and fast. Eager purchasers wanted from one to ten dozen; some even declared they would take the whole lot.

"But this isn't a poultry farm; it's a boarding house," angrily declared Mrs. Star; "and I don't care if you did see the ad in the paper—I certainly did not have it put in."

After the tenth call Mrs. Star began to tumble and rang up the manager of the newspaper demanding the name of the party who had ordered the ad. An investigation proved that a letter supposedly signed by her had been received with an amount sufficient to cover publication of the advertisement.

Our landlady was red hot and we in silence, one by one. Instead of being served with eggs the next morning we each received a notice to move on. V. M. S.

MY MOST EMBARRASSING MOMENT

On a Live One.

One rainy evening I took refuge under an awning in front of a clothing store just before closing time. In a few minutes a clerk came out and carried in several dummies, and then seized me around the middle and nearly lifted me from my feet in a laudable effort to add me to the number who had gone inside before he discovered that my "hand me downs" were worn by a live one, instead of being draped on a wire frame. Hardware Jewelry.

Mine happened the year I finished school. I was clerking in a jewelry store during the holidays, and was terribly green, though I tried to hide the fact.

An old lady entered the store, and I hurried forward to wait on her. To my surprise, she inquired for "casters."

"I am sorry," I replied, "but I am afraid you will have to get them at a hardware store." When the proprietor came forward amid the suppressed giggles of my fellow clerks, and produced, from the back of a shelf, a peculiar looking piece of tableware, containing salt and pepper shakers, vinegar and oil bottles, and heaven knows what.

Side by Side.

After riding some twenty or twenty-five minutes in a crowded street car one night around 12, by one of those curious coincidences, everybody on my side of the car got off, leaving a nice looking girl, who was a stranger to me, and myself sitting close up with the whole seat the length of the car all to ourselves.

As she made no effort to move away I thought I would be as game as she and so we continued to sit side by side as we had been when the car was crowded.

We hadn't gone over three or four blocks until I noticed my lady friend had begun to nod. From nodding she went to dozing, and the next thing I knew she was sleeping with her head on my shoulder. Needless to say the occupants, some ten or twelve on the other side of the car, were all smiling and enjoying the situation by this time. Of course I did some squirming and elbow nudging all the while.

The climax came when she began to snore. The laugh and my nudging at last woke her up and such a look as she gave me! All this was too much for me and I bolted from the car amid the uproar of all on board, although I was yet far from my destination. J. W.

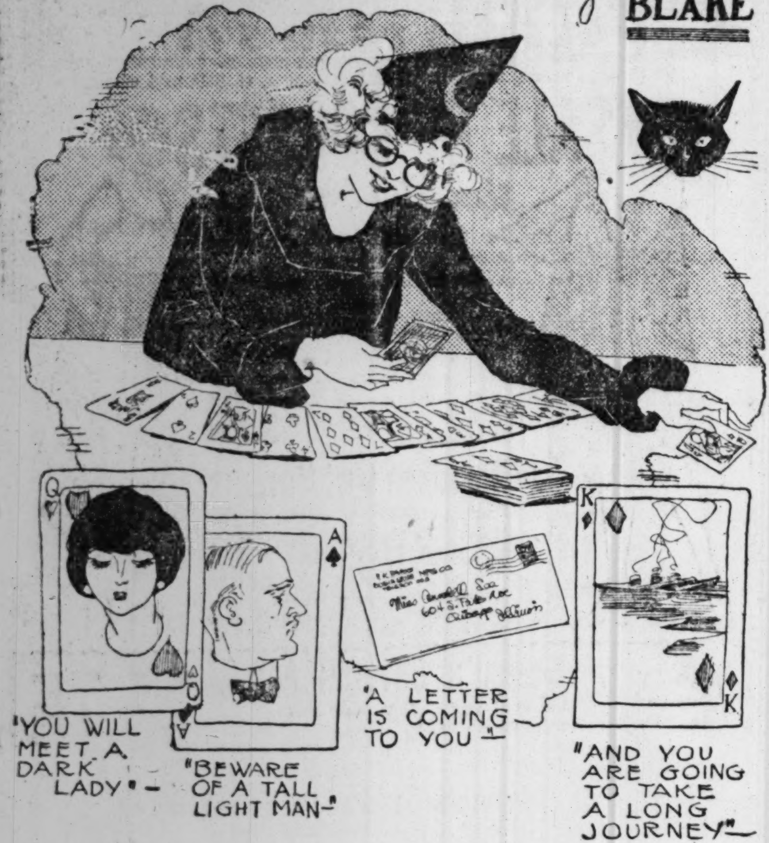
FORTUNE TELLING with CARDS

By DORIS BLAKE



"YOU WILL MEET A DARK LADY"—
"BEWARE OF A TALL LIGHT MAN—"
"A LETTER IS COMING TO YOU"—
"AND YOU ARE GOING TO TAKE A LONG JOURNEY"—

YOU must remember that the combination of cards change their individual meanings. Here is a chart of the various combinations:

Of court cards[face cards and aces]:

Four aces—Danger, financial loss, separation from friends, love troubles. The evil is mitigated in proportion to the number of them that are reversed.

Three aces—Passing troubles, relieved by good news, faithfulness of a lover, and consequent sorrow. If reversed, they mean foolish excess.

Two aces—These portend union. If hearts and clubs it will be for good, if diamonds and spades, for evil, probably the outcome of jealousy. If one or both be reversed the union will not be a success.

Four kings—Honors, preferment, good appointments. Reversed, the good things will be of less value, but will arrive earlier.

Three kings—Serious matters will be taken in hand, with the best result, unless any of the three cards be reversed, when it will be doubtful.

Two kings—Coöperation in business, upright conduct, and prudent enterprises to be crowned with success. Each one reversed represents an obstacle. All three reversed spell utter failure.

Four queens—A social gathering which may be spoiled by one or more being reversed.

Three queens—Friendly visits. Reversed, scandal, gossip, and possibly bodily danger to the inquirer.

Two queens—Petty confidences interchanged, secrets betrayed, a meeting between friends. When both are reversed there will be suffering for the inquirer resulting from his own acts. Only one reversed means rivalry.

Four jacks—Roistering and noisy conviviality. Any of them reversed lessens the evil.

Three jacks—Worries and vexations from acquaintances, slander. Reversed, it foretells a quarrel with a social inferior.

Two jacks—Loss of goods, malicious schemes. If both are reversed the trouble is imminent; if only one, it is near.

Plain cards:

Four tens—Good fortune, wealth, success in whatever enterprise is in hand. The more there are reversed the greater number of obstacles in the way.

Three tens—Ruin brought about by litigation. When reversed, the evil is decreased.

Two tens—Unexpected luck, which may be connected with a change of occupation. If one be reversed, it will come soon, within a few weeks possibly; if both are reversed it is a long way off.

Four nines—Accomplishment of unexpected events. The number that are reversed stand for the time to elapse before fulfillment of the surprise.

Three nines—Health, wealth, and happiness. Reversed, temporary financial difficulties.

Two nines—Prosperity and contentment, possibly accomplished by business matters, testamentary documents, and possibly a change of residence. Reversed, small worries.

Four eights—Mingled success and failure attending a journey or the taking up of a new position. Reversed, undisturbed stability.

Three eights—Thoughts of love and marriage, new family ties, honorable intention are reversed, flirtation, dissipation, and foolishness.

Two egihts—Frivolous pleasures, passing love fancies, and an unlooked for development. Reversed, paying the price of folly.

Four sevens—Schemes and snares, intrigues prompted by evil passions, contention, and opposition. Reversed, small disagreements with impotent enemies.

Three sevens—Sadness from loss of friends, ill health, remorse. Reversed, slight ailments or unpleasant reaction after great pleasure.

Two sevens—Mutual love, an unexpected event. Reversed, faithlessness, deceit, or regret.

Besides the combinations in twos, threes, or fours of the cards, the way they fall together gives them definite significance. For instance:

The ten of diamonds next to the seven of spades means certain delay.

The ten of diamonds next to the eight of clubs tells of a journey undertaken in the cause of love.

The nine of diamonds with the eight of hearts fortells for certain a journey.

The eight of diamonds with the eight of hearts means great undertakings; with the eight of spades, sickness, and with the eight of clubs, deep and lasting love.

The seven of diamonds with the queen of diamonds means a serious quarrel; with the queen of clubs, uncertainty; with the queen of hearts, good news.

The ten of clubs, followed by an ace, means a large sum of money; if these two cards are followed by an eight and a king, an offer of marriage.

When the nine, ace, and ten of diamonds fall together, it means important news from a distance; and if a court card comes out after them, a journey will become necessary.

The eight and seven of diamonds together means gossip and chatter.

When the king, queen, jack, and ace of one color appear in sequence, it means a marriage; if the queen of spades and the jack of hearts are near one another, it shows that there are obstacles in the way; if the eight of spades is near, it bodes ill to the couple in question, but their happiness will be assured by the presence of the eight of hearts and the eight of clubs.

The ace of diamonds and the ten of hearts also foretell wedding bells.

The seven of spades, with a court card, betrays the existence of a false friend.

The eight and five of spades together tell of jealousy that will find vent in malicious revenge.

The king of hearts with the nine of hearts means luck in love.

The nine of clubs with the nine of hearts is indicative of affairs connected with a will likely to benefit the inquirer.

The queen of spades, accompanied by the jack of spades, is symbolical of a woman who is hostile and dangerous.

When a number of court cards fall together it is a sign of hostility, good times, and gayety.

Two red tens foretell a marriage.

Two red eights promise new clothes.

When those lower than the jack predominate, it foretells success; if clubs are the most numerous, they predict gain, fortune; if face cards, dignity and honor; hearts, gladness, good news; spades, death or sickness.

He's Teasing You.

"Dear Miss Blake: There is a young man in town whom I dislike and he knows it. In spite of this fact he always tries to make dates with me. I have refused to dance with him, but he doesn't care. What would you advise me to do to make it plainer?

DISGUSTED.

He's teasing you and as long as you let him think it offends you, he will keep on. Consequently the remedy would seem to be to treat the whole matter lightly.

Why You Like Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am coming to you for advice for the first time, hoping you will help me. I met a girl in my fourth year of school, and have been in the same room until eighth grade. We have gone out often after we left school, and she would never let me kiss her. I respect her for that, but we have known each other for some time. I don't see why she wouldn't let me. She is 17 and I am 18, and like her very much. She tells everybody she likes me, and when I talk to her she is much different.

"JADY."

Do you stop to think, Jady, that at the bottom of this feeling for the girl is a respect born of the girl's own attitude, or, in other words, you wouldn't think half as much of her if you weren't well aware that she is a thoroughly nice girl?

Flowers You Ought to Grow

Shirley Poppies—American Legion official flower, beautiful satiny blossoms of delicate shades.

Giant Zinnias—New varieties remarkable for size, color, and ease of culture.

Nasturtiums—Tall or dwarf, thrive in poor soil, producing multitudes of blossoms.

Asters—Sow now and avoid the beetles in August. Wonderful variety to choose from.

Marigolds—African, 5 feet tall; French dwarfs, 10 inches; wealth of late summer color.

Petunias—Sweet scented, gorgeous colors, easy to grow; covered with blooms all summer.

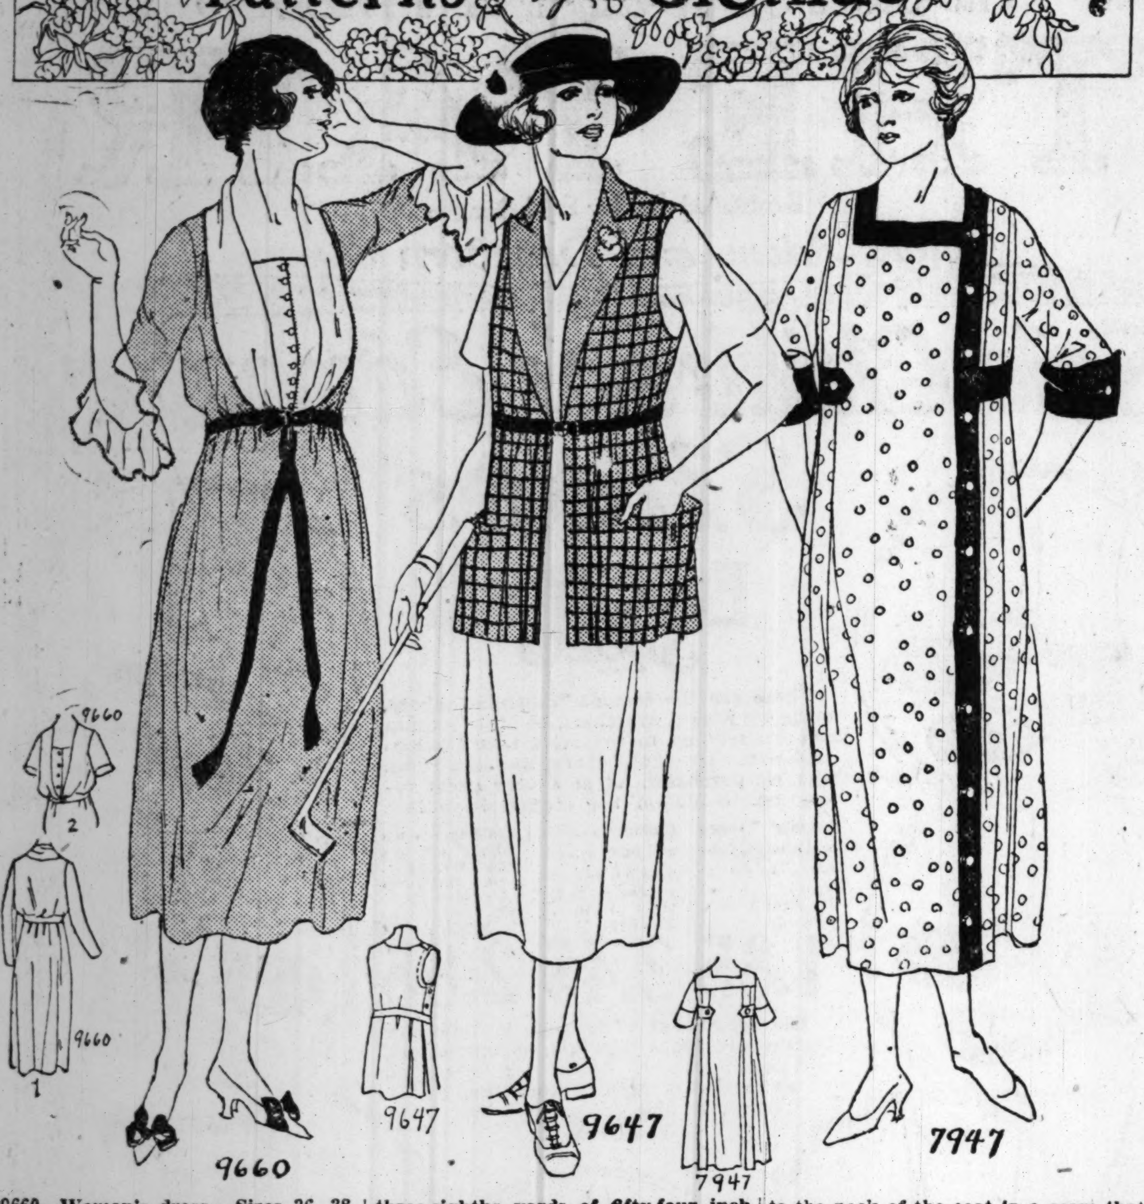
Patterns by Clotilde



9660—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires three and three-eighths yards of forty-four inch material and three-fourths of a yard of contrasting material.

9647—Woman's sleeveless coat. Sizes 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 38 or 40 requires two and one-half yards of thirty-six inch or one and three-eighths yards of fifty-four inch material with five-eighths of a yard of contrasting material.

7947—Woman's maternity apron dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires five and one-eighth yards of thirty-six inch material and one and one-half yards of twenty-two inches or wider material for the border.

How to Use the Patterns

THE maternity apron dress, No. 7947, will be useful and comfortable many times and is simple to cut and make. A box plait is allowed for each side of the front and bacy, and these are stitched as far down as the waist line, then pressed into shape the length of the skirt part.

In the back the dress should be gathered and stitched to the yoke lining, letting the seam come on the right side; then turning the seam up towards the yoke, lay the outside yoke over this, first turning it across the bottom. Baste and stitch it twice across the lower edge, and after the yoke lining is stitched to the front in a seam coming to the right side, turn the shoulder edges of the outside of the yoke in, baste down over the seams and stitch twice, matching the stitching across the bottom. This double yoke will add greatly to the strength of the back across the shoulders.

No. 9660, while simple as to design, is unusually good looking and many who see it will decide it is just the pattern they need for some one of their summer gowns.

Taffeta or satin would be attractive, or one of the stunning cotton voiles or crêpes. Black taffeta or satin, with collar, vest and sleeve ruffles of the same or a contrasting color and and material will look well, or maybe the sleeves will be made plain and close fitting and not reaching to the elbow. The front of the waist is cut in a "U" shape at the bottom, which gives an unusually pretty line.

No. 9647, is one of those good looking sleeveless coats, which are such an addition to a sport dress, and anyone who makes her own dresses can easily manage this. It must be well made and no poorly finished seams or edges or any uneven places, else the "smart" look is not there.

It is not necessary to line this kind of a coat, but the seams must be bound and pressed open. There is an inverted box plait on each under arm seam, from the waist line down which adds to the jauntiness of its effect.

The under side of the collar is basted to the neck of the coat in a seam that comes to the wrong side of the coat, but first the middle of the back of the collar must be pinned to the middle back of the coat and then pinned carefully towards each end leaving just the width of the seam free (3-8 inch), at each end. Then the seam is stitched and pressed open.

Now the outside of the collar and revers are cut, and seam lines clearly traced; then they are stitched together in a seam on the wrong side from the ends of the collar, minus the width of a seam at the ends to a distance of about two inches. This short seam at each end of the collar and revers is pressed open, then the outside of the color and revers is laid in place on the coat, pinned carefully, then basted and stitched. The collar is then turned right side out, getting the seams perfectly turned at the corners. Then the opposite edge is turned in and hemmed down and the entire garment well pressed.

baldness & civilization

PRIMEVAL man was a hale and hoary creature, with locks long and lustrous even in old age. He grew gray, yes, but rarely bald. Baldness today is largely due to civilization.

Modern living conditions tend to evaporate and dissipate the volatile oil-food Nature supplies the scalp and hair. The scalp grows dry and scaly—that's dandruff. The hair loses lustre, dies, falls out—that's the approach of baldness.

Pétrole Hahn contains exactly the required amount of oil-food (refined petroleum) so necessary to scalp and hair-health.

Pétrole Hahn is a delightful hair dressing favored by men and women alike—thousands use it daily. It is invigorating, refreshing. Insure the health of your scalp and hair by buying a bottle today.

How Two Mothers Made the Care of Their Children a Joy

By Mrs. Frank McCallum

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH

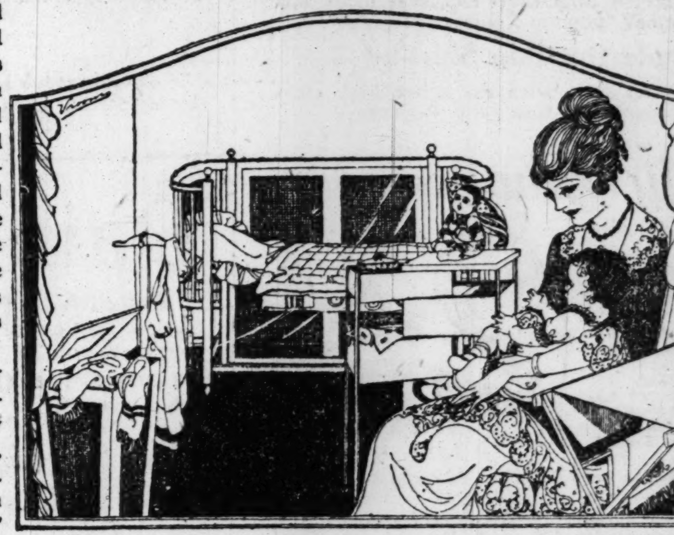
Cleveland, Ohio, 5/15/20
10 A M-1
Mrs. Frank McCallum,
1550 Michigan Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
Gillian and baby doing fine—we want you for a week soon. GEORGE.

WHAT a blessed relief telegrams sometimes are!—even though we so often associate them with unpleasant news. Of course, my brother-in-law's telegram made me anxious to go to my sister at once. How quickly could I leave home? I must give her the benefit of my experience. With two children of my own—I could teach her this new babe's "place" in the home.

Sister and I were two only daughters and nearly of an age. We had shared our joys and sorrows since joys and sorrows began in our lives. And though we now lived far apart as individual wives and home-makers, one in Cleveland and the other in Chicago, we still shared our joys and sorrows as much as we could.



Real privacy for his majesty, where he will not disturb the family's daily routine.

Sister was cleverer than I—more artistic—yes, and why shouldn't I admit it, the more attractive. I had always been the "mothering" type. My two children had meant few tragedies because of their well regulated lives in a conveniently arranged home. I had read many books on child psychology and with my four years of dearly purchased experience as a mother I thought "surely she could benefit by my advice."

But I found I had much to learn from this clever sister of mine. It was just dark when I arrived in Cleveland. I rode to my sister's home in such a wonderful bubble of excitement. It was a somewhat "motherly" excitement, for it seemed to me that this was a supreme crisis in Gillian's life; surely she was helplessly awaiting suggestions from me.

But I had only removed my wraps when she insisted—"Elizabeth, I just can't wait a minute—you must tiptoe up to the nursery. The baby is asleep and you must see him in his new room. The nursery has just been finished today and I am terribly keen about it."

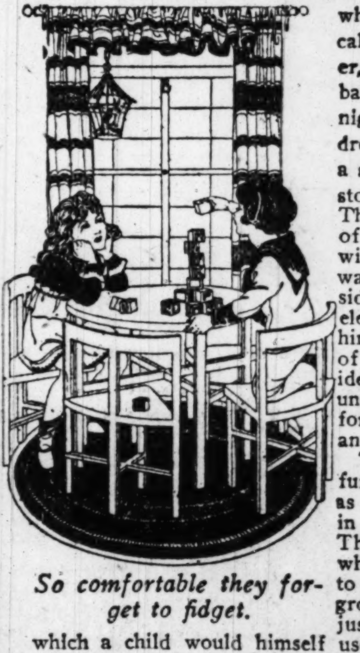
It was a "Dream Nursery"—a room all baby's very own! Real privacy for his majesty! And real privacy for the rest of the family—neither their daily routine nor his was to be disturbed.

First of all, each piece of furniture was in harmony with every other piece. At a glance I could see that they had not been picked up here and there—there was such unison of plan in the whole effect of the furniture and fittings. My first glimpse of the new baby (who seemed perfectly wonderful to his fond aunt) was in the dearest crib you can imagine. It was distinctive—a combination of cane and white enameled wood. The baby's nap was over and he awakened—a fat, dimpled little fellow in perfect health. Gillian turned a button underneath the crib and the side lowered—as if by magic—until it was even with the mattress, and there he was ready to be lifted up. But this was not the only thing which made it the last word in comfort and convenience, for its extended round ends supported by two extra legs gave it extra strength and a touch of artistic perfection.

"Do you know, Elizabeth," Gillian said, "I have always dreamed of caring for the little fellow myself. I wanted to dress and undress him, to feed and take care of him myself. This seemed to me one of the joys of motherhood. But I couldn't imagine myself holding this bunch of wriggles on my lap while I did it. I was afraid I might stick a safety pin into him or do something even worse. And I was afraid until I found this equipment. I call this corner the dressing room."

Gillian picked up the baby and seated herself in a rather low white rocker without arms. Directly in front of her was a folding dressing table. I had never seen such a convenient arrangement for dressing a baby. It had a frame of white enameled wood, with a white canvas top that had pockets on the side for the talcum powder, absorbent cotton, comb and brush, and also a convenient towel rack.

She dressed the baby with perfect ease. To her right, within easy reach, she had a chest of drawers which swung open instead of pulling out in the usual manner. She had the baby on her lap and could easily see and reach into each drawer. The baby's hose, bands, shirts and dresses were each in separate drawers within easy reach and she didn't waste a minute in her dressing. After bath, when the baby would be tired and sleepy, the chest of drawers must have been even more useful. What looked much like a maniature hall tree in white enamel, Gillian called a child's costumer, and upon it she hung babe's clothes each night when she undressed him. Beside this a soiled clothes hamper stood within easy reach. The hamper was made of white enameled wood with cane panels and was protected on the inside with white enameled slats. It had a hinged lid. This corner of the nursery seemed ideal for dressing and undressing the baby and for saving Gillian time and strength.



So comfortable they forget to fidget.

The other pieces of furniture showed just as much careful thought in their construction. There was a chiffonier, which he would be able to use until he had grown to be a boy scout; just the height and size which a child would himself use most conveniently. Also a settee chest with a cane back and hinged seat—a spacious affair in which she kept his going-out robes for the perambulator.

"With all these conveniences, Elizabeth, I still had a problem unsolved until I found this 'Sunshine Crib.'" What Gillian called a "Sunshine Crib" was a serviceable crib on sturdy wheels. It had screened sides, a mosquito net cover, and perfect springs and mattress. The springs could be raised and lowered by a simple arrangement. A wooden floor had come with the crib to be placed over the springs when the baby was old enough so that the crib could be used as a play pen. And this wonderful piece of furniture was finished with the same care in white enamel. "Many a time he should sleep on the sleeping porch, in a cooler room, or perhaps just play comfortably in some sort of a crib which I could easily move around. In this 'Sunshine Crib' I found all and more of these conveniences."

And the fittings in the nursery—all of the decorating was in dainty blue and white, commencing with the rug. A plain blue affair—but so appropriate, with a Mother Goose design woven in each corner. Then the walls—just a delicate blue. It would be quite the ordinary thing to have a frieze around the top of such a wall. But instead of having the dear babe crane its neck to gaze at Mother Goose pictures in a frieze way up at the top, she had placed a series of pictures about the height of a regular wainscoating, within easy range of the youngster's eyes. The pictures were quite out of the ordinary. She had framed each picture. One was just a plain horse with a kiddie on its back, with a bit of nursery doggerel about the animal, in a dear little white frame. All the fascinating nursery animals were there, but always with a child in the picture—to add the human touch. These pictures were less confusing than a regular frieze, because they were each distinct in its frame.

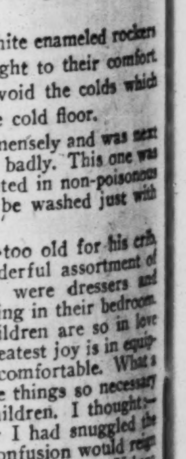
But the curtains—they were simply the last word in daintiness. Each curtain was a sheer white voile, embroidered in fairy tale designs and all so cleverly selected that I marveled at her infinite patience for detail.

Next day sister remarked: "Elizabeth, I believe I have a very clever plan for you. Since Annette is now two and Bobby nearly four they need a playroom. By that I mean a room fitted up on the modern kindergarten plan. It would mean a great joy to you and your home to have a playroom where those two children would play contentedly for hours at a time."

"Of course, you will readily acknowledge the need of a playroom," Gillian continued. "A room for the children to use for years to come, where they can play blocks, build, model clay, draw, sew, string beads, and do all the inside work which children long to do quite by themselves, undisturbed by the grown-ups. Here is the catalog of the Happi-tyme Nursery Furniture made in Urbana, Ohio—this one firm makes piece after piece of playroom furniture you will need to carry out the plan."

It seemed quite new to find all these things collected in one booklet. Some of the pieces I had seen in kindergartens but did not know that they could be purchased for my own home. Immediately I felt some very sane, practical creature must have designed all this, and so we planned:

First, chairs and a low table—they called it a "Child's Set." The chairs which had triangular seats were of Colonial design and nested under a sturdy, plain table and finished either in white or cream enamel—so easy to keep immaculate. We decided that this set was the most convenient because the nested arrangement meant a saving of space—I could picture my two children building for hours on this table, their little bodies so comfortable that they would forget to fidget. How I regretted that it had heretofore been necessary for them to build in uncomfortable, cramped positions on the floor. Next I selected a sand box. Few mothers nowadays but know what a wonderful joy the seashore means to youngsters—they never tire of sand—but it seemed impossible to have this joy the year around in the house, for naturally one is not willing to endure the dirt about the house. Here was a sand box so tightly constructed that there would be no danger of it leaking—and with cute little seats in the corner. At last I had found some one who seemed to be really planning for the child's comfort. From the table the children could go to their sand box and play in comfortable positions without cramping their little bodies.



Bobbie had no place to put those skates.

I could not resist two sturdy white enameled rockers built with the same careful thought to their comfort. In the winter they would help avoid the colds which children catch from sitting on the cold floor.

A play yard appealed to me immensely and was next selected, for little sister needed it badly. This one was a well built collapsible affair painted in non-poisonous white enamel which could easily be washed just with soap and water.

Little Bobbie, who was getting too old for his crib, had to have one out of the wonderful assortment of children's beds—and then there were dressers and wardrobes which I had been needing in their bedroom. I suddenly realized why most children are so in love with their kindergartens—their greatest joy is in equipment which keeps them busy and comfortable. What a joy to find a firm making all these things so necessary to the modern ideas in raising children. I thought—no more collapsing at night after I had snuggled the children in their beds. No more confusion would reign supreme around the house. I dropped the Urbana Furniture Co. a card asking for their free booklet completely describing their "Happi-tyme Nursery Furniture" and a list of furniture dealers in Chicago who handled their nursery equipment. * * *

Mothers and fathers who would like to solve their child problem should look into the nursery and playroom idea. And, first of all, in order to see what the modern nursery and playroom should be, they should mail the coupon below to the home of "Happi-tyme Nursery Furniture." Mandel Bros. in their furniture department carry a complete line of "Happi-tyme Nursery Furniture."

FRUIT JUICES FOR SWEETENING

At the agricultural experiment station of the University of California a great deal of work has been done on home preparation of fruit juices and the making of preserves by W. V. Cruess and Frederic T. Bioletti.

In a leaflet by Prof. Cruess on "Home Preparation of Fruit Sirups and Preserves," it says: "Sirups made from grapes, apples, and other fruits can be used in cooking or on the table to replace sugar to a great extent." In another leaflet on fruit juices he says: "The directions given in this publication for the preparation of fruit juices are designed for use in the household or in small scale production of juices on the farm. The methods described are based on the results of investigation that has been well tested. The recipes are given as precisely as possible."

The list of recipes is for apple juice, red grape juice, loganberry, blackberry, and raspberry juices, lemon juice, orange-lemon juice, grape juice, pomegranate juice, and clarification of fruit juices.

Preserved Lemon Juice.

From the experiences of the last ten years I know that about this season lemons and other citrus fruits may be much lower in price than in summer, though inclined to be lowest in April, and so many women are in search of recipes for preserved lemon juice to use for summer drinks or lime or orange sirups. It requires less sugar to make lemonade with sirups than with fresh juice and sugar, and the drink is smoother and more agreeable. A little fresh juice may always be added to tone it up, or other fruits may be crushed and added for this purpose, especially the strawberry. A single teaspoon of sugar at the last in such mixtures will go far, enhanced flavors compensating for less sweetness.

"Lemon juice does not retain well its flavor after pasteurizing. Cull lemons and 'juice' lemons may often be obtained cheaply in lemon orchards or packing house [in California, of course, yet sometimes in our markets]. Cut the lemons in half. Remove the pulp and juice with a lemon squeezer or on a glass lemon cone. Strain out coarse pulp. Bottle and pasteurize as directed for apple juice. Lemon juice always develops a 'limey' or stale flavor in time, but is still good for lemonade."

Basis for All Fruit Juices.

Here is the complete recipe for making apple juice, all the others really being based in part upon it:

"Apples for production of juice should be of good flavor and rather tart. Winesap, Northern Spy Gravenstein, Newton, and Pippin are all good for this purpose. They should be clean, sound fruit and not wormy culls. A thermometer that may be immersed in the liquid is necessary. A dairy thermometer reading 185 degrees Fahrenheit, or higher, will answer the purpose.

"Crush or grind the fruit and press out the juice. If the fruit is heated to 150 or 160 degrees Fahrenheit (not above 160) for a few minutes, it will press more easily. Heat the juice to 150 degrees Fahrenheit in a kettle. Strain or filter the juice through a jelly bag or other filtering device. It is usually desirable to strain the juice twice.

"Pour the juice into bottles, allowing a space of about one and a half inches in the necks for expansion of the juice during sterilization. Crown finish bottles are best if any large amount of juice is to be put up. Cork the bottles with corks previously sterilized for ten minutes in boiling water. Tie the corks down with string to hold them in the bottles during sterilization. Crown caps and bottles require a crown bottle capping machine. Small hand power cappers can be purchased for $10 or less.

"Pasteurization—Lay the bottles in a horizontal position on the false wooden bottom of a wash boiler sterilizer or large pot. Fill the boiler or kettle with water. Heat the water slowly until a thermometer held in the water registers 175 degrees Fahrenheit. Maintain this temperature for twenty minutes. For larger scale pasteurization a large wooden vat with false bottom and heated with steam coils may be used. The wash boiler or pot pasteurizer may be filled full of bottles so long as the water completely covers them.

"As soon as the corks are dry after removing the bottles dip the ends of necks and corks in melted paraffin. Dip again when the bottles are cold. This prevents molding."

Two items may be mentioned here as of importance, it seems to me, in heating fruit juices. To heat them evenly use an aluminum kettle, since the heat applied at any point will instantly spread to all points. In other kettles the bottom part of the fruit may be hot enough to destroy its flavor, while the top part is still cold unless it has been constantly stirred. A thermometer in such a kettle does not always tell the exact truth.

Instead of cork stoppers, cotton plugs may be used in sterilizing fruit juices, if afterward they are twice paraffined, as in the case of the corks, but unless a hard plug is made, paraffin poured on it hot may go through. Mold sends down long roots, and cotton is not so good as the cork, unless great care in sealing the top surface is used.

The Cruess orange-lemon juice recipe reads:

"Mix one pint of lemon juice with each pint of orange juice. Add two pounds of sugar to each gallon. Bottle and pasteurize as directed for apple juice. To serve this juice, dilute each cup of juice with one or two cups of water. This juice retains its flavor much better than ordinary fruit juice."

"Grapefruit juice: Cut fruit in half and remove pulp and juice on a glass cone. Strain through cheese cloth. Heat to 175 degrees and pour into scalded bottles, filling them full. Cork and tie down the corks. Place the bottles in water previously heated to 175 degrees and keep at this temperature for twenty minutes. Remove the bottles and seal with paraffin. This method removes the air from the bottles and prevents darkening the juices which would otherwise take place. Grapefruit juice is the most satisfactory of all citrus fruit juices."

That is film

It is the film coat that dims the teeth's luster. Film is the basis of tartar. Film is the stain-absorber—not the tooth enamel.

Film is called "bacterial plaque," because germs breed there—millions of them. And countless troubles, local and internal, are now traced to them.

The acids which cause decay form in that film and stay there. So film removal, day by day, is the vital part of teeth cleaning. Without that, brushing cannot save the teeth.

Let Your Teeth Glisten

Like the Teeth You See—Remove That Cloudy Film

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Look about you—note how many white teeth you see nowadays. Your own friends have them—ask them how they get them.

A new teeth-cleaning method is being fast adopted. Millions of teeth now show the results of it. Leading dentists everywhere advise it. See what that method does, and quickly, on your own teeth. Make this ten-day test.

You must fight film

To have whiter, safer teeth you must fight film—the cause of most tooth troubles.

Film is that viscous coat which you feel with your tongue. It is ever-present, ever-forming. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and remains.

The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve it. A soapy tooth paste makes it more clinging. So the tooth brush has left much of it intact, until a dentist could remove it.

That is why so many brushed teeth discolor and decay. Tartar forms and pyorrhea starts. Despite the tooth brush, these tooth troubles have been constantly increasing. Every dentist nowadays knows that this film is responsible.

How teeth are ruined

The film absorbs stains and becomes discolored. Thus the teeth grow cloudy. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. So few escape these troubles if they leave film on the teeth.

Dental science has for years sought a way to fight film; and the way has now been found. Able authorities have proved it by convincing clinical and laboratory tests.

Now, for home use, the method is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. In three great ways this tooth paste meets modern dental requirements. Dentists are urging its adoption. And millions of 10-Day Tubes are sent out, so that people may see its effects.

Based on active pepsin

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to day by day combat it.

This method long seemed impossible. Pepsin must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. But science has discovered a harmless activating method. Now active pepsin can be daily used. And two other methods are combined with it to bring desired effects.

The result is a tooth paste which is doing what nothing else has done. And the problem of tooth protection has been solved as it never was before.

Argument not needed

Pepsodent quickly proves itself. The results are too apparent to be doubtful. So a 10-Day Tube is being sent to anyone who asks. A book goes with it to explain the effects.

Thus millions are seeing what it does, and deciding for themselves.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how the teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

Then consider what this means. Film is the teeth's chief enemy. Its removal means not only pearly teeth, but cleaner, safer teeth. The results may be of tremendous importance, both to you and yours. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget.

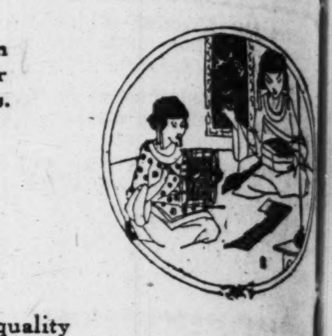
Chinese handmade laces—100,000 yards

—our own importation—in a remarkable sale

Exquisite copies of French and Italian filet designs, in the widths desired for trimming lingerie, frocks, and blouses; also Chinese hand made Irish laces, hand made torchon and cluny laces, and hand made venise laces; bought in large quantities, and quoted at extremely low prices.

China is effectively correcting an unfortunate market condition. The world war, of course, disorganized the lace industry in Europe, and since the war thousands of lace weavers have entered more remunerative fields. The Chinese found it a simple matter to adapt their talent and adeptness to the production of filet laces that are in all respects the equals of their occidental prototypes.



49,000 yds. hand made cluny and torchon laces at 18c, 25c, 35c, 45c, 75c, 95c yd.

10,000 yards handmade Irish laces, 1.15 yd.—1.75 yd.—2.25 yd.

All the wanted widths in edges and insertions; rose patterns, shamrock patterns, etc. Values of remarkable merit.

40,000 yards handmade filet laces, 55c, 75c, 95c, 1.25, 1.45,

1.75, 2.25, 2.75 yd. New designs on hand tied nets, in finest quality and all desirable widths. First floor.

1,000 yds. hand made venise laces—edges and insertions—narrow and medium widths—copies of finest Italian patterns—at 5.25, 7.75, and 9.75 yard.

5,000 yards real filet pecot edge, at 45c per yard. 2,000 filet and venise medallions, 22c to 3.95 each.

Dress goods remnant sale accorded pronounced success

Last week, Chicagoans bought many thousands of yards of wool dress goods, coatings and suitings — amply and economically providing for future needs. So large were the original lots, however, that this week's shoppers will enjoy a choice scarcely less rewarding.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

DAY AND EVENING WEAR.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

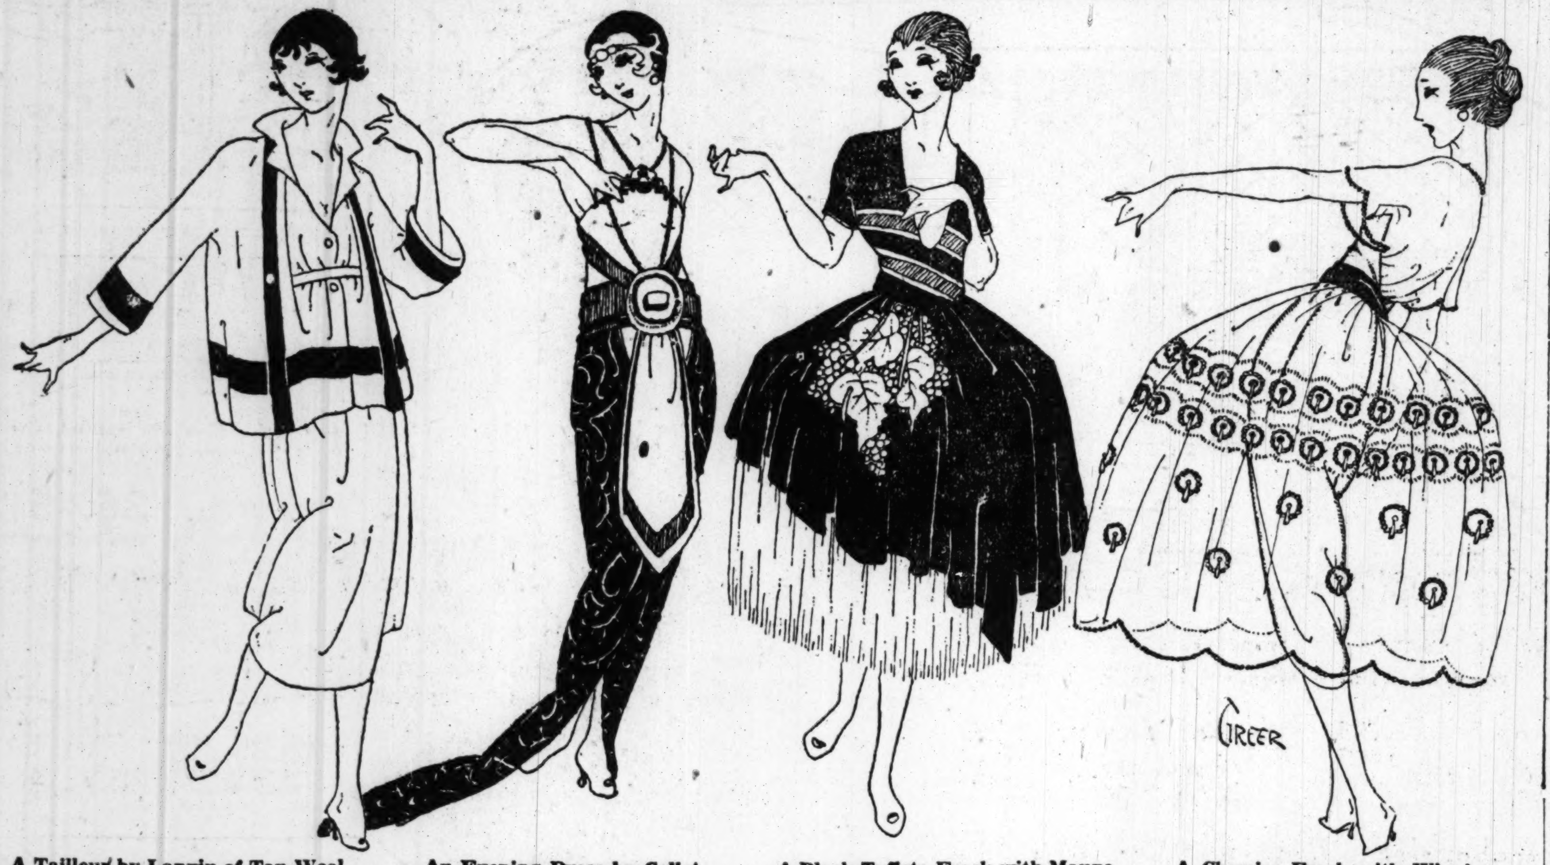
PARIS.—[Special correspondence.]—Whatever you buy in this town always seems to turn out to be for the evenings. You think you are geting something for marketing, and when it comes home, you take it for a dinner dress. I think that the Parisians believe that a really clever woman wouldn't appear before twilight.

This, by the way, would make the Paris of the moment a difficult place for her, for the Paris of these present weeks is not like the evening of the fête, but the morning after: It is like champagne that has stood. Never have I seen the city of pleasure so dull.

What it lacks, I believe, are the Americans, and I almost believe the Parisians are coming to think so, too—the energetic, noisy, Americans, to give them a little of the will to do. Some of our country people are getting here, and by that token, the pall is lifting ever so slightly. I struck up an acquaintanceship with two perfectly strange ones yesterday at a smart house. At the end of half an hour we were on terms of complete understanding, and discussing whether pointed fox or silver fox gave the face a more youthful appearance, and we assisted one of the girls to try on almost everything in the shop.

We might have been in Chicago, so perfectly American was the scene atmospherically; it was just such a scene as I have taken part in years ago, only this was Paris instead of good old Chicago, which sometimes seems so very far away. We didn't have any Louis something or other spacious salons, set in antique mirrors and crystal chandeliers, in Michigan avenue, still the presence of these stage accessories yesterday did not interfere with the illusion, an' I dreamed last night a happy dream that I was at home. One of these girls was trying to buy a simple little traveling suit to wear in India, and she had made little progress by 5:30. By Thursday she expects to have covered the city of Paris, and I shall hear from her whether the town contains such a thing.

The first sketch presented shows a costume that had rather better luck than some of the others. I mean that it succeeded more or less in keeping in the boundaries which it set out to observe. That is to say, you could wear it to something short of a wedding. Both skirt and jacket have unusual features. In the skirt it is extensions or the drapes low down on the sides. The jacket, which is unbelted in the back, is arranged in the front with a slide or open place on either side to run the belt through, so that except for a short distance right across the front it is unbelted.



A Tailleur by Lanvin of Tan Wool. An Evening Dress by Callot. A Black Taffeta Frock with Mauve Underskirt. A Chemise Frock with Wired Overskirt.

There is a vast movement on in Paris, if my observations do not deceive me, for omitting belts. After our long siege of the apron string—well, if you do me the honor to read this column you know my views on that subject. But the movement for unbeltedness deserves separate treatment.

To get back to this tailleur; it is by Lanvin; it is of rough, woolly tan stuff, and the broad stripes are of silver braid. I verily believe there is not a thing in her house that has not silver braid on it somewhere.

I was mentioning to Mrs. Will Irwin this afternoon what is in the first lines of this letter. She went me one better on my own proposition. She said she thought if they started to make a shroud it would turn into an evening dress. I shouldn't be surprised if the Egyptian movement in its gaunt, stark thinness started on the occasion of some smart designer beholding a shroud. They get ideas from everything.

If this is the case here is an example of a shroud that turned into an evening dress. It is by Callot and the bodice is of flesh colored satin, while the skirt is black and of solid embroidery in beads of deep blue, green, and black. The shoulder beads are emeralds. It is the fashion this summer to have the most extraordinary ornamentation pinned immediately in front over the abdomen. This one is a sort of stomacher of jade and blue stones holding a ceinture with ends which fal down the middle of the skirt.

The third dress looks as if it might just as well have been a street frock had not some designer been overtaken with a spurt of creative enthusiasm and embroidered the skirt in silver leaves and purple grapes. Having gone as far as that, I suppose he thought he might just as well wire the skirt, the material by the way being black taffeta, and put in an underskirt that falls like a summer shower in which you can see the individual streaks of rain. This underskirt is of two shades of mauve. It was a simple matter then to cut the bodice a little lower and put round it two diagonal bands of silk in purple, silver, and green. And so it was that the dress went on from bad to worse, until it cannot be worn to anything short of a dinner party. Such is the fate, I fancy, of many a tailleur in Paris.

The fourth dress you will recognize as our old chemise frock with the underskirt tightened and the overskirt wired. That's about all there is to it. The color is turquoise, the material net with taffeta for the foundation. It is embroidered in diamonds and pearls—fake ones, of course, but scarcely less lovely than real. The scalloped edgings around skirt and sleeves are outlined in pearls.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

Jimmy was just recovering from a spell of sickness and aunty was to take him out of doors on the first bright day. It happened to be cloudy and kept on raining day after day for over a week. One morning upon looking anxiously out of the window he was overjoyed to see the sun shining. "Oh, aunty," he eagerly shouted, "come and take me out, quick, 'fore the sun gets ready to leave town again!"

A tiny miss who had never taken part in anything before an audience was to sing in a church on children's day. They were all tots in the chorus. Her parents, anxious that she might not take her part well, decided something ought to be said to her at the last minute. So her father said, "Dorothy, now you must be sure and keep up with the rest when you sing!"

"Oh," replied the child, "I always keep up, I'm most generally ahead!"

We were inspecting a house with a view to buying. The back porch was in sad need of repair, and as I was about to step out upon it little Henry put out his hand to draw me back. "O, mother!" he cried, "don't go out on the porch—it's crippled!"

Elise is fond of the phonograph and knows many of the songs. Her mother was singing her to sleep the other night, much against baby's will, as she wanted to play longer. She said, "Please take that record out of your mouth, don't sing that song." Reaching up she said, "Open your mouth" and then made as if she were taking the record out, throwing it aside, then as if putting in another said, "Now sing that—'A pretty girl is like a melody.'" After which she quieted down and went to sleep.

A little girl who was making tissue paper doll dresses held a piece of bright green tissue against the blue dress she had made and said: "Do you think these two colors rhyme all right?"

The other day our neighbor's little boy came in to watch our kittens play. On his approach one of the kittens drew up rather scared, when he exclaimed, "O look, she backs up just like an auto."

The other afternoon when my small daughter returned from a friend's house I asked if the baby had learned to talk. "Why, mother," was her answer, "she don't use her own talk; she just takes your words after you get through using them."

My small son was out in the garden with his grandmother, helping her transplant some flowers. He was getting tired and hungry and asked several times to be taken into the house. Grandma kept promising, but kept on with her work. Finally he said: "Gamma, let's go in and see how mamma looks."

J. R. M.

While I was walking with Johnny we encountered a big dog. I was afraid that he was going to bite my little brother, so I was throwing stones at the dog, when I heard my little brother say, "Don't be afraid, Dan, I'm here."

D. M.

Mrs. S. came to visit mother. It was a long time since their last meeting, so there were many things to talk about. Sonny interrupted them several times, but little attention was paid to him. Finally the child sighed and said, "Oh, how I wish I could get some one to listen to me!"

C. C.

Jimmy and Allen had a falling out; but, as Jimmy was going to have a birthday party in a few days, Allen did considerable thinking. At last he went to Jimmy and said: "Say, what's the use of being out with each other? Let's be friends till after your birthday party, anyway."

Mrs. H. R.

While unusually busy cleaning house Enid came to me, repeatedly asking for a story. After trying to put her off in one way and another without avail, I finally said firmly, "No, dear, mother can't tell you any stories now."

"Why, mother?" questioned the undaunted little miss, "is your teller all tired out?"

Mrs. C. D.

Joseph was called into his home in the midst of a quarrel with his little neighbors, and as soon as he entered the house he started to cry. His older brother teased him and said: "I'm surprised, Joseph, that you would let a boy smaller than you hurt you."

Joseph stopped crying and replied: "I'm not crying; it's my fighting self."

R. B.

My house and the ones on either side are built on the same plan, so the little girl who had moved in next door found that it was hard to locate her own home. One afternoon she walked into my living room and, finding that she had gotten the wrong house, she heaved a deep sigh and said: "My, but I wish our house looked like itself."

Ice Cream 35c a Quart in a Thermopak

MAY 27th
NATIONAL ICE CREAM DAY

Ice Cream Is a Food

No dessert is so refreshing as ice cream. On summer days it brings the coolness of ice, the richness of sugars, and fats of finest creams. The flavor is indescribable and unsurpassable to every tongue.

In the home ice cream is a precious boon to all the family. It conserves the mothers' time and the children's health. It saves the family disposition. With it every meal is complete. Without it there is that sense of loss that only its presence can dispel.

Ice cream is the ideal dessert. It combines all the advantages of delicacy, richness, depth and permanency of flavor. Health, strength, and rugged vitality are its only after effects.

Ice Cream is a better food than meats, fish or eggs. In the Thermopak you can keep it hard without ice or salt until ready to serve. Order it today in a Thermopak from your nearest druggist or confectioner.

Millions of families will celebrate this happy day with thousand of dealers in all parts of the country. On National Ice Cream Day your favorite brand of ice cream will be sold for 35c a quart in a Thermopak for $1.50. Combination price $1.85.

Mothers have known ways in which ice cream builds and sustains health. They have known how good it is for the children, for the aged, for the sick. On Ice Cream Day they will know how easy it is to keep Ice Cream in the Thermopak. Ice Cream can now be served at dinner as delicious as the moment it was bought at the druggist or confectionery, or brought out from town.

The Thermopak is a container that retains temperature indefinitely. It will keep ice cream hard two to four hours without ice or salt. On May 27th bring home a quart of ice cream in it. Afterward use it to keep liquids and solids hot or cold. Send it down to the druggist for a quart of ice cream when unexpected guests come in. Make your desserts in advance. Put them in a Thermopak. Come home and serve them for dinner as fresh and perfect as the moment you made them.

The Thermopak is the greatest single improvement since iceless refrigeration. Get one on National Ice Cream Day, May 27th. Use one throughout the year to help lighten the work of keeping and serving.

Purpose of National Ice Cream Day

The remarkably low price is made possible by the Thermopak Company to encourage wider use of ice cream as a food in the home and to demonstrate the usefulness of the Thermopak. Order your favorite brand.

OPEN TO LIGHT AND AIR.

One of the most difficult problems which the modern home builder has to solve is the problem of windows. Our grandfathers thought of a window as an outlook. We think of them as something to let the sun and air in. Old houses have few and small windows, and the architect used them to break up the blank spaces of the walls. Modern houses have so many and large windows that they become a part of the wall, and to give them artistic treatment is a puzzle of the first magnitude.

In the house here shown that problem has been solved in the simplest and therefore best possible manner. The architect has accepted windows at their full modern value, and grouped them to show that value. One look at this house is enough to satisfy you not only that the living room is flooded with light but that no part of the house will lack sun or air. Four fine windows are put together, jutted out a little from the main wall, given narrow flanking casements and a separate roof, and the result is a cheery, airy hominess which every one feels. You cannot imagine close, fussy rooms in a house which gives such generous welcome to the sunlight and winds.

The floor plans are as artistic and practical as the view leads one to expect. A curved colonial hood covers the entrance, which leads to a small hall. At the right are the stairs and a handy coat closet. In front is a short passage which leads to the kitchen, passing the basement stairs on the way. This convenient arrangement saves miles of travel in the course of a year. To make matters still easier, a closet for brooms, dusters, etc., is right next to the kitchen door.

At the left of the hall is the big, beautiful living room, 12 by 20 feet. On one side of the room is the window group which sets the keynote for the house: on the other are the openings to the dining room and living porch. In the end wall is the fireplace, with high windows on either side of the mantel.

One thing deserves especial notice about this fireplace. It offers a cosy place to sit. You can warm yourself at the blaze without being in a draft. The dining room arch is far enough back to leave a convenient corner, and the porch is closed off by a glass door. This arrangement makes a decided addition to the comfort of the family on cool evenings.

The living porch, 9 by 12 feet, is partly under the main roof of the house, and partly under an attractive projecting roof of its own. The porch is fitted to be screened and glassed. The dining room is 11 by 12 feet. Like the porch, it looks out on the garden on one side and opens to the living room on the other. The kitchen is 8 feet 6 inches by 12 feet 4 inches. There is no pantry, but closets and cabinet space are provided until a pantry seems unnecessary.

The kitchen entrance is at grade level. From the landing just inside the door, the basement stairs go downward on the left, while in front three steps lead to the little passage between kitchen and hall. The handiness of this plan need not be explained to the housewife.

The upper part of the house is as thoughtfully designed as the lower. There are three bedrooms, the smallest of them 9 by 12 feet, and all equipped with closets. In addition, there are a bathroom, linen closet, and trunk room. It is evident that no space is wasted; the man who builds this house gets every inch of room he pays for.

As for materials, nothing is quite suitable for the walls of this house but face brick. With that substance the builder can get any color or texture he wants, and can have a variety of close harmonies that recall the blending tones in an oriental rug. The backing of the walls may be either common brick or hollow tile, but only face brick should show on the surface. The main roof may be asphalt shingles, tile or slate; the entrance hood and window group are roofed with metal. Interior plaster should be put on metal lath

Many people think that a face brick house must be an expensive house. This is not at all true. To build this house as specified will cost not quite 7 per cent more than to build it of lumber—and think what you get for that 7 per cent:

First, beauty. There is no real comparison between a face brick house and a lumber one in this regard.

Next, economy. A brick house does not depreciate in value at all for five years. A frame house depreciates from the start at the rate of about 2 per cent per year. In a little over three years, the face brick house has paid for its extra cost in that item alone. Add the lower expense of the brick house in insurance and upkeep, and the account between it and the frame house becomes too one sided to talk about.

Last, but by no means least, the man who builds of brick gets security. This house is virtually fireproof. If some unusual accident or some incendiary starts a fire in it, the blaze in all probability will be confined to one room. There is almost nothing to burn, and nothing at all to conduct a fire beyond the place of its origin. No combination of circumstances could burn a family alive in this brick house as hundreds of families have been burned in wooden houses.

One may perhaps have a right to neglect beauty and economy when building a home, but has one the right to house his children in a firetrap when he can just as well put them in a structure that is nearly fireproof and timeproof?

Why not have an
A-B-C
ELECTRIC WASHING MACHINE?

THERE is complete satisfaction in having an A-B-C because it is known to be decidedly better. Its enviable reputation is based on its achievement of complete satisfaction.

The A-B-C washes clothes CLEANEST and QUICKEST. Its scientific operating principles also make it positively the most merciful on the wear of clothes. It even wears clothes less, much less, than the old fashioned scrub-board and knuckles. From every point of view, the A-B-C is your logical choice.

Sold by more than 60 electrical appliance dealers in and near Chicago.

We will gladly demonstrate the A-B-C in your home. Easy payments can be arranged. Telephone Central 459 for a demonstration on your next wash day.

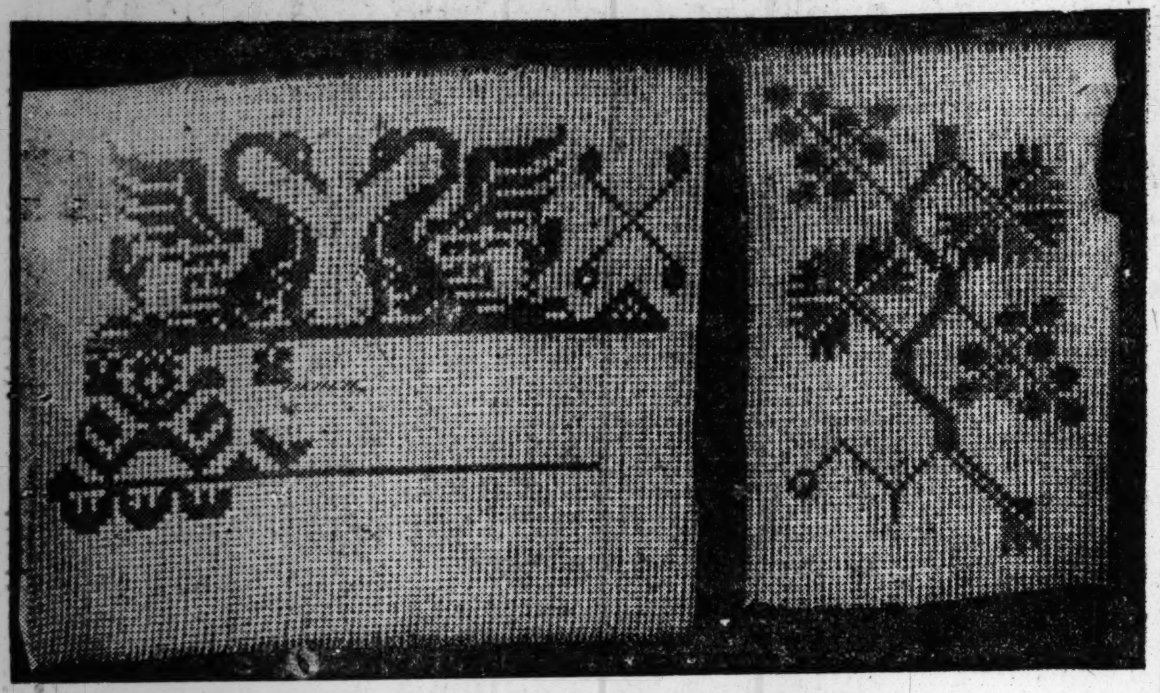
Practical and Fancy Needlework

BY CLOTILDE



The Design Begun Is to Be Continued All the Way Across.

DESIGNS IN CROSS-STITCH.

EMBROIDERY is in demand and for all sorts of purposes. A dress, whether of linen, silk, or wool, is pretty certain to have a touch of embroidery somewhere on it, while all sorts of lovely things for the home—bedspreads, curtains, towels, sofa pillows, bureau and table scarfs, and table linen—are made more attractive by being embroidered in one of many beautiful stitches.

The old fashioned cross stitch work is one of the popular methods of embroidering, and today's picture gives two stunning designs, suitable for many different things. They are Russian designs, and were used as two of six or eight wonderful patterns embroidered on an apron. They should be done in some brilliant color, contrasting with the color of the material on which they are worked.

If the design is to be used on a wash material it is necessary to choose fast colors, and be doubly sure about them by pouring boiling water over them, and allowing the floss or cotton to remain in the water until it is cold.

There are scrims and other cloths showing a mesh which makes the cross stitch easy, but where one wants to use a fine linen, silk, or other material it will be necessary to baste embroidery canvas on the cloth, do the embroidering, and then pull the canvas out.

Take a bureau scarf for instance. If the sides and ends are to be hemmed this work should be finished before basting the canvas in place. Then it is important to baste the canvas on so it is absolutely straight. In order to have the canvas wide enough, count the spaces in the design where it is widest and then count the spaces in your canvas, and allow a little margin on all sides.

To get the best effect, a design of this kind should be started in the center of the width of the scarf, and then work towards each end—otherwise it will not be balanced.

The size of thread and needle depends on the material on which the work is being done, but never use a needle that passes through the canvas meshes with difficulty, and knots should not be used. Instead, hold the end of the thread with the left hand, until a sufficient number of stitches has been taken over it to hold it.

Be sure that all stitches are taken on the same slant, all the under stitches going in one direction, and all the upper ones taking the opposite direction. Another thing, don't pull the stitches too tight. When ready to pull the canvas away, pull the shorter threads of the canvas first and the long threads will then come easily.

The grapevine design is stunning used on dresses, fancy aprons, or any thing for the house, and it is effective when two colors are used. For instance, the centers of the grapes, alternate parts of the leaves, and the middle of the main stem could be done in a brilliant red, and the balance in the right blue to go with it; these colors show up beautifully on white linen. Of course there are almost endless combinations, depending largely on what the article is to be used for.

Pictures for an Invalid.

"I have stereoscopic views of the Holy Land that I should be glad to send to an invalid or a shut-in. There are fifteen of the pictures, and they might help to lighten some weary homes. M. A. K."

We are grateful to you for your kind offer.

Must Stay Indoors.

"Would you help me to secure a wheel chair for my mother? She is a widow, 77 years of age, and an invalid. I should like to have her enjoy the summer days, but she is unable to get around by herself and for that reason is forced to stay indoors. I am not able to buy her one, as I work every day to support myself and mother. We would be so thankful. MRS. H."

I hope you get the wheel chair and get it soon. It is hard to be shut off from outdoor life, as a cripple must be without this aid.

FOR AND BY BUSINESS GIRLS

BY LORETTA KING

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

GRAFT IN A BUSINESS OFFICE.

NOT infrequently we hear or see in print the term "grafter" applied with scorn and contempt to one man by another, or to a group of men by another group. It is a far from pleasant sounding word with an implication that is less pleasant. It represents the mean and despicable.

Somehow one doesn't like to associate the word with women in business. However, in the letter printed below one business woman accuses her associates of indulging in a form of petty graft, which she alleges has cost them the respect and coöperation of the men associated with them in their work.

While the letter might contain a slight exaggeration of the situation, it is undoubtedly a sincere effort to correct an undignified and unethical practice which, according to the writer, is prevelant among women workers:

"Dear Miss King: I have lost all patience with the girls in our office for their continual demands or hints to the men for candy, flowers, theater tickets, and other favors too numerous to mention.

"Sometimes they get the things for which they maneuver, and sometimes they do not. Being refused or ignored by the men in the office has no permanent effect towards curing them.

"There isn't a man in the office, with the exception of the boss, or a customer who comes into the office even, who can get any information or service from these girls without an attempt being made to extort compensation in one form or another. The payment asked usually takes the form of a box of candy. Every outside salesman who comes into our office knows that he hasn't the slightest chance of getting the attention of the boss unless he bribes his way to him.

"To the men, of course, this is most annoying. Once or twice some one has threatened to complain to the boss, but strange as it may seem, no one has actually done so. The girls, for the most part are industrious and efficient, but I am sure the boss would not tolerate one of the offenders in his office if he knew of the practice.

"What the girls need is a good hot lecture, and I am mean enough to hope that the boss learns of the situation. He would tell them, I know, in a few but exceedingly plain words what their practice amounted to.

"The men who come into the office and our own men have little respect for the girls. While there are two or three of us who are above hinting for favors from the men we serve, we are condemned with the others.

"I know that the girls in our office are not the only offenders. That is why I have written out this complaint. For if girls in business are brought to realize how mean and petty is the practice of refusing to do work for which they are well paid without being bribed, I think it might have some small effect towards a correction.

"B. P."

Give The Skin New Life

WHEN you first observe your complexion beginning to lose its youthful freshness don't neglect it. A little care each day will keep you youthful for years.

Try this simple formula—"A little CREME ELCAYA rubbed gently into the skin; then if you need color, a very little rouge spread carefully over the cheeks before the cream is quite dry; and after that the film of Elcaya face powder over all."

is a delightful, non-greasy, disappearing toilet cream that makes the skin like velvet.

Your dealer has ELCAYA and has sold it for years. Ask him.

JAMES C. CRANE, Sole Agent
Creme Elcaya Elcaya Rouge
Elcaya Face Powder
148 Madison Ave., New York

He said: "It must be right or wrong"

GREAT men come into this world to set new standards, to lead us by the hand, to show us our latent possibilities, to point out to us our errors, to add wisdom unto our knowledge and leave us enriched by their living.

Many illustrious names have graced the annals of Waltham progress in the craft of watch and clock making.

And none greater than Duane H. Church, a man whose inventive faculties were amazing and whose work in the field of applied mechanics placed America first in the great industry which Waltham represents.

AT a memorable banquet given some years ago in New York, representative of American genius, Duane H. Church was an honored guest as one of the greatest Americans of his time. He was invited there as co-equal with Edison, Morse, Bell, and others whose names are international household words.

It was an axiom of Duane H. Church that a mechanical thing was either right or wrong. He would not tolerate any middle ground. He rigorously applied this principle to the marvelous machinery he invented, to his original creations in time-keeping mechanisms, and his clear thinking mind concentrated just as eagerly on an infinitesimal part in a watch as upon the problems involved in automatic machines.

"Is it right? If not, it must be wrong." And to make mechanical things "right" was his life work.

And it is this ever-living ideal that has given the Waltham Watch a greater mechanical "rightness" than any other watch in the world.

We make this statement fearlessly and the "works" of a Waltham Watch are its unanswerable proof.

WE are talking now of the unseen excellences that go deeper than fancy cases, or odd-looking dials, or claims to ultra thinness, fancies, or preferences, or general statements about this or that watch—we are talking of the hidden things, the secret things in watch construction, things that when you go to buy a watch you don't know anything about, yet which mean everything to you for time-keeping and durability.

Did you ever hear of a "steady pin"? No! Well, it's a tiny pin that guides and helps to fasten together in correct position the plates of your watch. The genius of Waltham has been concentrated on a "right" steady pin. A pin that will hold firmly; indefinitely; that cannot become loose; that allows the particular part to be readily removed without stress or friction; that will keep the Balance Wheel true.

And the Waltham steady pin is the "right" steady pin. It is different from all other steady pins. And has more to do with good time-keeping, low repair bills, and dependable life-service for which Waltham Watches are famed, than one can even imagine.

AND there are many exclusive inventions, little hidden things, in Waltham Watches which we are telling the world about in our national advertising campaign. It will profit every man and woman who contemplates buying a watch to read about them.

The tremendous, far-reaching demand for Waltham Watches is a tribute to Waltham excellence. The resources of our great institution are intensified to answer this demand. From all over the world hands are stretched out to own a Waltham Watch. Thousands are patiently waiting until the beautiful and dependable timepiece is their own. If you are one of that number your confidence will be rewarded with a watch whose every mechanical part is made "right."

A Waltham Watch will therefore protect the money you pay for it by a life-time service.

MISS SUZANNE WILLA in "NIGHTIE NIGHT" LA SALLE

ATWELL PHOTO

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

So rich in drama has been the New York season that Mr. Mantle finds it arduous to select from the 140 plays produced the eight which shall be called by him the best. Of those chosen by Mr. Mantle for decoration only one has been presented in Chicago, Mr. Tarkington's "Clarence." Another "Mamma's Affair" is on its way to the Cort, and the remaining six will wait until next year or later before starting on their travels. Mr. Mantle's catalogue, in case you missed it, is repeated: John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln"; Eugene O'Neill's "Beyond the Horizon"; James Forbes' "The Famous Mrs. Fair"; Zoe Akins' "Declassee"; St. John Ervine's "Jane Clegg"; Booth Tarkington's "Clarence"; Rachel Barton Butler's "Mamma's Affair"; George Middleton and Guy Bolton's "Adam and Eva."

The business of selection is simpler here, where the good shows have been numerous, but the good plays few. The four that seem from this observatory to resemble plays, more or less, are Barrie's "Dear Brutus"; Roi Cooper Megrue's "Tea for Three"; Booth Tarkington's "Clarence," and Mr. Maugham's "Too Many Husbands." The ten best shows, to the same onlooker, are "Welcome, Stranger," "The Ruined Lady," the Sells-Floto circus, "Three Wise Fools," "39 East," "The Follies," "The Rose of China," "The Sweetheart Shop," "Sometime," and Miss Elsie Janis' war lark. Readers who differ from the above compilation may change it, without giving umbrage to the compiler, and may substitute such items as "The Acquittal," "Up in Mabel's Room," "The Puss-Puss Girls," "The Royal Vagabond"—in fact, almost anything—barring "June" and "Golden Days."

An order from Mr. Ziegfeld further denudes the ladies of his exhibitions by stripping them of what Ma Sunday calls the Devil's Colors. Paints and powders are forbidden hereafter to whiten the arms and to encrimson the cheeks of his ballet girls, and the sleepy eye that speaks the melting soul of the Follies must do so henceforth without the spurious aid of the chemist.

"A moist mouth" is advocated by the worldly mother in "Too Many Husbands" as a snare for men; and she counsels lip-biting as an effective preliminary to meeting the trustful male. Answering an inquiry, Mr. Ziegfeld thinks he may permit innocent subterfuges of that sort, but, he grimly continues:

"Rouge and hair dyes are out of the Ziegfeld shows. If a girl isn't beautiful naturally I don't want her in my choruses. Only cannibals and battleships need camouflage. American women slap on rouge and whitewash and blondine as if they were sign painters. The sticky red paint on their lips adds several pounds to their weight. If a woman has a lovely brown hair, why in heaven does she want to bleach it a sickly taffy yellow? God made the pigmentation correspond in a woman's hair and skin. Let her begin to tamper with either and she becomes a nature faker.

"No self-respecting American enjoys going to the theater with a woman who looks like the experimental department of an aniline dye factory. In January I issued an order that the girls of my choruses were to use no more rouge and powder and eyebrow penciling than the women in the audience. There seemed to be a rivalry between them. Now it must stop. Henceforth the Ziegfeld chorus girls at least will appear in public as they really are. There are too many handsome women in the United States for me to employ dishonest camoufleurs. A woman is practicing dishonesty with her manager or her husband when she uses cosmetics."

Oddly enough, Mr. Ziegfeld will not inhibit the sunrise hues when addressed to the perjury of his male visages. The men of his troupes are to be allowed the usual fraudulence of jowl and eyelash. By the way, do you remember "'way back when" it was said of chorus girls that they padded their legs?

Frank Swinnerton, dramatic critic of the London Nation and author of "Nocturne" and "September," has been regarding with gloomy disapproval the histrionism of Miss Peggy O'Neill, Miss Mary Nash, and other successful American artistes in London. He calls them jazz actresses playing in jazz plays. Mr. Swinnerton finds that, answering the theater demands of a neurotic and neurasthenic American people, these ladies work out a calculated rolling of the eyes, a pinching and pouting of the mouth, a whirlwind dancing and cajolery, showing little else than enormous physical exertion. "Something ought to be done at once," says Mr. Swinnerton. "It would be deplorable if the art of acting developed simply into the art of grimace."

W. S. Hart, the noble plainsman and one of the foremost of our eye-actors, turns his meek, though defiant, gaze back to the speaking drama. Mr. Woods proffers Mr. Hart $15,000 a week, so he telegraphs, to transfer his sombrero, his sheepy, though upright, physiognomy, and his ability to suffer successfully from frontier scenes to snappy episodes in and about a bed chamber. Mr. Hart is thinking it over.

In Pittsburgh last night Miss Elsie Janis closed her season with "The Gang." The profits of the twenty-five weeks are said to have been $115,000, of which Miss Janis received 50 per cent. Since she also enjoyed a weekly salary of $2,500, it is easy to compute that $120,000 were Miss Janis' winnings. Miss Janis will sail on the Adriatic next Saturday, along with Miss Jane Cowl and some others, and after a rest of a few months she will appear in a revue in Paris, playing in French.

Miss Maude Adams will return to the theater next season in Barrie's new play, "Mary Rose," the title role of which, they say, is ideal for her. "The play is all very beautiful, very strange," writes the critic of the Times. "The charm of Barrie has always been more or less indefinable. This time the story is of a young soldier, who, returning from the wars to the home of his childhood, now deserted, dilapidated, and reported to be haunted, falls asleep therein and has the past revealed to him in a vision. He sees his grandparents rejoicing over the betrothal of their daughter, Mary Rose (his mother) to a young naval lieutenant, Simon Blake, and learns how in her infancy she had once vanished mysteriously for a month in an island of the Hebrides.

"Four years after her betrothal, visiting the same island, this time with her husband and 2 year old baby, she vanished again, in the same fashion, to be absent for twenty-five years, during which her husband rose to great distinction in the navy and her little son ran away from home and was lost. When she was found once more she was no older than at the time of her disappearance and had, of course, no knowledge of what had happened. She was still looking for her baby when she died, and as a ghost continued the mournful quest. When, at the last, she meets with the sleeping soldier she does not recognize in him the missing baby, nor can he make her realize the truth, but he takes the forlorn spirit on his knee and consoles it with caressing phrases until it is at peace and melts into the night, never more to revisit the glimpses of the moon."

The piece has met with an enthusiastic reception and high praise is accorded the acting of Robert Loraine and Fay Compton.

In the general rush of the playwrights for biographical material, following the success of "Abraham Lincoln," two plays have been written with the life of Edgar Allan Poe as their subject matter. One is entitled "Poe," and is the work of B. Iden Payne, the stage director, and Thomas Wood Stevens, who shepherds the drama at Carnegie institute in Pittsburgh. The other, to be called "Edgar Allan Poe," has for its authors Samuel Shipman and one J. B. Rethy. "Poe," the Payne-Stevens opus, was acted in Pittsburgh last Tuesday night by the students of Carnegie institute. The Shipman play is said to have been acquired by the Selwyns, who contemplate casting Alan Dinehart in the rôle of the poet.

As a headline for his new Chicago theater, Mr. A. H. Woods has had upwards of 4,000 names suggested in lieu of the forbidden "McCormick." These are in addition to the hundreds received by The Tribune, which range from "The Fol de Rol" to "The Dunning." In the circumstances, Mr. Woods thinks he may call it "The Advance-Rumely" or "The J. I. Case."

The play which George Barr McCutcheon and Earl Carroll recently dashed off in the seclusion of an Atlantic City hotel has been christened "Daddy Dumplin'" and is destined for the use of Thomas A. Wise.

Eddie Leonard, a popular black faced troubadour, will become a $4 star next season in an idyll to be known as "The Knees and Sprees of 1920."

Miss Barrymore has amended her plans for a journey to Europe this summer and will recuperate instead at the Virginia spas and at her home near-by New York. Her Chicago engagement in "Declassé" is fixed tentatively for Powers', beginning in September, and continuing indefinitely. John Barrymore, who sank beneath the miseries of King Richard's crown, now wields the salubrious medicine ball at Muldoon's health farm, where, it is said, he grows stronger. Mr. Barrymore is in a list of players who have decided to act hereafter only in New York.

The weekly dossier from that corner of the drama which contains Miss Alice Brady announces:

Alice Brady, now in her sixth week of "Forever After," by Owen Davis, at the Garrick theater, takes exception to the many straight-laced people who think it is a crime for a woman to indulge in a cigaret. Miss Brady, after a particularly hard scene, either on the stage or in the studio, quite often has recourse to a puff of a cigaret, which has a tendency to calm her.

Alice Brady is contemplating a new motor car for next season, which will contain all the accessories of her dressing room, so that she can save the time consumed for making up while on the way from the studio to the theater. Her plans are now in the hands of a prominent maker of automobiles, and she will, in all probability, receive the blue prints before leaving the Garrick theater, where she is now in her sixth week of Owen Davis' "Forever After."

David Belasco has returned from a business and sentimental pilgrimage to Europe, full of cordial emotions toward other lands and other peoples. His visit to the graves of American soldiers in France gave him a queer reaction. "They seemed to me," says he, "like bits of Heaven!"

Two of the more imposing summer shows will make their advent in a fortnight. "The Midnight Whirl," from the Century Roof in New York, will come to the La Salle June 6, and on the night following "The Passing Show of 1919" will enter the Garrick, in case Miss Brady's many friends will let her leave, which they are reluctant to do. The Avon Comedy Four, vaudeville vocalists of renown, lead the players in The Passing Show. The Messrs. Shubert will present "Cinderella on Broadway" as the successor to The Passing Show in the New York Winter Garden next week.

IMMENSE industries, hidden hostility, treacherous Teutons, perilous plots, diabolical destruction, sinister selfishness, riotous recklessness, marital mixups, wanton warfare, high minded heroism, stirring sacrifice, magnificent melodrama—"Dangerous Days!"

And surprisingly enough, this adaptation of Mary Roberts Rinehart's novel gets under your skin. You may have fondly imagined yourself immune from the excitement of pre and early war agitations. You may have entered the darkened theater expecting a mild and somewhat timeworn thrill or two. You will come away weary and limp.

The story concerns itself with that supposedly nonexistent being, a tender hearted steel magnate. He is threatened with everything from German bombs to an unfaithful wife. You sigh with him as he watches the devastation of the former and the extravagances of the latter. And you rejoice with him when the happy, if somewhat weak, ending of the picture draws into view.

Lawson Butt takes the part of the t. h. s. m. exceedingly well. His personality is decidedly strong and pleasing, his acting good, and his manner and appearance entirely satisfactory.

The rests of the cast, with one or two minor exceptions, has been chosen and directed with care. Perhaps it is because she is playing opposite the beautiful but stern Mr. Butt that Barbara Castleton exhibits such charming histrionic ability. Perhaps it is because she prefers being an Audrey to a Margaret.

The book made good, live reading. The play is equally interesting in spite of the changes made. But if your constitution is naturally delicate and your nerves easily shattered, watch the barometer and look out for "Dangerous Days."

Rumor has it that Bert Lytell is about to return to the stage. Of course, we'll miss him from the screen, but it's nice of him to be true to his first love, isn't it?

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville

PALACE.

Wellington Cross: One of the young ladies in my act is a very good dresser. When she stands still, they say she's stunning. When she walks, they say she's ripping. I understand that waist lines are getting higher. Well, wherever they go, I'll find them. I have a new song entitled "If You Can't Get a Girl in the Summertime, You'll Have Lots of Money in the Fall."

RIALTO.

Mahoney and Rogers:

"Is this the first time you've been in trouble?"

"Say, do I look like an amateur?"

"Don't get funny. I suppose you've been in every jail in the country."

"Yes, and some in the city, too."

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself."

"O, I don't know."

"Have you ever been in any European jails?"

"No. My motto is: 'See America first.'"

"What's your name?"

"My right name is Reginald Vandergould von Slessinghausen, but in the underworld I'm known as Handsome Harry."

"Handsome Harry—with that map?"

"Say, the map of Europe looks worse than mine does."

"You seem to take your arrest very easy."

"Taking things easy is my profession."

"Don't you feel bad about going back to jail?"

"No. Why should I? Nowadays the jails are more comfortable than our best hotels, and everything is free."

"All Souls' Eve" Among Latest of Psychic Dramas

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It would be unkind to suspect the spirits of organizing a claque to boost the psychic drama on earth, but they certainly seem to be using their influence. No play with a spiritualistic theme has been permitted to pass out this season without an approving slap on its ghostly back, and most of them have been welcomed so enthusiastically that they are still with us.

The newest one is Anne Crawford Flexner's "All Souls' Eve," which John D. Williams offered at the Maxine Elliott theater last week. For the better part of two of its three acts it is an interesting, tense little play, firmly foundationed on the dramatic theme that another love cannot die; that it conquers death and endures for all time. But the rest of it is rather sadly deficient, the last act being utterly conventional and rather brazenly theatrical. This did not in the least discourage the spirit band, or their followers on earth, however, and when I left the theater they were still remaining to applaud.

Come to think of it, this may have been a moving picture claque, for it happens the Flexner play was financed by some of that awful "movie money" we have heard so much of lately, and is unquestionably designed for screen use later. Furthermore, it will make a better picture than it does a play. The mother whose soul returns to earth after she is killed in an automobile accident and takes possession of the body of the child's nurse will find it much easier to "fade in" and "fade out" on the screen than she does with the scenery getting in her way.

The spirit interest enters soon after the death of the young mother in the first act. She had been a helpful and an affectionate wife, a devoted mother to her infant son, an ideal neighbor in a suburban neighborhood where good neighbors, to judge from the play, were scarce. The world was her country and to do good her religion, as Tom Paine put it. But despite her many virtues and the need of her in the home, the morning she tried to drive to town to save her husband an unpleasant meeting with his employers a truck ran into the car and she was dead when they picked her up.

It happens that the day before the accident there had appeared at the door of this young woman's home an Irish girl just landed in this country and in search of friends and a job. Some one had given her an address in the neighborhood, which she had lost, so she stopped at the first house she had come to, announcing confidently that she had been "sint" and intimating that she would like to stay. She had been taken in temporarily and given charge of the baby when the mother left for town.

KENNETH DOUGLAS in "TOO MANY HUSBANDS"

With the mother gone, the Irish girl, Norah by name, continued as the child's nurse. A year later, on All Souls' eve, when, according to an Irish superstition, the souls of dead mothers are privileged to return to the earth to see if all is well with their children, the spirit mother came back. She found her son seriously ill with the croup and his father, his spirit broken and his ambition gone, rather befuddled with the liquor he was consuming in the hope of forgetting his troubles.

She wanders, a gray shadow with a muffled, anxious voice, about the rooms of her home, trying to get the message across that she is there to help if only they will listen. But, though they have ears, they hear not, until the child wakens and recognizes her. His call to her makes the miracle of All Souls' eve possible. If he needs her, she can stay on earth to help him. Norah's soul will take her place in heaven, and she will inhabit Norah's earthly habitation to be near the child. In the next two years the Irish girl's likeness to the dead mother is generally remarked, but this is attributed to her constant association with the boy and accepted as largely an imagined change. In the end the Irish girl, though there are evil earthly influences seeking to send her back to Ireland, is recognized by the husband for the treasure she is, and the concluding scene finds her happily enfolded within his arms.

Lola Fisher plays the two rôles of the mother and the nurse. It is a sympathetic performance and a good one, considering that Miss Fisher, by temperament and training, is a smart comedienne rather than an emotional leading woman. Cyril Keightley is the father, and the others include Clifford Dempsey and Anne Faystone.

Zoe Akins, who did so well by Ethel Barrymore (and, incidentally, by herself) in writing "Declassee," was engaged by George Tyler last winter to make a modern version of the old drama called "Forget-Me-Not." In its original form, we gather from the reviewers of the time, this was the sort of play those ladies of the stage gifted with an emotional temperament and a generous torso took great delight in playing, being the story of a scarlet sister who forces her way into a respectable home and insists upon being introduced as an old and dear friend of the family.

Having a hold on the family, she purposes to enjoy six weeks of respectability, and nothing can stop her. Of course, something does stop her before the last act is finished. A certain vengeful Corsican, whom she had ordered thrown out of her husband's gambling house in Paris years before, has been camping on her trail ever since. And when he appears, his side whiskers trembling and his stiletto arm twitching, she is ever so glad to sneak out of the house, clutching at the furniture and the draperies for support as she passes.

Miss Akins has been able to relieve the old play of much of its staginess and to brighten the dialogue. But it is still more artificial than real, and too set in its ways to be made convincingly human. Emily Stevens plays the scarlet lady. She is a modern emotionalist, restrained and natural; a heartless, vindictive, defiant super-cat. She makes much of her best scenes and in turn is made much of by her audiences.

The cast is one of those distinguished groups made possible by the closing of other attractions in the spring. Norman Trevor and O. P. Heggie are featured with Miss Stevens.

A third play to drift hitherward on the cool spring breezes is one called "The Respect for Riches." The heroine of this particular opus is an ambitious lady forced to live by her wits after she has lost all her money.

It is one of those English society plays in which every member of the cast is an epigrammatist, and in which no one of them can conceivably be accepted as a reasonable human being. Therefore it has little appeal as entertainment, beyond the individual performances of a good cast.

Music and the Musicians

On the Perils of Understanding Grand Opera—Marinuzzi's "Jacquerie," for Example.

By W. L. Hubbard.

It is feared that the Chicago Opera association management is about to miss a wonderful and rare opportunity. The time between now and the opening of next season is fairly long, however, and therefore attention is called now to the impending danger in the hope that better counsel may prevail, and the opportunity thus be made the most of.

The danger is contained in the contemplated presentation next season of Mr. Marinuzzi's opera "Jacquerie." As will be remembered the American premiere of the genial young Italian conductor's work was to have taken place last winter, but was not accomplished owing to the stress of other performances, the death of Mr. Campanini, and various unfavoring conditions. It is understood that scenery and properties were partially prepared, however, and the information is now given that in all probability "Jacquerie" will inaugurate the season of 1920-21 next November.

When Mr. Marinuzzi was here during opera time, he talked of the use of the American language as a desirable operatic medium and expressed himself as heartily in favor of having his own opera translated into our tongue and thus presented. He confessed that for the enjoying of the modern opera, comprehending of the text was a vital essential and stated that he himself felt every time he conducted one of the later day creations, that the public was not getting the value of the work owing to the language being foreign. He therefore was strongly in favor of translating all such operas into American and would wish to have his "Jacquerie" thus presented.

It was understood that such a translation would be made, but recent report from the east informs that Mr. Marinuzzi found that American "translations are not always happy; in fact I never realized how awkward they can be until I began to work with 'Jacquerie' which would require complete rewriting." It is evident from this, that the Italian master probably pursued the course customary—namely: that of having the translation made by some one who knew nothing of operatic and musical needs and therefore another inadequate, impossible translated libretto was added to an already overlong list.

Of course the result in nowise proves the claim that opera cannot be translated into singable, usable, perfectly fitted American. It merely means that Mr. Marinuzzi employed some one who did not know his business.

Might Offend Chaste Ears.

But the aforementioned danger lies not in the question alone of singing "Jacquerie" in American but clearly is linked up with the opera itself. Edward Johnson is to assume the leading tenor role, and he is now reported as declaring that the singing of "Jacquerie" in American would be to him and his associates an impossibility. It is pointed out that certain portions of the text are so suggestive, so blush-productive, so "outre" that not only would the chaste ears of Chicago opera goers be outraged and all finer sensibilities scandalized, but the modesty of the singers themselves would never permit them to utter the naughty, naughty phrases if they felt and knew that their listeners were understanding what impurity was sullying their fair lips. Oh blessed screen of Italian! Oh saving grace of bel canto! Oh sweet protective guardianship of opera singers!

Truly it is to shudder, just to think what might happen were some 4,000 of Chicago's virtuous music worshipers to have that virtue smudged and smootched by understanding what "Jacquerie" really is about. Just think how lovely it is to feel that they can enter into contact with such un-nice naughtiness, and come forth from the contact with not a snowy feather ruffled, to say nothing of shed! Of course, there will be a large assembly of Italian music lovers up aloft who will sit there deluged with the verbal iniquity that pours forth on the wings of wondrous song and which they will be able to understand. But their souls are not of such virginal stuff as is that of which the American soul is made, and they will, perhaps, therefore not go forth from the Auditorium any worse than they were when they entered. They will be happy and they will be wise. But the American will exit innocent, ignorant, and sweetly pure. And thus will art be served, thus will virtue remain triumphant, and thus will the opera singer be spared having his or her seraphic visage stained with the dull, deep, distressing red of shame.

Deficit Would Disappear.

But, on the other hand, just think what the business of the opera company is losing by this failure to give such an opera in the vernacular. Could the announcement be made that all the fearful awfulness of "Jacquerie" would be baldly and unreservedly disclosed at the opening performance of the season, that the singers had been forced under threat of immediate dismissal or death to sing the naughty, naughty words, even though they fainted with shame while so doing, just figure what would happen at the box office of the Auditorium! Can any one dare to try to estimate the premium that tickets would bring?

Is it not easy to picture the fierce combat that would take place between the Schuberts, the Woods, the Klaw & Erlangers, and their fellows for the rights to "Jacquerie"? "Up in Mabel's Room," "The Girl in the Limousine," and their kind would be shoved off the boards and "Jacquerie" would be running simultaneously in a dozen theaters! And think what a gold mine the Chicago Opera association would have in possessing the sole rights to such a work! Mr. McCormick would not be making good a deficit at the end of the season. He would be accepting a handsome profit!

Of course, those who have read the libretto of "Jacquerie" have found nothing whatever in a single line of it that is a bit different or a bit worse than that found in countless other standard and accepted librettos. But the sensitive soul of the opera singer discovers much that the hardened music critic never even suspects, and thus the concentrated, insidious naughtiness must be there. It is therefore earnestly to be deplored that the management cannot see its way clear to do such a promising stroke of business. Just think what it would mean to have sold out houses night after night, and all because "Jacquerie" was so wicked and so blush productive!

But, after all, art must be above all thoughts of mere money making, virtue must be guarded, even though we starve, and, besides, to have crowded houses for an opera sung in the vernacular might prove that the public liked opera sung in American, and to prove this—perish the thought!

"Farrar and Some Geese."

He was a traveling salesman, he was waiting for the next train, and he wanted to talk. He said he had been to New York "a while ago" and had gone to the opera. We asked what he had heard.

"Geraldine Farrar," was his reply.

"What did she sing?"

"Why, let's see! I don't remember—It was one of those new things," was the slightly confused answer.

"'Zaza', perhaps?" was suggested.

"No, it wasn't 'Zaza'."

"'Butterfly,' maybe?" was next queried.

"That's the Jap opera, isn't it? No, it wasn't that." He thought a moment and then he burst forth radiantly with "I tell you! It had Farrar in it, and there were some geese, too!"

"Oh, 'Koenigskinder'?"

"Yes, yes! that was it!"

And thus is one grand opera distinguished from another in the mind of the average American-speaking American citizen. "Farrar and some geese!" Shades of true opera understanding and culture!

North Shore Festival Opens Tomorrow

THE twelfth annual North Shore Festival begins in Evanston tomorrow night, and will occupy musical attention throughout the week. Chicago's regular season of concerts and recitals is to all intents and purposes ended, only the commencement exercises of the various schools and conservatories and a few scattering closing concerts remaining still on schedule. Attention will therefore center in Evanston and its musical offerings, which are planned and carried out in true festival manner.

The works to be presented and the forces employed are of the best and largest, and the five concerts bid fair to be of uncommon worth. They are arranged for Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday evenings, with a matinée on Saturday afternoon. In addition to these regular concerts, two public rehearsals are announced, to which the general public will be admitted on payment of 50 cents a person.

The first of these rehearsals wil ltake place this afternoon commencing at 3:30 and will consist of Henry Hadley's "Ode to Music," given with chorus, soloists, and the complete Chicago Symphony Orchestra. The second will be Wednesday night at 8 and will be devoted to the Cesar Franck "The Beatitudes." Both of these public rehearsals will be to all intents and purposes actual public performances, so that music lovers unable to secure places for the regular concerts may well avail themselves of these added opportunities.

The festival is under the leadership of P. C. Lutkin as musical director, Frederick A. Stock as orchestral director, Osbourne McConathy as associate conductor and Felix Borowski as composer-conductor. There will be a festival chorus of 600 voices, a children's chorus of 1,500, a high school chorus of 300, and a capella choir, and the Chicago Symphony orchestra of ninety men.

Tomorrow night the program consists of the overture "Carnival" of Dvorak played by the orchestra under Mr. Stock's leadership, and the Henry Hadley "Ode to Music," which will enlist the services of the festival chorus, the a cappella choir, the high school chorus, the orchestra and Emma Noe, soprano; Frances Ingram, contralto; Rafael Diaz, tenor, and Fred Patton, bass. Mr. Lutkin will conduct.

Tuesday evening will be "Artists' Night" and will bring forward Titta Ruffo as bright, particular star. He will sing an aria from "Zaza," three songs—"Novembre," by Tremisot; "Visione Veneziana," by Brogi, and "Sei morta," by Costa—and the "Drinking Song" from "Hamlet. The orchestra under Mr. Stock's baton will play Berwald's Dramatic Overture, the Dukas "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" and the Tschaikowsky "Italian Caprice"; and under Mr. Borowski's leadership will give the first performance of his own symphonic poem, "The Passionate Springtime."

Thursday evening the Prelude to "Parsifal" will open the concert and will be followed by "The Beatitudes" of Cesar Franck under Mr. Lutkin's direction, the solo parts being sung by Florence Hinkle, soprano; Cyrena Van Gordon, mezzo; Merle Alcock, contralto; Paul Althouse and John B. Miller, tenors; J. Campbell-McInness and Robert C. Long, baritones, and Burton Thatcher, bass.

Saturday afternoon will be a children's concert and will bring forward the chorus of 1,500 voices, the orchestra, and the a cappella choir. The chorus will sing Grant-Schaefer's "The Rabbit" and "The Cuckoo," the folk song "Blow, Wind, Blow," the March Chorus from "Aida," the "Twenty-third Psalm" set by Mr. Lutkin and sung then for the first time, and patriotic songs. Margaret Romaine will be soloist and will sing "Weep, Weep, Mine Eyes" from Massenet's "The Cid," and songs by Branscombe, Wells, Lehmann, and Rachmaninoff.

On Saturday evening Edward Johnson will be soloist, singing "O Paradiso" from "L'Africaine," "Donna non vidi mai" from Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," "E lucevan le stelle" from "Tosca," and "Vesti la giubba" from "Pagliacci," The orchestra will play the Glazounow "Solemn Overture," Franck's symphonic poem "The Wild Hunter," Moussorgsky's amusing "Musical Pictures," and Mr. Stock's "March and Hymn to Democracy," given with orchestra and chorus.

The concerts will take place in Northwestern university gymnasium and are announced for 8:15 for the evenings and 2:15 for the matinée.

Wedding Stationery
For the June Bride

There is a certain distinction and refinement connected with the quality of the engraving produced at the McClurg Shops. This difference is the reason that Spring and Summer Brides entrust their wedding stationery problems to our experts.

Specimens now on display in our Stationery Department offer a host of suggestions for invitations, announcements, and at home cards that nowhere, regardless of cost or production facilities, can be equaled.

Prospective June Brides should submit their engraving problems to us as early as possible, as quality work cannot be produced on short notice.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Thinks New Bridge Is Lacking as a Thing of Beauty

By Mme. X.

IN the face of the general public rejoicing and enthusiasm the question sounds ungracious, but now really, do you think that new boulevard link bridge a thing of beauty? Wide it is, and commodious and smooth, a vast improvement on the old Rush street structure, but beautiful in any sense of the word it is not.

How easily it might have been made so had artists and architects coöperated with the exceedingly competent, but quite unesthetic, engineers, who are entirely responsible for its outer aspect as well as for its inner mechanism.

For instance, the bridgetenders' towers which flank either end of the bridge might have been made delightful landmarks, striking features of the pleasure highway we hope to make one of the showplaces of the entire U. S. A. What are they now? About as pretty as overgrown pepper pots.

Is there nowadays no taste for fine wrought iron work? Could some twentieth century Peter Vischer have designed and hammered out the railings for the bridge the bridge might have become the object of pilgrimage from the four quarters of the globe. Countless thousands have gone to Nuremberg, Germany, chiefly to see the works of the original Peter Vischer.

Had it not been for a vow made in the heat of the recent war the writer would much like to revisit that ancient and most picturesque of towns just to study more carefully the details of its beautiful fountain and some delicious grillwork in the cathedral, both the fruit of this artist's genius. Perhaps that vow can be broken. If so, it will be chiefly because of the lovely flowers, leaves, vines, and scroll work he hammered out of earth's toughest, dourest metal.

Where Artist Was Needed.

It was undoubtedly expedient and practical to have a double decker bridge cross the river at Michigan avenue, but doesn't the lower driveway look as if the big structure was losing its underpinnings? Had some clever artist had a look in on the plans he might have devised something which would have made of this necessity a feature so attractive that its utility would have been overshadowed by its beauty.

In the matter of bringing beauty into important public edifices we ought to go to school to the Florentines of the fourteenth century. In the year 1331, when the building of the great Duomo (cathedral) was resumed, after years of interruption, plans for the interior and exterior were hung up inside the stucture and public criticism was invited. In large letters any one who found fault with the proposed design was urged to go, within eight days, to the head office and there speak his mind, being assured "a gracious hearing."

In this way every new structure became a school for the eye and taste of the Florentines, a topic for daily debate, and they themselves developed into competent and interested judges of the great architectural and artistic achievements that make their city today one of the world's choicest shrines.

Inartistic Buildings Line Drive.

I think the contemporaries of Giotto and Boccaccio showed an enlightened public spirit superior to ours. They would probably, while admiring the wide, spacious roadway of Michigan avenue north of the river, have been depressed and made restless by the fact that it sweeps in splendor through a scene of inferior architecture hard to match on any of our other avenues.

As we said in this col. some months ago, a boulevard is like an eye—only beautiful when rightly set. The beauty of an eye depends largely on the lids, eyelashes, and eyebrows. The beauty of a boulevard is a question of the symmetry and colors of the buildings or the landscape that border it.

It is to be hoped that the committee of architects which has been formed to pass judgment on the buildings that it is proposed to put up along that broad highway will take their mission seriously.

Jarvis Hunt, who is a prominent member of this committee, is an artist as well as an architect. Not many of his friends know of a recent achievement of his which is a conspicuous event in the religious world. The designs on the covers and margins of the edition de luxe of the Book of Common Prayer of the American Episcopal church are his work and are said to be a masterpiece of their kind. In olden times such embellishment of holy books was accomplished with the aid of prayer and fasting and in the soundless seclusion of lonely monasteries, where neither the telephone bell nor the motor horn broke the current of thought. We have changed all that, as the French say.

MISS MARGARET VON MAUR
PHOTO—HOSTETLER

An interesting announcement of last week was that of the engagement of Miss Margaret Von Maur, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Von Maur of Davenport, Ia., to Farley Hopkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. James MacHenry Hopkins of 999 Lake Shore drive.

Wail at Trade's Invasion.

It is time that some steps should be taken toward zoning the city, so that business may know its place and dwellings theirs. There is a general wail on the north side at a further invasion of the Lake Shore drive by anything that smacks of trade. The house built a quarter of a century ago by the late and most well beloved Prof. David Swing, which faces the lake near Goethe street, has been leased for business purposes. This menaces the choicest residence district in Chicago, what the irreverent call "the gold coast."

A few years ago even the building of big apartment houses on the drive was deemed a sacrilege. Today such structures would be considered highly desirable. That part of Michigan avenue which lies between Chicago avenue and the river is, of course, legitimate field for the advancing surge of business. The former residence, for instance, of Dr. Samuel J. Walker, a fine mansion of colonial architecture, will make a most suitable home for one of Chicago's oldest, best known art firms. A little further south a serious looking double breasted house, which was until lately a hotel, is being remodeled to fit the needs of a famous millinery and dressmaking establishment. Almost across the way the North Side bank will make it possible for shoppers to convert their credit speedily into cold cash, or vice versa. So the future complexion of that district is assured. It is to be hoped that the attractive region to the north can be preserved for residential purposes for at least another generation.

Open House for Convention.

You know what a sense of bustle, hurry, and excitement there is in a household when preparing for a real party. Chicago's beau monde is in that same state of mind as it makes ready for the great Republican convention which gathers here in June. Some of our society leaders are cleaning attics and cellars and putting fresh flowers in the vases and candles in the candlesticks against the arrival of large house parties of notabilities drawn here by the big powwow. Others are putting away their frailest treasures and setting their abodes in order to lease to those visitors who prefer the quiet security of a rented house to the unavoidable confusion and crowds of the local hotels during that period. And when you can get a whole house or flat for the price of a suite in a loop hotel, why not?

Social organizations like the Casino, Saddle and Cycle, Chicago Yacht, and South Shore Country clubs are making great preparations for that week. They will all keep open house and probably most of the entertaining done by society folk will be in one or another of these hospitable centers. The Saddle and Cycle announces a big dinner for the evening of the convention's opening day, Tuesday, June 8. The Casino, the following night, will give a cobination vaudeville and supper dance.

Miss Marion Mae Stiger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Stiger of Oak Park, will be a June bride. Her marriage to Julius W. Butler, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Butler of Hinsdale, will take place June 5 at the First Congregational church in Oak Park.

One of the largest, gayest house parties will be the Arthur Meekers. Among their guests will be Governor and Mrs. Beekman, of Massachusetts, and Dr. and Mrs. Gray of Boston, the last named being the Meekers' eldest daughter.

Women's Class in Finance.

Nothing is more significant of the educational value of those five Liberty loan drives than the wide and active interest that they aroused among women in the subject of finance. This took form and shape this winter in a class on finance, backed and attended by some of the women who worked in these drives, and who realized that they knew little or nothing of how to save or invest money.

Forgan.

Other financiers who addressed this class were Charles W. Folds, John W. Thomas, and Walter Lichtenstein. Next Thursday morning the class will learn about stocks and bonds, as expounded by W. T. Abbott, vice president of the Central Trust company.

Among the things these women have learned from this course are never to omit getting a receipt for bills paid in cash; to preserve such receipts in an accessible place; to check up items in current bills; to keep checkbooks balanced; to handle business papers carefully; not to affix signatures to a paper without reading, understanding, and verifying its text; to live without current income; not to invest money on mere hearsay; their motto, in short, being "to spend prudently, save systematically, and invest wisely." Make it yours, too. Such a class is an interesting move in the right direction.

Expert Business Woman.

I forgot in the above account to include the name of one of the prime movers, Mrs. Jacob Baur, but she is such an experienced, trained business woman that her participation in it must be merely that of an expert, interested in having her fellow women become as instructed as she is in the ways of finance.

She is an example of what a woman can do in an emergency. When her husband's death some years ago left her a widow with a little daughter, his business partners came to her and told her that without him it would not be possible to carry on the business. She said: "Why not? I'll come to the office and get acquainted with it before deciding."

This she did with the result that she, against the advice of his former associates, decided to cary on the concern, a manufacturing establishment. So successful was she in this undertaking that she has doubled her sales, or her capital—I forget which, not having attended that course in finance—a success which should put heart into many a women similarly left alone in the world with an active business to carry on or close up, according to her abilities.

The late Mrs. Potter Palmer used to say: "Women have never achieved preëminence in art, literature, or music, but there is no reason why they should not in business. For untold centuries they have had the hardest kind of training in making one dollar do the work of two. This should fit them for dealing with high finance."

Mrs. Baur was one of twelve distinguished suffragists who sailed from New York last Wednesday on the S. S. Royal George for England, their ultimate destination being the eighth congress of the International Woman Suffrage alliance, which will convene at Geneva, Switzerland, June 6. It was first planned to have this congress held at the Spanish capital, Madrid. Through a misunderstanding, however, as to the nature of the convention, leading Spanish clericals took a hostile attitude towards the coming to Spain of so many non-Catholic women, so the meeting was transferred to Geneva.

It will be an impressive gathering of noted women, the first of its kind since before the war. Think how the great conflict has tempered their souls and widened their outlook! Also, what an immense new political outlook si theirs!

Among the famous leaders who will gather there are the first woman member of the British parliament, Lady Astor (an American, be it noted, in spite of her British office), Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, Mrs. Philip Snowden, and Mrs. M. G. Fawcett, well known English suffragists; but, mark you, none of the three militant Pankhursts is listed in the British delegation. I wonder why.

The American delegation, headed by Mrs. C. C. Catt, includes Mrs. Desha Breckenridge of Kentucky, Mrs. W. E. Barkley of Nebraska, Mrs. Halsey Wilson, and Mrs. Maud Nathan of New York, Mrs. Charles F. Spencer of Kansas, Mrs. Stanley McCormick and Miss Julia Lathrop of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, and Mrs. Joseph Daniels, wife of the secretary of the navy. She is the first woman ever appointed by a president of the United States to such a congress.

The headquarters of the gathering will be at the Hotel de la Paix (propitious name!).

Twenty-nine of the thirty-one countries in this suffrage alliance will have representatives at Geneva. The latest to join it since the armistice are Argentina, Uruguay, Greece, and Spain. Since the last convention, which was held in Budapest in 1913, sixteen countries have given suffrage, partial or complete, to women—and ours is not among them! Austria, Belgium, Bohemia, British East Africa, Canada, Denmark, Germany, Great Britain, Ireland, Holland, Hungary, Iceland, Jamaica, Poland, Rhodesia, Russia, and Sweden are all ahead of us.

An Unforgettable Figure.

The news, somewhat belated, of the death of Baron Schlippenbach in Switzerland last January will recall to many Chicagoans an unforgettable figure. For nearly twenty years Baron Schlippenbach was Russian consul here and was a striking personality in the community. It is ten years or more since he left here, during which interval we

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Planning to Make Jolly Tar Club Permanent Home

THE Jolly Tar club in Waukegan, conducted by the Illinois Council of Parent-Teacher associations, continues to accommodate between 1,000 and 2,000 boys a week, and is an increasingly attractive place for them to spend shore leave. The new boys coming into the navy are younger than those during war time, it being no uncommon thing to find a chap who owns with much pride that he is "only 14, but I fooled the recruiting officer into thinking I was 17."

Such boys as these, whether they have come from good homes or bad homes, or no homes at all [for many of them are picked up on the street, willing to join because in the navy they will get "three squares a day" and warm clothes], need the home atmosphere of such a club as the Jolly Tar.

Many of the lads spend their whole shore leave at the club, sleeping, playing games, popping corn, or reading, going to a boarding-house in the block for their meals. It is an interesting thing to see, week day evenings, the men who are preparing for examinations, studying quietly all over the house. There are certain rooms reserved for those who want to be quiet and no man with too social a turn of mind ventures into them.

Mrs. Edward Morse, the resident hostess, is also general "listener to grouches," as one boy said, binder-up of injured fingers, player of games, private banker, and sympathetic and unsentimental friend. It is hoped that the club may be a permanent institution, as necessary in peace as in war time.

While Mrs. O. T. Bright of Chicago, Mrs. William F. Young of Oak Park, and Mrs. C. M. Cartwright of Evanston have contributed largely to the success of the Jolly Tar club, the love and gratitude of the navy boys goes largely to Mrs. B. F. Langworthy of Winnetka, who originally conceived the idea of mothering the youthful boys of the navy, and who is working against many odds to make this pleasant home a permanent one.

The Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs will hold its twenty-fifth annual convention at the Congress hotel on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. Mrs. James W. Parker, state chairman of the art department, is chairman of decorations for the state convention.

Mrs. B. F. Langworthy of Winnetka was the originator of the idea of making a home for the boys at the Great Lakes Training station where they could spend their leisure time. The Jolly Tar club at Waukegan was the result, and was a great success during the war. Mrs. Langworthy hopes to make the club a permanent institution.

A colonial garden fête will be given by the students of Rosary house, River Forest, for the benefit of the Rosary college fund, on Wednesday evening, on the Rosary house campus. Miss Helen Shanahan is chairman of the affair.

CLUB NOTES

The Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs will hold its twenty-fifth annual convention at the Congress hotel on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. There will be addresses by the Rev. Walter Henry Macpherson, Dr. William Sadler, Horace Bridges, Mrs. Cyrus Perkins, Mrs. John Sherman, Shailer Mathews, Dr. F. R. Moulton, and others. On Monday evening Mrs. William H. Hart, president of the federation, will entertain the state board members at dinner at the College club. On Tuesday evening the state board and district boards will have dinner at the Congress, followed by a program with Mrs. George Plummer, Mrs. Frederick Dow, and Miss Harriet Vittum as the speakers. On Wednesday evening there will be a banquet at the Congress with Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout and Mrs. Joseph Bowen giving addresses and the past presidents of the federation giving short talks. On Thursday evening the closing program will be "The Illinois Federation in Retrospect," showing pictures representing some of the activities of the federation in its history of twenty-five years. A number of features have been planned for hours outside of the regular program. On Wednesday from 4 to 6 there will be a reception at the Art institute; also a visit to Ida Noyes hall at the University of Chicago. Trips also are planned to Hull house, Booth house, and Fellowship house for those interested in settlement work.

The Polish Mothers' club of Association house, 2150 North avenue, will have a baby show and party for the women of the Association house board and their children on Wednesday afternoon.

Women of St. Ita's parish will give a card party at the Edgewater Beach hotel on Thursday evening for the benefit of the altar fund.

On Thursday evening at 6 o'clock the Delta Delta Delta will meet at the College club.

The Jewish Consumptives' Relief society will hold the last meeting of the season on Wednesday afternoon in the State-Lake building.

The auxiliary of the Edgewater Catholic Women's club will give an informal dance at the Birchwood Country club on Wednesday.

An all day meeting tomorrow at the home of Mrs. E. A. Burkitt, 1459 East Sixty-sixth place, will close the year's work of the Woodlawn Study club. Luncheon will be served at 12:30, followed by cards.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Town and Country Club will give the last fellowship dinner of the season on Wednesday. Mrs. Lewis M. Featherstone will speak. There will be a card party in the afternoon, followed by the annual election of officers.

The Third Ward Civic league will hold a year's end card party, social, luncheon, and the annual election at its headquarters, 4254 Drexel boulevard, on Tuesday afternoon. The league has affiliated with the Third Ward Community center, lately opened at the same address, and Mrs. Theodosia Bagshawe and others will explain the community center's work and will initiate the league members into this organization.

A play will be presented by pupils at the meeting of the Hyde Park High School Parent-Teacher association on Thursday afternoon. This is the last meeting of the season, and officers will be elected.

Tomorrow at 11:30 a. m. the Bohemian Settlement House auxiliary will have a meeting, followed by a luncheon.

Its anniversary day luncheon will be given on Friday by the Millard Avenue Woman's club at the Chicago Woman's club.

There will be a box luncheon at the annual meeting of the Hull House Woman's club at noon on Wednesday.

Dr. Caroline Hedger is to give a series of lectures at the School of Domestic Arts and Science, 6 North Michigan avenue, on the dates given below, and a few tickets are available without cost to those interested in these programs. Tickets may be had by applying at the office of the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial fund, room 505, 6 North Michigan avenue. The lectures are as follows: Tomorrow, 1:30 p. m., "How to Care for the Child of 9 Months to 2 Years"; Tuesday, "How to Care for the Child of 2 to 6 Years"; Friday, "The Nutrition of the School-child."

The annual luncheon of the Lake Shore club will be given at the Parkway hotel on Saturday.

The Willings Workers Woman's club will meet at the Masonic temple on Wednesday at 2 p. m. in order to commemorate mothers' day for the founders of the Willing Workers.

"Practical Points on Election Laws" will be discussed by Anthony Czarnecki at the meeting of the citizenship class at the Woman's City club on Tuesday at 11 o'clock.

The Illinois Woman's Press association will have open house at the Congress hotel during the state convention of the Illinois woman's clubs. A program tea will be given on Tuesday afternoon. The guests of honor are Mrs. Frank O. Lowden, Mrs. Fred W. Upham, Mrs. Frederick Lorenz, Mrs. Charles Sergel, and several other prominent members of the visiting delegates of woman's clubs. The hostesses are Mrs. Ferd Fisher, Mrs. William Hight, and Miss Catherine Cook.

Mrs. L. Wade of 5942 Calumet avenue will give an afternoon tea tomorrow to the members and friends of Lady Aberdeen chapter, D. B. E.

Under the auspices of the Lake View Woman's club, a "silver tea" for the benefit of the scholarship fund will be given at the home of Mrs. John B. Meyer, 546 Barry avenue, on the afternoon of June 1, from 2 to 6 o'clock.

have grown more sophisticated and worldly wise.

In the days of our rather pious provincialism the baron, with his air of gentle, jaunty decay, was rather an enigma to many. His suave manner and undeniably subtle cynicism found few to appreciate or understand its Russian flavor, but he was always an interesting companion at a dinner table and gave a cosmopolitan tinge to his entourage. His cynicism was never unamiable, and he had many good qualities, among which was tolerance for another's viewpoint, born, probably, of an understanding and sympathy not uncommon among Russians of his type. I'm afraid that the bolsheviki have extinguished the breed. If so, it's a pity.

Former Chicagoan Returning.

All Chicagoans are not leaving Chicago; some are returning after years of absence. Among these is Mrs. William J. Goudy, sister of Dr. S. J. Walker, who is arriving next month to spend the summer in this part of the world. For many years now she has made her home in England, where her only child is married to an Englishman, Gerard Lee.

As it is seven years or so since she last visited Chicago, Mrs. Goudy will find many changes here. This will be especially and sadly the case in her own immediate family, for in the last year and a half her two brothers, Judge Charles M. Walker and William Ernst Walker, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Samuel J. Walker, have died. As all three were in the prime of life, the sense of loss will be peculiarly poignant.

The fatted calf is being gently but firmly killed in his honor by Maj. William Slingsby's Chicago friends. As a member of the British remount service he was among the most popular of the officers from other lands whom the recent war sent to our shores. And his return here for a short visit is being made the occasion for many festivities. He is a real Britisher, a Yorkshireman and cross country rider, and can clear the highest hedge without disturbing that monocle through which he gazes so genially on an erring world.

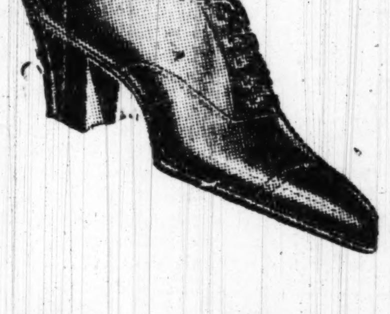
FEATURING

Dr. Pinkston's Triple Combination Last Shoes for Every Foot and for All Occasions. Sizes Two to Twelve, Widths Six A Narrow to Triple E Wide



This Shoe

Specially Priced at $15.00

Never before has any one made an oxford or pump that positively would not slip at the heel or bulge at the side. Foot troubles too numerous to mention are caused by shoes being too large in the heel and instep.

Dr. Pinkston's combination last shoes are better than the standard shoes because they are TWO WIDTHS NARROWER IN THE HEEL, ONE WIDTH NARROWER IN THE ARCH, AND TWO WIDTHS WIDER THROUGH THE BALL OF THE FOOT than any shoe that has ever been made. The narrow heel PREVENTS THE SHOE FROM SLIPPING UP AND DOWN. The narrow instep KEEPS THE FOOT FROM SLIDING FORWARD. The broad ball gives PERFECT FREEDOM OF THE TOES. The entire comfort and grace of walking depend entirely upon the proper articulation of the ball of the foot.

40 other styles in brown, black, and white leathers to choose from, priced at $12.00, $15.00, $18.00, $20.00, $22.00 and $25.00.

FUTURE EVENTS

The young girls of society are busy with plans for a cabaret supper-dance to be given on Friday evening at the Opera club by the Volunteer aids for the Chicago Lighthouse for the Blind. Members of the "Sweetheart Shop" company, headed by Harry K. Morton, will furnish the program and elaborate plans are being made to make the affair a social as well as a financial success. Miss Elizabeth Martin, Miss Louise Hessert, Miss Eileen Kelly, Miss Florence Folds, and Miss Phyllis Mark are among the girls in charge.

Plans for the observance of Cantigny day, to be celebrated in Chicago next Friday, are being carried out by a committee of men and women under the direction of Maj. Thomas R. Gowenlock. Assisting him are Mrs. George A. McKinlock, Mrs. A. A. Sprague, Mrs. Russell Tyson, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. Richardson, J. L. Canby, William A. Small Jr., Col. R. R. McCormick, Robert Sturgis, Charles Bushnell Fullerton, F. D. Rose, O. H. Ashley, Paul E. Anderson, Arthur Guy Mayger, C. R. Beckert, Sergt. McGuire, and Richard D. Stevenson. There will be a meeting in the evening at the Aryan Grotto temple, when Maj. Gen. C. P. Summerall will speak. The occasion is to commemorate the events of May 28, 1918, when the 1st division of the A. E. F. attacked and successfully fought the enemy at Cantigny, the first decisive engagement in which the American troops as such had had a part.

One of the most interesting weddings of the season will take place on Saturday when Miss Emma Blair Fitzhugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carter H. Fitzhugh of Lake Forest, becomes the bride of Frank Packard, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Packard of 436 Barry avenue. The service will be read at 4 o'clock in the Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest and will be followed by a reception at the residence of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Curtiss of 1404 Astor street will give the bridal dinner on Wednesday night for their daughter, Marion, who will become the bride of Walter O. Wilson, son of Walter H. Wilson of 2619 Prairie avenue, the following afternoon.

The boxholders for the Chicago north shore music festival to be given at the Northwestern university gymnasium tomorrow, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday are as follows: Edward Hines, James A. Will your phonograph warp?

THE chances are it will if it isn't substantially made. Sonora makes its cabinets three-quarter inch thick. Most other makers of phonograph cabinets use wood three-eighth inch thick or thereabouts. Sonora cabinets are made to last a lifetime. They illustrate Sonora's superiority in workmanship and design.

CLEAR AS A BELL
employs the most highly skilled artisans who understand that only first quality work is acceptable.

Examine the cabinet of the phonograph you contemplate buying. Find out the thickness of the wood. Don't be deceived by pieces added to the bottom of the cabinet to hide flimsy construction.

Sonora is the phonograph you take pride in possessing.

Good Feet Are Possible—Fallen Arches Unnecessary

Comfort is the essence of the Cantilever Shoe; and the Cantilever is refined in style. But it is especially recommended as a preventive of flat-foot and other ills that befall so many women through pure ignorance of what a shoe can do to the foot.

A woman's foot can become harmed almost imperceptibly by wearing sharply pointed toes, or very high heels, or a wrong size. Fallen arches may result, or callouses or bunions; or the effect may locate in the nervous system. Some cases of imaginary rheumatism are caused by nothing but badly shaped shoes.

The Cantilever Shoe is recommended by physicians and foot doctors as a good shoe for women to wear because it has a flexible arch, permitting muscular exercise and blood circulation; because it is shaped to the natural foot with toe-room; because it has a healthy, comforting effect on the foot.

A good looking shoe which we carry in dark brown kidskin, black kidskin, dark tan calfskin, and white Egyptian canvas. In all widths from AAAAA to EE. Write for booklet.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

25,000 Children in Roman Catholic Jubilee Pageant

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot

PLANS for the diamond jubilee of the Roman Catholic church in the archdiocese of Chicago and the silver jubilee of Archbishop Mundelein, which take place June 8, 9, and 10, are gradually being revealed. A feature of the celebration will be the historic pageant in which 25,000 children from the parochial schools will participate. This will be held on the third day, June 10, and will consist of a parade of floats on which are children representing historic events of importance in ecclesiastical history, especially in the archdiocese of Chicago. Thousands of children will march in the parade in uniforms of different periods. There will be over a hundred floats.

The pageant parade will start from the municipal pier at 11 a. m. It will go north on the boulevard to Lincoln park, where the reviewing stand will be erected. The committee on arrangements urges that the choice of subjects for the pageant be registered not later than May 27.

Other plans of the jubilee have not been announced as yet. It was learned last week that Cardinal Gibbons will be in attendance and take part in the festivities planned for the first day, probably preaching the jubilee sermon.

THE REV. F.C. WAGNER

The Rev. F. C. Wagner, Ph. D., has recently taken charge of the Presbyterian church of South Chicago. Plans for community work in connection with the church are being made. Dr. Wagner had charge of a church in the industrial section of Buffalo, and did a successful work there. He carries a card from the machinists' union, having worked at that trade before studying for the ministry. He is a graduate of Northwestern university, Evanston, and Union Theological seminary, New York.

The New First Congregational church choir of 300 voices will present Mendelssohn's "Elijah" in dramatic form on May 27, 28, and 30, under the leadership of George L. Tenney, director. The soloists are Mrs. G. Q. Tenney, soprano; Lucy J. Hartman, contralto; Leon Jones, tenor; and William Morse, baritone. Hugh Porter is the organist.

The diocesan headquarters of the Episcopal church has been moved from the Church clubrooms in the Heyworth building to the cathedral clergy-house, 117 North Peoria street. The offices of the Rt. Rev. Charles P. Anderson, bishop of Chicago, and the Rt. Rev. Sheldon M. Griswold, suffragan bishop, are in the new location.

Unity Evangelical Lutheran church will dedicate its new organ and unveil a bronze memorial tablet next Sunday in connection with its memorial day services. Both are the gift of the congregation in thanksgiving for the return of peace. The tablet contains the names of eighty-six who served in the war. The Rev. Dr. H. M. Bannen of Rockford will preach at the 10:45 service. There will be an organ recital and service at the evening service at 7:45, when Dr. Bannen will again preach. The pastor of the church is the Rev. David A. Davy.

The Most Rev. George W. Mundelein, archbishop of Chicago, will pontificate at the Holy Name cathedral at the Pentecost Sunday mass at 11 a. m. today. This afternoon he will administer confirmation at the cathedral at 3 o'clock.

Your Wall Paper should be cleaned this Spring—

A CLEAN, sanitary home saves doctors' bills, and certainly is pleasanter to live in. For health's sake walls should be cleaned at least twice a year.

You don't have to rub hard to clean wall paper with Climax Cleaner. Use an easy wiping motion and go over a small space at a time. Knead the cleaner a little after each stroke.

It's real economy, too. Paper lasts longer and you save re-decorating. The old reliable, twenty-five year old Climax Cleaner is safest, quickest and easiest to use.

Look for the blue-label can.

Call Motor Clans to Improve Zion City Road Link

Chicago "Irritations" Also Due for Early Repair Work

BY J. L. JENKINS.

ZION CITY'S famous automobile jinx, the mile and a half of unimproved and sometimes impassable highway that for many seasons has been the one barrier in an otherwise delightful run from Chicago to Milwaukee, is again the center of a concentrated attack by good roads forces of the entire Chicago territory. This time success in the improvement plan is assured through the coöperation of the Chicago and Waukegan associations of commerce, state and county agencies, Zion authorities themselves, and the fact that but $15,000 remains to be collected to complete the $130,000 cost of the improvement.

The half mile stretch through the town proper, to cost $90,000, will be financed by Zion City. Two half mile stretches to connect it with the north shore pavement will cost about $40,000, of which the state has agreed to pay $15,000. Waukegan interests have agreed to subscribe half of the remaining $15,000 and the remainder may be subscribed by Chicago motorists who, according to a vehicle check made by W. C. Hollister of Waukegan, are the most consistent users of the road. Following committee meetings held here last week an active campaign has been launched to raise the $7,500. If it is subscribed promptly the highway can be completed this year.

With the great lakes' leading detour in full retreat, road boosters also trained their batteries on the lesser strongholds of the "mud age," those in the city of Chicago and trunks leading west from Cook county. Chicago detours include:

One and one-half miles of chuck holes in Kedzie avenue, ending at Cicero. Improvement of this road through to St. Louis is all under contract.

Unrepaired city stretches on the Higgins road leading to the twenty miles of county pavement.

Bad city connection in Crawford avenue, north of Bryn Mawr.

Unimproved city half of Roosevelt road, leading through Cicero to Menard avenue. This is the state's feature road from Michigan avenue to the Mississippi and Cicero has paved its half to the county improvement.

Practically impassable stretch in Torrence avenue between One Hundred and Eighth and One Hundred and Twelfth streets, the direct truck route to Burnham and Hammond.

Indianapolis avenue gateway to Chicago from Michigan and the eastern states, now a mass of broken pavement, into South Chicago.

"They're all due for action this year," declared Michael J. Faherty, president of the local improvement board, grimly eying the "black list."

MY FUNNIEST MOTORING EXPERIENCE

An Extra Stop.

Let me recommend a ride in a new car with a woman driver as the best prescription for a thrill that will last a lifetime. Mine came when, after reluctantly accepting an invitation to ride from a friend who had just received her new machine, we mounted the incline to a grade crossing in a suburb and started across the tracks. In the exact middle the engine stopped and nothing we could do had the slightest effect on it. While working we were approached by an excited flagman.

"A limited is due here in two minutes," he said, "and it never has stopped at this station."

"It will today," calmly replied my friend. And it did, but not before it had been flagged and the train crew helped boost us from the rails. I. T.

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published in "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Funniest Motoring Experience, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Sidetracked.

Fire runs have always been my pet worry when driving a car, so when I heard the excited clanging of a bell while riding through one of the city parks recently I pulled over to the curb, almost running into a lamp post in my rush. Then I turned around to watch the engines and discovered two small boys on a pushmobile holding the center of the boulevard and working a large bell overtime while a Sunday crowd laughed at the joke, which was certainly on me. O. A.

A Truthful Sign.

A friend of mine bought a new car, and on our first ride we came to a sign which read, "Road closed."

"Don't believe in signs," he remarked, and we drove on.

The next thing I remember is picking myself up from the creek where the bridge was out. My confident friend came to at last and rubbed his head.

"I'm a firm believer in signs from now on," he remarked, and we hired a farmer to pull the car home. F. L.

Added Feature.

Mention Old Faithful and the average motorist is at once familiar with the subject—at least as far as appearances go. He knows this geyser, which has been the subject of so much discussion and photography, better than he knows his local library. But Old Faithful, the Automobile Blue Book discloses, is not the most interesting of the many geysers at Yellowstone National park. There are others. One which always mystifies and interests the women is the Handkerchief pool. Into this tourists throw their handkerchiefs, which disappear, but in a few minutes return to the surface, snowy white as from a laundry.

Cities Adopt Trucks.

A contract for the purchase of thirty trailers and three tractors has been made by the department of public works of Syracuse, N. Y. The equipment is to be used for collection and removal of garbage, investigations having shown this to be the best and most economical method of handling this municipal problem. Following the example of Utica, N. Y., and several other cities, San Antonio, Tex., after thorough investigation, adopted trucks and trailers for garbage disposal some time ago. It is now operating twelve trucks and twenty-four trailers.

New MARMON 34's in hands of owners exceed predictions made at shows

When the new series Marmon 34, with its High Efficiency Motor, was placed on exhibition at the New York and Chicago shows, it was predicted that it would set new standards of motor car performance and long life.

The exceptional fineness of manufacture learned by The Nordyke & Marmon Company organization in the building of aircraft engines during the war aroused the enthusiasm of automobile engineers and veteran manufacturers. The perfect balance and exceptional rigidity of the Marmon crankshaft and other important features of the new High Efficiency Motor brought many predictions of remarkable performance.

These predictions have now been fulfilled. The new series Marmon 34, in the hands of owners, has set new standards of performance—is setting them every day. The smooth, liquid flow of power at all speeds, the surprising absence of vibration, have proved the superiority of Marmon advanced engineering and fine workmanship.

If you have not yet had a ride in the new series Marmon 34, it will be a pleasure to give you a demonstration.

Stop Power Waste in Fight Against the H. C. of Gas

Secret of Conservation Lies in Performance of Motor Parts

BY HIGH SPEED.

THERE is every indication that during the coming summer we are going to have a period of high prices in the gasoline field. There is no shortage of motor fuel; there is plenty to go around, but the producers seem to feel that they are justified in raising prices, and unless all signs fail they are going to do it. This being so, every car owner is interested in saving all the fuel he can. We have been wasteful of our fuel in the past, and the wise motorist will welcome suggestions that will enable him to eliminate waste of all kinds and thereby reduce his mounting bills, at the same time doing a patriotic duty.

The modern internal combustion engine will operate on a fuel mixture ranging from eight parts of air to one of gasoline to fourteen parts of air to one of gasoline. Operating conditions, however, are better when the mixture is leaner, that is to say, 14 to 1 rather than 8 to 1. But, as a general rule, car owners tend to use a mixture nearer the latter than the former. Obviously, a mixture at 8 to 1 contains almost twice as much gas as one at 14 to 1. If the engine ran better with the richer mixture there might be some excuse for using it, but it doesn't. Further, the richer mixture tends to produce rapid carbonization, and while the engine will assimilate it, nevertheless the action is sluggish and lacks the snap that is present with the leaner ranges. Therefore the first thing the car owner who aims at maximum efficiency should do is to make sure that his carburetor is properly adjusted to give the leanest mixture consistent with satisfactory running.

If the car owner is unable to make this simple adjustment himself, he should certainly have the service station do it for him. In cases where the carburetor is an old instrument with not enough range of air volume, it may be wise to install one of the devices of the auxiliary air inlet type. These are inexpensive and easily put in place. At any rate, every car owner should give his earnest attention to the carburetion system with a view to reducing the probable waste in this locality.

Before we leave the carburetion system, we may suggest that many modern cars will satisfactorily operate on a mixture of gasoline and kerosene. If the individual owner will try this experiment, using, say, four gallons of gasoline to one of kerosene, he may be pleasantly surprised; at any rate, it is worth the attempt. This is particularly so in warm weather, when this heavier mixture vaporizes more readily.

Now the carburetion may be ever so good, but if the ignition is not up to the mark maximum efficiency can never be reached. Therefore it behooves the car owner to keep the battery fully charged and filled with distilled water, as he has been warned so often. The cable connections at plugs and ignition unit and coil must be kept clean and tight. It does not one atom of good to get a fine explosive charge in the cylinders unless there is a good hot spark to ignite it.

These two items of carburetion and ignition are what may be termed the major offensives in the campaign to secure fuel economy; there are still numbers of machine gun nests to be cleaned up before you have reached perfection. There are many places in the fuel ssytem where leaks may develop, and a direct leak in the fuel line is a prodigious waster of gasoline. Moreover, a small leak is hard to detect; if the car owner has noticed a sudden increase in the amount of gasoline used this may be the cause. At any rate it is a wise precaution to go over the whole fuel system occasionally examining it for leaks.

Also the fuel system with its filters and screens needs a periodic cleaning out. It will be remarkable how much better the engine runs after the fuel line has been cleaned out to give an unobstructed flow to the gasoline. After this the muffler will probably be the better for a little attention.

Another fruitful source of fuel waste is carbon in the cylinders. A carbonized engine uses much more fuel than a clean one. Scrape the cylinders as one of the first skirmishes in the fuel reduction campaign. In some instances, where an engine is an excessive carbonizer, it may be well to install one of the water feeding devices or vaporizers, of which there are scores on the market, after the cylinders have been thoroughly cleaned of all carbon deposits. These devices will prevent the formation of carbon in clean cylinders, though I doubt if they will remove heavy deposits without assistance.

The valve system must be in excellent working order or heavy fuel waste may result. The valves must seat properly or they will allow the fuel mixture to leak out without performing its appointed function, or only partly at best. Any car owner who has experienced the pleasure of driving immediately after the valves have been ground will need no advice in regard to having the valves ground at frequent intervals.

Have you ever stopped to realize that every waste of power is really a waste of gasoline? If gasoline is exploded and the power so generated is wasted or only partly used this amounts practically to waste of fuel. If lubrication is not kept up to the mark the friction between moving parts wastes power. Therefore be particular to lubricate all parts of the mechanism as indicated on the chart or in the instruction book given with the car.

Finally, the car owner can save a great deal of fuel by careful operation of his vehicle. He should learn to coast wherever possible, shutting off the ignition on long hills, with the throttle closed. Useless idling of the engine costs many thousands of gallons of fuel in the course of a year in this country. Do not indulge in this costly practice. Do not waste fuel around the garage for washing parts. Kerosene does just as well as gasoline for washing metal parts and it is not so valuable today as gasoline.

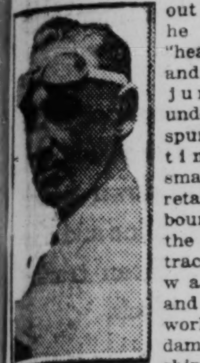
Season's Initial Spill Is Staged at Indianapolis

Barney Oldfield Agrees to Sidetrack After First Fast Lap

JOE BOYER, who is going through his training for the 500 mile run for $50,000, to be held at the Indianapolis speedway Monday, May 31, figured in the first smashup of the year.



JOE BOYER.

Boyer was hitting it up in a Monroe and had just negotiated the south turn; as he came out of the curve he worked the "heavy foot" stunt and the car nearly jumped from under him. It spun around eight times, then smashed into the retaining wall and bounded back to the center of the track again. He was uninjured, and a few hours' work put the damaged Monroe ship shape again.

Practically every driver at the speedway colony has forsaken the garages for a whirl about the brick saucer, and Joe Boyer, Detroit's millionaire speed merchant, thrilled the rail birds with a thirty-three lap—eighty-two and one-half miles—spin at an average clip of ninety miles an hour. He took the first extensive tour of the year with as much calm deliberation as he figured in the first smashup of the season, after which Barney Oldfield remarked: "Do it again; I wasn't looking."

WALDO STEIN.

Jean Chassagne warmed up his Ballot, while Ralph de Palma, his teammate, turned a few fast laps. They were not attempting any fancy speed, however, but the hum of the Ballots and the ease with which the little French cars negotiated a speed of from seventy-five to eighty miles an hour proved to the spectators that when De Palma and Chassagne do open up they will leave some warm places in their wake.

The drivers in the 500 mile dash will undoubtedly get away to a fast start this year, for Barney Oldfield, veteran driver of the world, will come out of retirement to act as pacemaker. Oldfield will lead the field around the brick oval, bringing the fliers to the war for their annual start at the fastest pace possible without breaking the assigned order. He will drive a Marmon, which is now being tuned up at the speedway.

Barney has an Oldfield Special entered in the race, but has elected Waldo Stein, his former mechanician, to face the starter.

"It's going to be hard to pull out and let all those cars pass me at the end of a single lap," admits the driver who never looked back, "but I'm game and I'll surely help the boys warm the bricks all the way down the stretch."

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS by HIGH SPEED

I have had it dinned into me that keeping my tires up to the proper pressure is about the most important part of running an automobile. I've been wondering whether it wouldn't be a good stunt to give the tires ten pounds more than the recommended pressure. What do you think about it?

K. D. F.

Decidedly not; tires carrying too much pressure are obviously subjected to heavy internal strain. The tube will blow out through any weak spot that may exist in the casing. Besides, when the tires are too hard, the whole mechanism is subject to excessive vibration and jolts, which inevitably shake it to pieces, if continued long enough.

What would you call the most satisfactory average position of the spark lever in ordinary driving? W. M. A.

When the car is traveling over good roads the spark lever ought to be pushed just as far forward as it will go without causing a knock; under these conditions speed variations may be obtained through the use of the throttle or accelerator controls. On the other hand, when the engine is slowed down and pulling hard, on bad roads, or on hills, for instance, the spark lever should be retarded so that the engine will not knock.

The clutch of my car is of the disk type and it runs in oil. I have been using my regular cylinder oil in the clutch and I'm not altogether sure that it is exactly suited to the part.

P. S.

The proper lubricant for your clutch is either a mixture of half cylinder oil and half kerosene or else a light machine oil. I do not wonder that you are doubtful about the appropriateness of the plain cylinder oil, which is too heavy. The oil disk clutch ought to be cleaned out and flushed with kerosene every 500 miles of running and then be refilled with fresh lubricant.

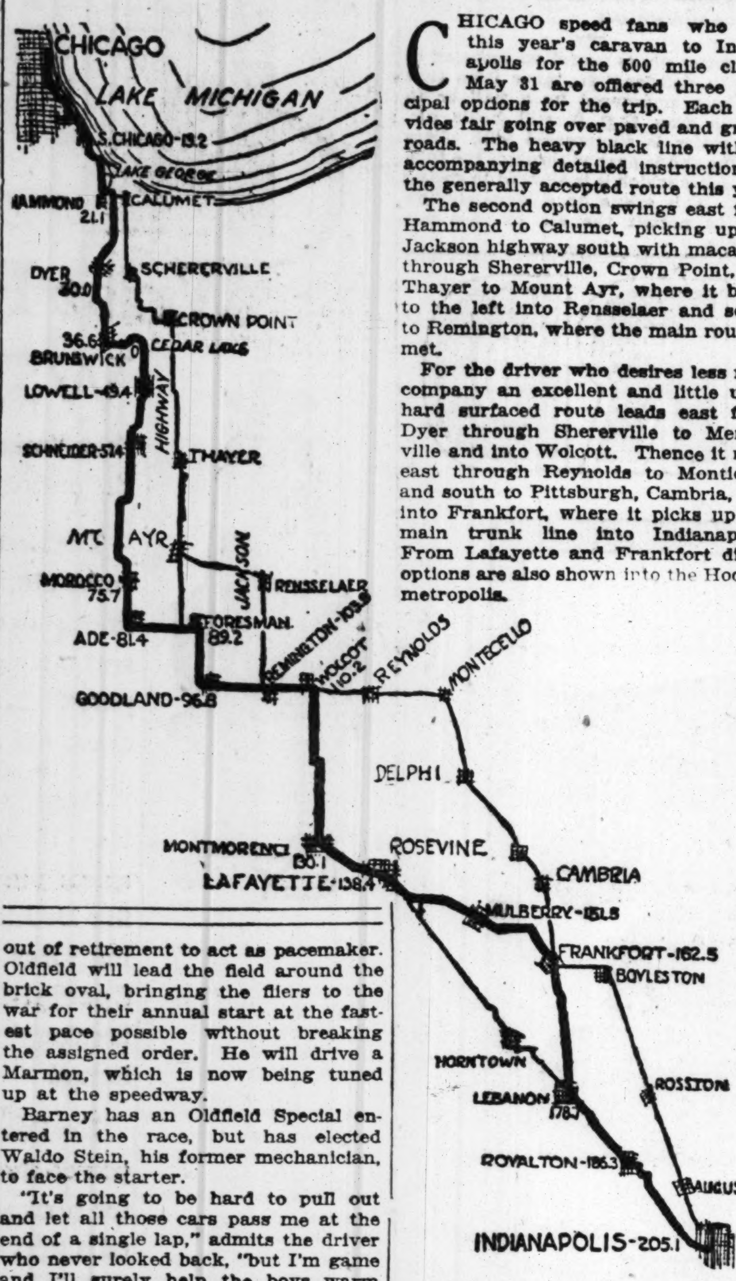
Tribune Tours

I.—To Lafayette and Indianapolis.



CHICAGO speed fans who join this year's caravan to Indianapolis for the 500 mile classic May 31 are offered three principal options for the trip. Each provides fair going over paved and gravel roads. The heavy black line with its accompanying detailed instructions is the generally accepted route this year.

The second option swings east from Hammond to Calumet, picking up the Jackson highway south with macadam through Shererville, Crown Point, and Thayer to Mount Ayr, where it bears to the left into Rensselaer and south to Remington, where the main route is met.

For the driver who desires less road company an excellent and little used, hard surfaced route leads east from Dyer through Shererville to Merrillville and into Wolcott. Thence it runs east through Reynolds to Monticello and south to Pittsburgh, Cambria, and into Frankfort, where it picks up the main trunk line into Indianapolis. From Lafayette and Frankfort direct options are also shown into the Hoosier metropolis.

Choice Selection.

The motorist who goes to Florida will bump into more varieties of fruits than he ever saw before—if, of course, it is his maiden trip. Among other fruits that Florida boasts are cocoanuts, bananas, guavas, grapefruit, avocado pears, custard apples, maumee apples, mangoes, and pawpaws.

Hard Going.

One of the American Red Cross transportation difficulties overcome in Montengro was crossing an unbridged mountain pass where the motor trucks had to be taken apart on one side, carried across by eighty native porters, and assembled again on the other side.

Officials Begin Working Surface of Elgin Course

ACTIVE work on the surface of the highway for the 1920 Elgin road race, which is set for Saturday, Aug. 21, has commenced and today the road is even better than it was when the contest was held last fall.

Inspection of the road was made by Charles P. Root, chairman of the contest committee of the Chicago Automobile club, and Fred W. Jencks, manager of the Elgin Road Race association, a few days ago. The road is being regraded and dragged, one grader and two steel drags being engaged in the work of planing out the surface. In addition the road is to be harrowed to break up the hard spots and then it will go through a series of draggings to smooth it before oiling.

Entry blanks for the race are now in the hands of the printer and soon will be sent to drivers for their signatures.

Is Old Man Friction At Work on Your Car?

He's a destructive old cuss, is Friction. Once he gets in his work you're up against excessive wear, noise and trouble. Not to mention growing costs!

That's why it's so important that you use Dixon's Lubricant.

DIXON'S Gear LUBRICANT

Ask for Dixon's 677. Also, the famous Dixon's Cup Grease and Other Dixon Lubricants. They all come in snappy red cans.

Friction hasn't a chance with Dixon's on the job. In fact, the heavier the pressure the more firmly Dixon's works into the minute irregularities you'll always find on gear and bearing surfaces. It can't "squeeze out." So you get a permanent, smooth, slippery film that sweetens up the action of your car, lengthens its life and cuts down noise and expense.

And here's another important advantage. Dixon's is not affected by heat or cold like plain grease or oil.

Your dealer will tell you why Dixon's Lubricant is best for your car. Ask him.

Do You Depend On Gasoline, Oil and Tires for Economy

REAL Estate men tell us: "The days of 'blind buying' are over. People here in town are more careful to investigate land values, property depreciation and the all-around economy in good building."

Keen appreciation of what property will be worth next year or the year after greatly influences buying.

We too, can notice a decided change. This same sane buying condition is more and more evidenced in the purchase of motor cars.

For example, many of our Packard friends, who previously owned 1, 2, 3 and even 4 different makes of the so-called economy cars, tell us: "Our biggest saving is not due to the Twin Six's gasoline, oil or tire mileage."

The "Fuel-izer"
A Remarkable Invention
Now standard equipment on all new Twin Six cars
This ingenious development:
Eliminates carbon.
Stops fouling of spark plugs.
Prevents oil dilution on cylinder walls and in the crank case.
Makes starting easy in any weather.
Ask to see it demonstrated

Even though a Packard will give gasoline mileage from 9 to 13, depending on road conditions; oil mileage 500 or more to the gallon; and tires, properly cared for, 10,000 to 16,000 miles—a Twin Six owner's greatest economy is in the permanency of Packard value.

PACKARDS five, six or even ten years old have a proportionately higher re-sale value than any car we know of.

* * * *

Let us explain the many cases right here in our town where Packards have proved to be more economical to operate than cars costing one-half or two-thirds as much.

We suggest a visit to our showroom to those who do not know the unusual saving that can be made with a Twin Six.

Live Steam Increases Paige Mileage Over 30% in Official Test!

OFFICIAL tests made in all parts of the country by engineers, motor clubs, leading newspapers and other automotive authorities prove that the Automatic Steam Carburetor saves from 25% to 40% on fuel, increases the power, speed and smoothness of the motor, eliminates carbon and keeps the spark plugs clean.

These official tests have been made on almost every make of car. Note the results on the following makes:

	Increased Mileage	Increased Power on 6% Grade	Increase Over Normal Speed
Paige	30.8%	11.2%	5 miles per hr.
Ford	34.3%	13.4%	7 " " "
Packard	41.3%	9 %	5.2 " " "

An Auxiliary Carburetor—Fits Any Car

The Automatic Steam Carburetor is used in conjunction with your gasoline carburetor. It injects live steam into the gas mixture, increasing vaporization and making combustion complete. As a result you get every ounce of power out of your gasoline, which burns clean, leaving no carbon deposits on the cylinders.

You have probably noticed how your engine runs more smoothly and picks up better on damp days. The "Automatic" takes advantage of this natural fact to increase the efficiency of your motor at all times.

Ask your dealer for a demonstration. If he hasn't the "Automatic" in stock, write us for complete information.

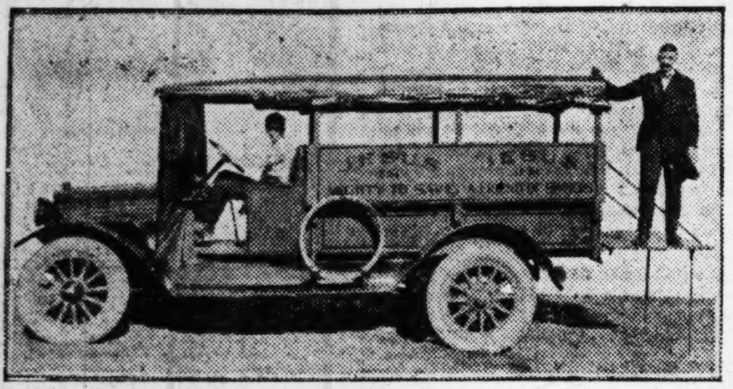
Southern States Busy Improving Dixie Highway

ALTHOUGH the uncompleted sections of the Dixie highway between Cincinnati and Knoxville, Nashville and Chattanooga, Knoxville and Asheville, and Waycross and Jacksonville, where the barriers to through travel have existed, are under construction, steps are being taken by the Dixie Highway association with the coöperation of the various counties and cities on these sections to make such temporary repairs as are necessary to open these roads to through travel during the summer months.

All of the grading on the uncompleted sections between Nashville and Sewanee have been completed and the contractors have started putting on the surface.

While construction is going on between Whitwell and the Hamilton county line, where the completed road into Chattanooga is encountered, the old route from Jasper to Chattanooga via Rankin's Ferry will be used. It is believed that by June a travelable road, in dry weather, between Nashville and Chattanooga can be offered.



AN "UPLIFT" CAR—The Rev. Holland Oates, 3336 Chicago avenue, expects to tour the country in this special Reo gospel car. It was recently completed at his order and is ready for the open road.

THE EXPERTS SAY—

Often it is difficult to start a nut on a thread of the bolt. A few draws of a small three cornered file on the first thread will almost always cure the trouble.

It is possible to make a convenient parallel jaw clamp from a couple of pieces of 3-16x1 inch strap iron and a long belt. The separate jaws are made by bending them roughly in the form of a written Y and then drilling a hole through the upper part. The bolt is slipped through these holes and may be tightened or loosened as desired.

An ingenious motorist has discovered a simple way of cutting out one cylinder of his Ford engine and thereby hampering the operations of a possible thief. He drills a hole in one end of the coil box. Into this he thrusts a well tempered wire with one end beveled. This wire rests against the bottom of the coil box and holds the first coil away from its connection at the base. It is possible to modify this device somewhat so that all the cylinders will be thrown out.

A cotter pin is useful on occasion to help in deflating an inner tube that has been punctured by a nail or in such a way that it still holds air. The cotter is compressed with pliers and the end is pushed through the tube wall, after which it is allowed to spring open. This opens up a large enough hole to permit the air to pass out quickly.

America's Exclusive Knight-Six

THE greatest motor achievement of the age—a six-cylinder Knight motor with no trouble-making valves and ever-sticking tappets, the R & V Knight-Six has been named by engineers "the motor that never wears out."

U. S. Government Surplus Stock
New Army Wagon Covers and Tarpaulins

Offered at $13.95 each—25% less than manufacturing cost of like covers today. Size 14 feet 8 inches by 11 feet 6 inches.

The United States Government has awarded us a very large quantity of these covers for quick distribution. We have placed an extremely low price on them—actually 25% less than they can be manufactured for today.

These covers are new, full size—11 feet 6 inches wide and 14 feet 8 inches long, completely equipped with all the necessary tie ropes, both at the ends and on the sides. They are splendid tarpaulins to protect Hay, Grain, Machinery and other property. Contractors, transfer companies, drivers of all manner of open vehicles will find in these covers a remarkable value.

You can cover your auto with them and when you go out on your summer vacation you can attach one end of the cover to the side of your car, fasten the other end to the ground and enjoy the protection of a fine, good-sized auto tent. Besides this, there are innumerable other ways in which they can be used. Two of these covers fastened together will make a paulin that you could not buy today for a cent less than $55.00.

U. S. STANDARD QUALITY

The material used in their manufacture is the very best U. S. Army khaki colored heavy-weight duck. It is a double-weave, double-fill duck and its khaki color protects it from mildew. Just the kind of material that will withstand damp and moist climates.

WILL WEAR FOR YEARS

One of the best-known ranch owners and cattle dealers in Texas recently purchased a large quantity of Army Duck from us. During a conversation he told us that his father, at the close of the Civil War, had purchased extensively from the Government of this same material. Some of this duck purchased almost sixty years ago, he assured us, was used on his ranches up to just a few years ago.

SPECIAL PRICE

To quickly dispose of these covers, we offer them at the low price of $13.95, delivered to your town. This price is at least 25% less than the actual manufacturing cost of a like cover today.

Club Plan: Either buy 6 covers yourself, or sell 5 covers to your friends. On all orders for 6 or more covers, shipped to one address, we will allow a discount of 50 cents per cover—making net cost but $13.45, delivered.

Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded

The number of covers is limited. We reserve the right to return all orders received after lot is disposed of. Send money order or check with order.

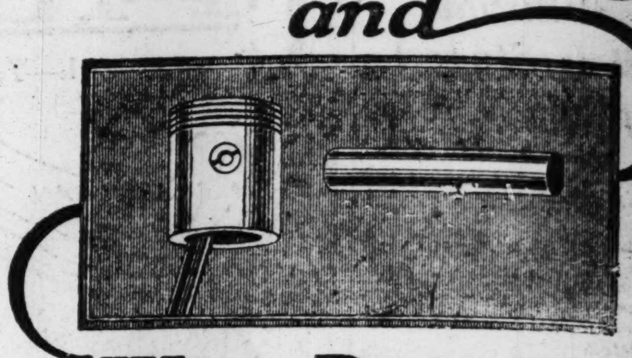
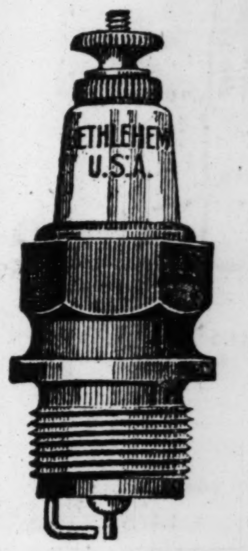
Spark Plugs and Wrist Pins





BETHLEHEM U.S.A.

WHEN a spark plug fouls, or its porcelain fails, the result of that "miss" is distributed throughout the entire power-plant.

The first unit to feel the shock is the wrist-pin, up there in the piston. A knock develops to cut down power and pile up costs for gasoline and new parts. New wrist-pins mean tearing down the entire motor-block.

Guard against these internal strains. Use Bethlehem individually tested spark plugs in every cylinder—sure-fire Bethlehem. Improved engineering ideas reduce liability of fouling. Special-formula porcelain reduces breakage and current-loss to a minimum.

Realize what a vital link in the power-chain is the spark plug. Write for a copy of "Hit or Miss?", which tells you which particular Bethlehem plug is best suited to your particular need.

MOTORDOM

Four Million in Pleasure Budget Spent on Tours

ASTONISHING figures on the money distributed by motorists making long distance journeys have been compiled by the National Parks Highway association, according to W. G. Edens of Chicago. Mr. Edens is the local representative of the highway, which now extends by a well marked route from Chicago to Crater Lake, Oregon, with gateways at each of the four national parks en route. Mr. Edens says:

"Records kept by the highway representatives last year show that a little over 40,000 automobiles used the highway for trips of 1,000 miles or more. We do not keep records of trips less than 1,000 miles, as we do not consider that they are transcontinental in character. Each of the 40,000 cars recorded carried an average of three persons to the car. According to government estimates, the average money spent daily by each person on the road is $4. Many who camp along the line will not spend over $3, but this is more than offset by the number who will spend from $5 to $6. Accepting the government's average of $4 per day and three persons to the car, we have $12 per car daily.

"Each of these autos was on the highway at least ten days. At $12 per car a day this would mean $120 spent by the occupants of each car. Taking our record of 40,000 cars at $120 each, we have a total of $4,800,000. This, I believe, is conservative and it should be borne in mind that there were many other thousands of cars on the highway making shorter trips, all of them adding to the stream of dollars.

"The returns from motor travel are not by any means confined to hotels and garages, although, of course, they receive a goodly portion. Many persons prefer to camp along the route, but they must have groceries, clothing, ammunition, reading matter, souvenirs, and incidentals. Motor travelers whether campers or hotel transients are liberal spenders at theaters and refreshment parlors.

"We are anticipating for 1920 an even greater year for tourist travel. In addition to the general campaign which promotes motoring and which has been gaining in results yearly, we have assurances that many caravans of Shriners will use the highway to reach reunion headquarters.

"The highway is in fair condition for travel at this early date, with only a few bad stretches. By the first of June the entire line will be in good condtion."

GET HIS NUMBER—It will be easy in this instance, for President Wilson seems to have no fear of speed cops and their memory for unusual combinations of license figures. The 100 series licenses shown here are attached to the president's favorite car.

Stop!

Forty-six people were killed 173 were njured, and 152 automobiles were damaged or destroyed at grade crossings last year, according to R. J. Clancy, safety specialist of the Southern Pacific railroad, who issued a warning recently to autoists to take no chances at grade crossings. "A passenger train approaching at full speed and still a quarter of a mile away will cover the distance in eighteen seconds," he said. "This allows too small a margin of time to avoid an accident if anything goes wrong in shifting gears on a crossing. Motorists should think in terms of time as well as distance. It requires only a fraction of a minute to permit a train to pass and it is the wiser way."

Hammond Drops Tax.

Many truck owners have recently been subjected to considerable annoyance and expense by the ctiy of Hammond in endeavoring to collect wheel tax from nonresident owners of motor vehicles whose machines have been operated into and through Hammond. The Hammond city council has repealed this ordinance, at least as it applies to nonresident vehicle owners, and it is now no longer necessary for Chicago trucks to have Hammond licenses.

White Elephant.

Isn't it a pity that a man never can dispose of his motor experience for as much as it cost him?

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

JOSE A. BARROS ,former attaché of the Brazilian consulate in Chicago, and Leland de Villafranca, a veteran in Central American sales circles, have been engaged by the Haynes company to lead a systematic company campaign in Mexica, Central, and South America. The invasion has as its object establishment of sales organizations in every city of importance in the southern hemisphere.

DORT

Quality Goes Clear Through

Plain Facts

About Car Value

Experienced motor car buyers make comparisons. Some compare a dozen cars from every standpoint.

They do this to determine value.

Then they know that the car they buy is the best at the price.

The Extra Value

The Dort car is winning countless tests of this kind.

Dort owners—60,000 of them—have proved that the Dort is the best value at the price.

They even know that it compares favorably with cars of higher price.

Because of this men call the Dort a car of extra value.

Make This Test

Put a Dort car opposite any other car at the Dort price.

Examine every feature. Look carefully over every part.

Go further. Compare it with cars that sell for a few hundred dollars higher.

In almost every case you will find Dort construction superior.

And in many cases Dort engineering is similar to cars that sell for more money.

Chicago people are coming to realize this.

They have proved the Dort's great value.

That is why you see more and more Dort cars on our streets. And further, that is why you will continue to see more and more of them.

More Power—More Pep

Here's Just One Letter. Read It. We Have Hundreds of Others

Mormiles Co.
226 S. La Salle St., City.
Attention Mr. H. J. Lanagan.
Gentlemen:

Just another little boost for Mormiles Tablets.

I have used them in my Olds 8 for over a year and they are surely a wonderful little "Pep" Tablet.

While on a trip last summer in the Sand of Michigan near Traverse City I found myself out of Mormiles Tablets, and upon my return trip in going through the same roads and up the same hills after buying the Tabets in Traverse City and putting in two to a gallon of gas, no hill was too steep or no sand too heavy for me.

As long as I drive a car I will as surely carry a can of Mormiles tablets as I will a spare tire.

Wishing you all the success in the world, I am Yours very respectfully,
J. WILBUR PUGH,

Mormiles "vitalizes" gasoline, making it full of energy and more readily adjustable. This means a quicker and more complete explosion, and this means much more power.

Mormiles gives gasoline the punch and vim that means more miles—many more miles—with a negligible extra cost.

And Mormiles does more—it positively removes all carbon deposit and prevents its formation. It thus insures a clean motor at all times—a free, easy running motor, with never any expense for the mechanical removal of carbon.

SOLD ON POSITIVE MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

Mormiles will do these things for your car—positively, and without a particle of injury to any part of its mechanism. We guarantee it without reservation of any sort.

NOT AN EXPERIMENT—BUT A PROVEN FACT

Mormiles has stood the test. Technical men, gas engine experts and motor car drivers of every class testify enthusiastically to its merits. Mormiles is simple to use, effective and satisfying in result.

"THIS KNOCKS 'EM OUT OF THEIR SEATS" IN VAUDEVILLE

MAJESTIC.

Sam Hearn: While coming from Denver I met a chap on the train who seemed to be very well known. Every one on the train knew him. They called him Porter. Porter came up to me, asked me to take the grip off the seat opposite me. I told him I would not. He said, "Well, if you don't I will throw it out of the window." He did. I told him I did not care, as the grip did not belong to me. Later he asked me if I wanted to be brushed off. I said no, I would get off in the usual way.

My town is so far behind the times that while I was in Chicago last year Chicago was celebrating Thanksgiving and my town had not even started to celebrate Lincoln's birthday.

I walked into a cafeteria the other day. I got my implements and then they insisted that I pay in advance. I told them I had not even started to eat. But I got even with them. After I had eaten I went out without washing the dishes.

Morton and Glass:

"I make good pies. In fact, you can't get better."

"I know it. I ate one three weeks ago and I'm not well yet."

"I had a letter from home. Mother's been sick."

"How's she coming out?"

"On the 4 o'clock train, dear. By the way, tomorrow's her birthday. What shall I get her?"

"Get her to go home."

"I shall not. Pa sends ma here for a rest."

"Well, I guess he needs it."

"I'll have you understand my father is king in his home."

"Yes, I was there the night your mother crowned him."

"Well, my mother's welcome here. She only comes twice a year."

"And stays six months each time."

"Oh, you're too mean. Mother gave us all we have. She gave us this plot."

"This isn't a plot, it's a conspiracy."

"You'll be sorry when Im gone. Youll never get another wife like me."

"There's some satisfaction in that."

"Just remember, there were twenty men all anxious to marry me and they were all smarter than you."

"Yes, they all got away."

PALACE.

George Austen Moore: Two Negroes met, one in the uniform of his country, the other in civies. Said the one in civies, "Where're youall going?"

"I ain't a going, they're taking me."

"Why, man, don't you want to fight for the country?"

"Well, you see, I live in the city and I don't care much for the country."

Two Negroes discussing the first regiment of kilties they had seen:

"Law, man, they can't be men. They have on skirts."

"Well, they aren't ladies. They're too big."

"Maybe they're that famous Middlesex regiment we hear about."

A Negro on guard duty was told to let no one pass who could not give the password. A doughboy came along.

"Halt! Who goes there?"

"Friend."

"Advance, friend, and give the password."

"Password? I've forgotten it."

"Lordy, so have I."

Two doughboys currying horses were disturbed by a horse fly. One said, "Man, what is that?"

"O, that's a horse fly. Buzzes around mules and jackasses."

"Do you mean to say that I look like a jackass?"

"Well, not to me, but you can't fool a horse fly."

Rooney and Bent:

"Are you going to marry Miss Ainslee?"

"How silly! What gives you that idea? The mere fact that I'm engaged to her?"

"I see you have the same modern ailment as all the girlies, the 'Gimries.'"

"I've never been away from the farm, but I know you're the handsomest man in the whole world."

"Now I know she's never been away from the farm."

"Service Cut Our Transportation Costs"

A Statement by Chase & Sanborn, Chicago, Ill.

We are entirely satisfied with SERVICE Trucks. They have cut our transportation costs considerably. We believe that your trucks will stand more hard usage and give better satisfaction than any truck we know of. They are economical in the use of gas and oil. We are enthusiastic over the way the trucks have performed under all conditions. On the few occasions when small adjustments were necessary, the work of your service department was prompt and efficient and the cost of replacement parts extremely low. We believe you are selling the best truck, backed up with the best service, on the market in Chicago today.

Experienced buyers look deeper than first cost—they base their selection on three main points of comparison: the truck itself—what it has accomplished for others—and the service back of the truck.

Owners like SERVICE Strength and Power—they like the dependable manner in which it performs—and its ease of operation. They appreciate the increased haulage efficiency and the valuable business prestige which results.

To meet every haulage need of every user, SERVICE Motor Trucks are built in 80 different combinations of power, speed and capacity from which to choose the one best suited to your requirements.

Owners of SERVICE Trucks are assured against costly delay should repairs or adjustments become necessary—a Truck brought to the service station by 10 P. M. will be ready to resume work by 8 o'clock next morning.

Let us demonstrate these dependable "Builders of Business" to you.

PAIGE
The Most Beautiful Car in America

THE mere fact of owning a motor car counts for but little these days unless it is a car of which its owner may justly be proud.

And this, we believe, is one of the reasons why the Paige Seven-Passenger Touring Car commends itself so highly to the car-owning public. It excites such general admiration that it is a constant source of pride to its owner.

Ever since the Paige Six-55 first appeared three years ago, it has held an unquestioned position of leadership among the finest seven-passenger motor cars on the American market.

Its handsome body, sturdy chassis and smooth-running motor are features often commented upon as being quite exceptional in a car of such moderate price.

You have undoubtedly, at some time or other, ridden in a Paige Six-55. But, if not, you will certainly wish to do so before deciding on your next motor car purchase.

With the demand for the Paige Six-55 far exceeding our utmost production efforts, a prompt decision is advisable. Orders placed now mean just so much more of the best touring season assured for your enjoyment.

ART

Photography's Art and Progress Seen at the Art Institute

By Louise James Bargelt

THE photograph artistic is a modern achievement and one which has appreciators on all sides. This year the seventeenth annual exhibition by members of the Chicago Camera club has opened at the Art institute and there are some ninety prints on the gallery walls, each one of them excellently representative of the art and progress made in photography.

Leonard Westphalen shows "The Old Settlers," a photograph of considerable individuality; Bernard F. Rogers, Jr., has some Italian photographs, among them the "Vatican Pillars" and a glimpse of that ever adorable Capri; E. B. Gray has three photographs—"Sunset," "Morning Mist," and "Lilly Pond." James E. Mead gives us a picture of the River Severn at Shrewsbury. L. D. Carter's "Day Dreams" is a piece to be remembered, as is B. J. Morris' "Winter Morning" and Robert A. Dunn's "Ludmilla in Carmen."

Among the other exhibitors whose work stands out as illustrative of Chicago's high photographic achievements are C. H. Metzner, B. B. Conheim, A. L. Estep, William H. Close, Gordon C. Abbott, F. E. Rich, H. F. Rich, W. F. Wienecke, Paul Wierum, John Julius Ryan, P. T. Tarnoski, and A. W. Sherman.

Louis Ritman, a Russian from Odessa, but who has spent much time in Chicago, occupies one room with his fourteen canvases. These paintings should be seen. They are vivid, intense; they attract the attention, and they hold the interest. His "French Girl," "Bather," "Toilette," "Promenade," "Gaby," and "Girl in a Boat" are done in different moon but all reflect the same strong and vigorous spirit of the painter.

Along different lines, but holding their individual place of interest and charm, is the collection of paintings by Henry George Keller. Many of them are a sheer delight to look upon.

Ohio and California are the two states which he has chosen most frequently to paint and he has caught the particular spirit and atmosphere of each state. One feels the living colors of California, its flowers and rocks, its high and low tides, and endless beach patterns. Of Ohio he shows its different seasons and dispositions, its freezings and its thaws, its fresh spring woods and its autumn fields and meadows.

* * *

A desire is being manifested to encourage the medium of pure water color. So many artists now are employing the pastel and the opaque. Both of the prizes recently awarded at the institute, the William H. Tuthill prize of $100, which went to Frederick Tellander for his work "South Wind," and the C. E. Kremer prize of $75, which was given to Elizabeth Spaulding for her "Colorado Foothills in January," were awarded to paintings which were done in pure water color.

* * *

The exhibition of miniatures by Chicago artists continues to attract much interested attention. A review of the exhibition will be given later.

At the Arts club the French display of canvases, etchings, models, and sculpture still continues to attract much attention. Painings from different periods before the war are here, interesting by way of contrast to much that is being done by artists today, as well as because of their own intrinsic merit.

There are six paintings by Zuloaga, fascinating as Zuloaga always is with his bold strokes, his powerful charm of brilliant color combination, his daring treatment of lights and shadows. There are three life size figures vivid, intense; they burn their way into your memory, for they possess the essential kernel of human personality. There are also three heads, well poised as Zuloaga's women always are, never appealing to you for approval, for liking, but rather sitting in suspended judgment of the world as it goes by before them.

The next exhibit at the Arts club will be on June 5. There will be Indian drawings and paintings and drawings by Monzlzan.

WHAT THEY WANT TO KNOW

G. N. WRITES: "What would happen if the moon were suddenly obliterated? What would happen if the earth had ten moons?"

The moon and earth are, in fact, a double planet going around the sun. The moon incidentally also goes around the earth, but the sun's attraction is many times stronger. If either world were destroyed the other would go right on almost as if nothing had happened. Should the moon leave the earth the tides would shrink to about half their present value, and the precession of the equinoxes would be much less, but to an ordinary person the earth would be quite unaffected.

There is another planet in the solar system which has ten moons. It is Saturn. Saturn has a thin, flat ring of moonlets as well. There is no limit to the number of moons a strong planet can handle. It throws them into a balance and they wheel on and on forever.

P. L.: Mars has two small moons. Both of them have phases like our own moon. Because they go around faster they, of course, run through their phases faster than the moon does. The largest telescope shows Mars somewhat larger than the moon appears to the naked eye.

* * *

W. B. M.: Mars is in Virgo; Saturn and Jupiter are in Leo. Neptune is between Cancer and Gemini, and Uranus is leaving Capricorn. Mars is 4,230 miles in diameter; Saturn, 73,000; Jupiter, 88,000; Uranus, 31,900; Neptune, 34,800. Uranus and Neptune are invisible without a telescope. Mars is 745,000,000 miles from Saturn.

* * *

C. G. M.: Every star is a sun.

MISS E. R.: The bright star that shines in front of Leo is the planet Jupiter. The blue white star rising in the northeast is Vega.

THE ROAD TO YESTERDAY

By Guy F. Lee.

I want to go back where a raise helped a lot
And wasn't just boosting a mystical pot;
Where the landlord was civil, the grocer was bland,
And All didn't try to rob All out of hand.

I want to go back where the waiter and clerk
Were suave and polite and stuck close to their work;
Where you didn't go broke for a meal or a gown,
And a sensible tip drew a smile, not a frown.

I want to go back where Distrust wasn't king,
Where Charity, Kindness, and Hope were the thing;
Where Hate and Suspicion weren't courted and prized,
And gouging and knifing were loathed and despised.

I want to go back to the day of Content,
Where every one wasn't on Selfishness bent;
Where neighborly comradeship reigned among men—
I want to go back to a sane world again!

THE BROKEN SEVEN

BY CAPT. KARL W. DETZER

(Chief of the D. C. I., American Embarkation Center.)

A Story of the "D. C. I," the American Secret Police in France, After the Troops Started Home

MIDNIGHT, and May, and France. The windows of my office were open wide, and the soft breath of the spring night played in and out. In the corner a sleepy clerk labored over a huge stack of carded photographs and finger prints. First Sergeant Madden slept with his arms sprawled out on his desk opposite. It had been a quiet night in the office of the American secret police.

Quiet nights were few in the headquarters of that organization in the American embarkation area in May, and the uneventful early evening had made me fear for the latter part of the night and the early morning hours.

Below, in the narrow street, an automobile throbbed and was silent, a step on the stair, and Detective Sergeant White, chief of my city operators, stepped in. First Sergeant Madden stirred at the sound and gazed long at White. I looked up from my papers, and was fascinated, too, by the appearance of the lanky detective. There was a light in his eyes I had seen before, when he was hot on a trail and coming close to the end, or when we had stepped alone into a place that might mean danger or death, or when I had assigned him some particularly difficult bit of work.

The lines about his mouth seemed deeper—sinister lines they were—and his hair tumbled in unruly waves over his temples. He dropped his hat on my desk, nodded toward the door, and said:

"I just picked up a chap prowling about the Y. M. C. A. in the dark. He saw me and tried to run, but I put a hole in his sleeve and he stopped. I thought you might want to talk to him first."

"Bring him in," I directed, and White trotted down the stair.

First Sergeant Madden yawned.

"It's a fine reprt for the most criminally inclined community in the world, isn't it, Skipper?" he drawled. "Won't it look well in the report book? But, of course, we can tell them up there"—he waved a finger in the general direction of American headquarters, Washington and Paris—"that we have them stopped, that we've got them pretty well cleaned. Five automobiles, eighteen ambitious young detectives, ask to—in the morning in the world's worst cesspool of crime, and one arrest—one prowler, and he'll probably prove plain drunk. O, I'm going back to the Pennsylvania constabulary if we have many nights like this."

White reappeared with a prisoner. Madden grinned. Plain drunk he looked, this lone catch of the evening of May 13. Tall, round shouldered, unclean, the yellow stubble of his beard breaking through a pair of ruddy cheeks, dressed in an ill fitting uniform, he was the typical American soldier absent without leave from his organization and sick from days of excessive drink.

I ordered White to search him, and, while this "going over" process was being accomplished, I questioned the man.

His name, he said, was John Mann, and he told me that he had deserted from the 18th field artillery three weeks before. He described his wanderings through the cities and villages of France, his final determination to turn himself over to the authorities the following morning, and then followed his plea for release to return to his organization.

I listened patiently, not because I was interested in his story—they all told the same tale at first—but because far down in the depths of his voice I heard something that didn't ring truly American. No, it was not British—I couldn't quite make it out. But it was there. When he finished and while Sergt. White examined the little pile of belongings taken from the man's pockets, I said suddenly: "How did you get that American uniform?"

He was surprised and was uncertain of his answer for a moment. And then by a drumfire of questions I pried from him the truth—that he was not an American, but an Australian deserter, who had been living by his wits for thirteen months, since he had deserted from the lines.

"And what," I asked, "were you doing when you were arrested?"

"I was walking along the street, just east of the Place de la Republique and as I passed a narrow passage I heard a noise that was like a smothered explosion, and I walked in to see what had happened. Suddenly in the dark this man grabbed me, and we fought for a moment, and I got away; then he shot, and I felt the sting in my arm. I came with him."

He displayed a hole in his sleeve and a scratch on his arm where the bullet had nicked him.

I looked at the pile of property on the table—the things he had carried in his pockets. It was the usual deserter equipment—German coins knotted in filthy handkerchief, letters from effervescent ladies of the world between, obscene postal cards, a razor, an ivory elephant, Knights of Columbus cigarets. Then, in addition, was a stub receipt book, bearing the signature of the local Y. M. C. A., and several official business documents of the "Y." I showed him these, and asked him where he got them.

"Sure, I dont know," was his answer; "are you in the habit of finding things in a mans pockets he doesn't know are there?"

"None of that, Ausie; tell us about them!"

"But I'm sorry, sir; I can't."

So I ordered him sent to the prison room, dictated a telegram to the British provost marshal at Paris, and a résumé of his story, to the London criminal investigation division, which fiction calls "Scotland Yard."

But there are events of minor importance which fasten themselves upon the minds of individuals. I couldn't resist the stub receipt book. Half a dozen times I turned it over, and then, reaching for the telephone, I called the Y. M. C. A. office secretary, who slept on the top floor of the Central "'Y" building. I told him of the affair, and described the book and the documents.

"Of course, it sounds strange, for I personally placed such a book in our safe at 11:30 tonight, and if I remember rightly I had some such letters in the safe, too," he said. "Yes, to satisfy me he would look at the safe and call me in a few minutes. I hung the receiver on its hook.

Detective Sergeants Carse and Logan disappeared. They had "information" Clay Tindell, champion forger, sought by the police of five nations, had been in the city that evening. They had heard—from a woman, of course—that Tindell had arrived from Brest, and stopped over to call on friends among the Apache, and was expected to go on in the morning. Logan and Carse, after hours of unsuccessful search, had come in for further instruction and to give what information they had.

First Sergeant Madden smiled. Business was looking up after all. Then the telephone rang.

"Gone!" shouted the terrified "Y" secretary. "Safe door off! Money gone! Papers! Thirty-seven thousand francs!"

"I'll be there in ten minutes," and I hung up the receiver. Surely White's catch was a good one. But we must get more than one man, we needed the money as well to close a case. I called White, Carse, and Logan.

In a minute we were whirling through the narrow streets of the city in our powerful car. At the Y. M. C. A. building all lights were burning as we walked up the passageway to the front steps. A diminutive secretary, shirtless and with unlaced shoes, flung himself on us at the top step.

In his little office the safe door swung wide. A jagged hole made by explosives displayed the bolts and tumblers. The vault was empty. Scattered about the floor were documents. The window had been pried with an iron bar, and flecks of red paint had scraped off against the sill.

But nowhere was there a finger print, a foot print. I leaned far out of the window and noticed as I did so the dawn breaking gray in the east. Then just below the sill, on the cement pave-

A Car of Universal Appeal

REACHING the peak of possibility in every department of motor car performance; delivering under every condition the maximum of efficiency with a corresponding minimum of operating cost, the Cole Aero-EIGHT has changed completely all former conceptions of what a motor car can be made to do.

Meets Every Need

The Cole Aero-EIGHT develops 80 horsepower, yet its fuel demands are surprisingly inconsequential.

Its pickup and speed give it the fleetness of a bird, yet for the hills and deep sand it has a relentless brutality which knows no compromise.

It weighs only 3,600 pounds, yet it has the stamina and strength of a giant—capacity that enabled it to serve so valiantly all through the war.

Its 15,000 miles on tires is a feature of unequaled economy, while its spacious roominess affords palatial repose and luxurious comfort.

Its designs are daring departures from the conventions of automobile tradition, but its refinements reflect the most staid propriety.

The Cole Aero-EIGHT has introduced new standards both of performance and appearance. It offers as realities of the present ideals which seemed intended for fulfillment only at some future time.

The Cole Aero-EIGHT is a car of universal appeal, of universal utility. It dominates the field of automotive achievement as a leader in every recent phase of motor car advancement.

Bring Your Battery to us at the First Sign of Weakness

THE hardest wear on a battery comes when it falls below its standard charge. The symptoms of a failing battery are quickly noted. The starter no longer turns over your motor briskly. Your lights begin to burn dim.

That is the time to bring your battery to us. To continue to use it in this condition is to court the junk heap. A simple charge may bring it up to standard. If not, we will open it in your presence and you can see for yourself just what is needed.

Fixed prices and a six months' guarantee on all repairs.

We repair all makes of batteries and are permitted to use in these repairs patented features which have made Vesta Batteries the most durable the world over.

ment, a small dark object attracted my attention. It was an American army button of peculiar, flat design. These buttons were few in the American expeditionary forces. I showed it to White and Carse, placed it in an envelope, and marked it "Exhibit A." By telephone I directed that every American who left the city be checked by the railroad station police, name, description, and destination of ticket be turned over to me. Leaving White and Carse with instructions to keep at it until they had something to report, I returned to the office. First Sergt. Madden still plied Mann with extremely personal questions. And surely, the button of his upper left pocket was gone! And the other buttons were of the same peculiar type.

"When did you lose that button?" I asked.

Mann felt the pocket, seemed surprised, and said: "It's been loose for several days; I didn't know it was gone."

Together Madden and I fired questions at that poor creature. Criminal or not, one feels a peculiar apathy for a man fighting as he was fighting. But time after time when we thought we had him at the breaking point he looked us calmly in the eyes and denied any knowledge of the robbery.

The following day the British detectives arrived—two of them—old Scotland Yard men turned gray in the service. But even they could make John Mann tell more than he had told us the first night. We consulted our legal department, presented our evidence, and were told very firmly to present the proper evidence if we expected to prove our point.

Surely we know that John Mann had something to do with the robbery. Just what part he took we could not determine. The other members of his band were away hiding peacefully, and he would not betray them. So after a week we turned him over to the British and he passed forever from the physical possession if not from the thoughts of the American secret police.

Then one Monday morning there came addressed to the Y. M. C. A. a post package from Paris. And on opening it it was found to contain those official papers which had been stolen from the safe the night of May 13. The address was typewritten, and so was the note it inclosed. As nearly as I can remember this was what the brief epistle contained:

"Sirs: We do not wish to inconvenience you by keeping your papers, which are worthless to us but which may have some value to you. The 37,000 francs we are retaining. We believe we are the only American soldiers in France who got our share of the Y. M. C. A. donations."

It was unsigned. But here was a clew at last. From Paris, then, came the first information we had since we allowed John Mann to slip by us. White and Carse still were at work, following down trails which might lead to further data on the robbery. And the same day came a letter from the British provost marshal at Paris. It was brief but bulging with extremely interesting information. "John Mann, deserter, arrested Le Mans, May 13, by American secret police, escaped Rouen prison May 22. Wire if apprehended."

So he had not only escaped punishment and escaped from the desertion charge, but he taunted us with a note as well. I showed White and Carse the two startling bits of information brought by the French post.

In the Y. M. C. A. package was one interesting clew. The typewriting was done on an American machine not known in France outside the American army. And in the numbers 37,000 the seven was defective—the lower part was missing.

Before night I had every American machine of this make in the Paris offices tested. Every one was listed and a sample of the writing was sent. And in every sample I directed that the number 7 appear several times. The mass of sevens on my desk a few mornings later made an interesting hour's work, but it was disappointing. Every seven was normal.

May and June were long past and July was nearly run its race. The office of the American secret police at Le Mans was closing. Boxes and cases blocked the sidewalk, and only my desk, my personal file, and my own typewriter stood in my empty office room. Below stairs the men were singing as they carted the last shelves and cases to the truck. Sergt. Madden came in.

"Skipper, I just saw Clay Tindell at the guardhouse. They caught him in Paris a few days ago, and he says he wants to talk to you."

An electrician came in that moment to disconnect the telephone, and before he broke connections I called the headquarters.

"Office of the division and criminal investigation [our official title] ceases to function from this hour."

We had finished. I looked down the final report. There were few cases of any size we had not cleared. Murders—four of the twenty-one remained unsolved; burglaries—nee, the Y. M. C. A.—stood against us.

I walked over to the guardhouse to see Clay Tindell. Sergt. White was at the gate, carrying a box of books to the truck. I told him that Tindell wanted to see me and asked him to come to the guardhouse as soon as he had finished the loading of the truck. Then I went on.

Sitting in his cell, Clay Tindell told me the story that cleared the books of the last burglary mystery. True, it was too late, but in my own mind I was satisfied.

"There were two of us," he said, "and we had it planned long in advance. I did the inside work and the other one remained at the gate to watch. He was to give the alarm if any one came. Just as I finished I heard a shot and went out over the wall. I hid nearly a week, and then my accomplice got me an automobile and I went to Paris. I sent back the package of worthless papers from there, with the note you have. Who? O, my buddy on that job was your Sergt. White."

Back at the office ten minutes later I inquired for White. He had driven away in a car a few minutes before, saying he would meet me at the guardhouse.

Sticking out of my typewriter was a note. It was signed "White." This was his message:

"I knew that Tindell would squeal. I'm leaving for Spain. Of course you can't catch up with me, for your car will outrun anything else in France, and I will be sure not to go straight to the border. Don't come after me—if you do you won't come back. And O, yes, the note—you looked too far from home for typewriter. Try out your own 7."

I clicked the 7 several times. The bottom was broken off.

Another story by Capt. Detzer will appear in an early issue.

Nash Trucks

Have Distinct Advantages

The inherent stability of Nash Trucks built in the great Nash factory within fifty miles of Chicago is further augmented by unusual facilities of the Western Motor Car Company to maintain these trucks in owner-operation.

The proximity of the Nash factory, coupled with our large stock of parts, our thoroughly equipped shop and our staff of skilled mechanics, means much to the man with loads to haul.

There are many distinct advantages in our rigid policy of truck maintenance which includes inspection of these vehicles in owner service at regular intervals.

Like Naked Strength Of the Far North
GILLETTE

The Gillette Chilled Rubber Process

Gillette Cord Tires are tires of sheer strength. There's not a thing about their construction or operation that doesn't mean mileage—comfortable mileage—economical mileage—down to the last inch of travel—the last penny of cost.

Gillette Cords do not develop defects. They do not permit tread separation or consequent blow-outs. They are not injured by heat or cold. They do not go to pieces because of fast travel, heavy loads or rough roads. They do not become flabby and lifeless. They do not render anything short of greatest mileage at least cost.

This is due to several causes. One is: proper construction of body—equal distribution of strain over all sections—elimination of weak spots. Another is: the improved Gillette Chilled Rubber Process of manufacture, which refines and toughens rubber as iron is toughened when changed to steel. Another is—and this is important: every Gillette workman is a legislator of labor conditions. He governs working laws—he is a satisfied workman—his heart, his head, his hands are in his work, resulting in a Cord Tire of perfect design, perfect materials, perfect workmanship.

If there is no Gillette dealer near you, write our general sales office. One Gillette on your car is sure to sell you a set.

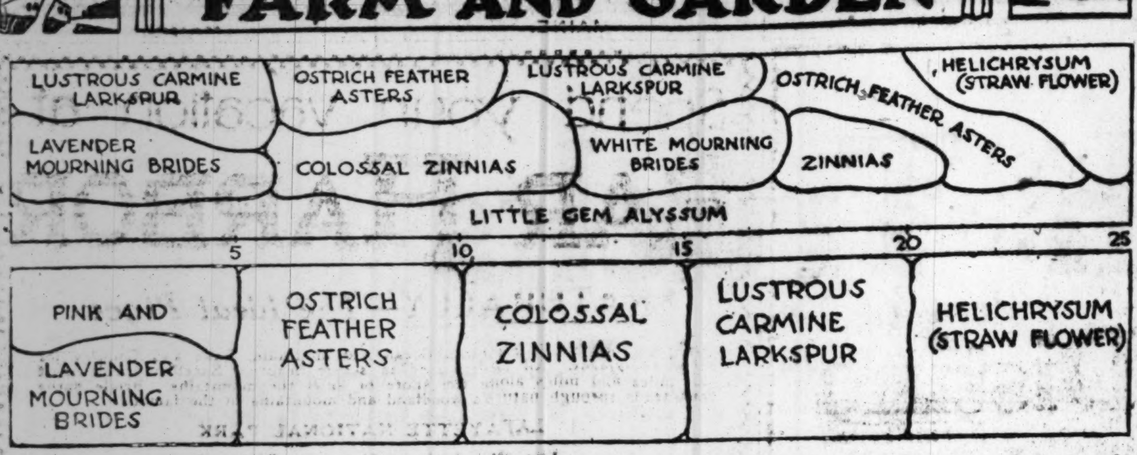
A BEAR FOR WEAR

FARM AND GARDEN



Two ways of planning the border of annual flowers to make bright spots on lawn around home. Designed for space four feet wide and twenty-five feet long. Above shows layout resembling natural masses, which is often preferred to more formal plan illustrated below.

Border Plans for Flower Gardens in Limited Space

By Frank Ridgway.

ONE of the commonest and easiest problems in laying out the home grounds is the small border. Filling these strips with flowers is simple, yet more often neglected than any other part that has to be dealt with in completing the job. Landscape gardeners often regard the problem of laying out the grounds around the home as though it were a picture.

The bright spots or high lights of that picture are the flowers, with the green lawn as the canvas, the house as the important feature, and the shrubs and trees serve as the frame. The composition would not be complete without the flowers.

On most every lot there is space for flowers. Sometimes small, but even then some flowers can usually be grown to add color to the lawn and border of green shrubs. The average unit is usually about 4x25 feet. Of course, it may be of various dimensions, but this hits most home grounds.

Natural landscape effect with an open lawn is now being sought, and the care used in planning will determine the success or failure of your work. It is not necessary that you have experience, but a careful plan is needed to be used as a guide, and thus avoid haphazard borders into which everything is piled rather promiscuously. This is often done and seldom gives good results. Planning does not mean that the flowers should be grown in stiff rows or beds that have been measured with a ruler, but an idea of where each variety of annuals is to be planted will prevent disappointment at blossoming time.

One of the common mistakes made is to plant too many varieties in a small space. A much finer and lasting effect is produced by fewer varieties planted in larger masses than many varieties in small colonies. This mistake is particularly common in cities where space is limited.

Three Color Effect.

An example of a simple border where only a few varieties are used is where red, white, and blue flowers are planted. Such borders were favorites during the war and were planted extensively in some communities. It was simple, effectively furnishing a maximum of blossom with a striking strip of colors.

A red, white and blue border may be made with three packets of seed costing 10 cents a piece. For the front of the border gardeners recommend the Crystal Palace compact lobelia, with its rich, deep blue color. Allow about an eight-inch strip for the plants. The seed is small and should be sprinkled on the surface of fine soil and pressed in. Later the seedlings should be transplanted about four inches apart.

Little gem sweet alyssum should be used for the second row. They are the little dwarf flowers that spread their snow white blossoms over the ground, creating the impression of a beautiful snow white carpet, and are in striking contrast to the first row, the blue stripe. Allow about a foot for the second row.

Now for the back border, the third stripe, there is probably nothing better than the salvias. With its bright, scarlet petals shimmering in the sun like silk fabric, the salvia furnishes a streak of color in contrast to the second row. The plants should be placed at least 12 inches apart, and 18 inches is perhaps better, to avoid crowding. The lobelia and alyssum make a solid mass of color and as the salvias reach maturity they cover themselves with scarlet. Gardeners claim that this border will produce more bloom to the square inch than any other combination that could be made.

Colors First in Plans.

It is a simple matter to select subjects and plant accordingly, and in designing the flower border you should decide what color or colors you want before buying the seed and starting the bed. That's a part of your plans. When it comes to colors of flowers most persons have their likes and dislikes. Some prefer the oranges, yellows, and scarlets, while others like more delicate shades. But there is such a variety of colors found in the flower kingdom that most any combination may be had.

Where the borders are small it is often found best in order to economize in space to plant in long, narrow strips. On the other hand, if the border is at least 4 feet wide and 20 or 25 feet long fine effects may be secured by planting in irregular colonies.

If a border of gay yellows, oranges, and scarlet is desired, marigolds and zinnias furnish excellent material. Some of the marigolds are interesting with their striped and spotted petal markings.

There are few who like flowers who could get along without asters. Here is a fine scheme, suggested by a flower lover who has been growing rare combinations for many years: Plant one-third of the border to white, the middle to pink, and the remaining third to pale lavender. This is a delicate combination, and makes a beautiful bed by using little gem alyssum for an edging, or, if a long season of flowers is desired, a row of dwarf nasturtiums should be used. Plant the asters about one foot apart each way, and leave a foot for the alyssum to develop.

For second choice, this experienced flower grower plants a combination of alyssum with four-o'clocks and asters. The latter has a short blooming period, which is the principal weakness of a border devoted entirely to asters. However, a single row of four-o'clocks, planted a foot apart, makes a good showing when the asters come into season, forming a solid sheet of bloom.

An ideal plan is to have flowers in bloom throughout the season. In order to get a variety and continuous blooming, an excellent plan is to divide the border into five sections, five feet long and four feet wide, and plant five varieties of annuals. With this should be grown a narrow border of alyssum, lobelia, dwarf marigolds, Virginia stocks, Swan river daisy, or any of the small growing annuals.

Mourning brides, planted in the first section, will give material for long stem bouquets. For a dainty combination, plant the lavender and pink varieties. Mixed colors also may be used. Next to the mourning brides plant a square of ostrich plume or late branching asters. The third section might be planted to colossal zinnias, and the fourth to annual larkspurs. The fifth section could be planted to strawflower. The border will come into bloom in June and continue until frost.

Europe—

The Saturday Evening Post for May 15, in an article entitled "Following the Front," says:

"According to latest advices every American who—after paying his income tax—has remaining the price of a second-class steamship ticket is planning to go to France this Summer, etc."

The ground covered by the article mentioned is the ground covered by our various itineraries of escorted tours leaving June, July, August and September, but our clients will enjoy the extra comfort of the first-class passenger.

Those who feel that they should make the pilgrimage to the scenes of conflict, should go this year, as conditions will never be the same again.

The many more or less irresponsible stories reaching this country regarding over-crowded hotels, over-crowded trains, difficulties with passports, passport vises and frontier controls, need cause the clients of Thos. Cook & Son no anxiety.

The experienced travel director who accompanies each tour, aided by our system of making complete arrangements in advance, insures the sort of frictionless travel that can be secured in no other way.

TO INDIVIDUAL TRAVELERS who prefer traveling alone and have secured their own ocean passages, Cook's Service has much to offer: certainty of hotel accommodations, advance reservations on trains, and—if desired—competent couriers to meet them at any point on the other side.

Saguenay River—

New Enjoyments in the Pikes Peak Region

Visitors say the Pikes Peak Region is better each year as a vacation point. Bring your golf clubs—there's a municipal course. A wonderful new bath house is rushing toward completion. There's a new "Cottage City."

Then you can scale Pikes Peak on foot, by burro, on the cog road or the new motor road. Better come early and enjoy the summer.

Is Your Motor Losing Power?

A good motor—with leaky piston rings—is like a strong man with a leaky heart.

To have traction power on the road—you must maintain high compression in the cylinders of your motor.

Burd High Compression Piston Rings hold the highest compression developed by any motor. They are oil, gas, compression tight. The Burd Patented Guard seals the gap—and automatically compensates for wear.

Tell your garage-man to remove your leaky, worn out, wasteful piston rings and install Burd High Compression Rings that insure 100% efficiency. They keep your motor clean, give new life, maximum power and greater efficiency. Burd Rings will prevent most of your engine trouble and more than pay for themselves by economy of gas and lubricating oil.

COLLEGE SENIORS!!

Business Training Fellowships!

The Metropolitan Merchants of today want college-trained men; they recognize your ability and are willing to meet you half way in providing you with the practical business training necessary for your ultimate success.

UNLIMITED OPPORTUNITIES

Twenty of the largest department stores in New York City have co-operated with New York University in establishing a Graduate Course for the purpose of training college graduates as teachers of salesmanship or for the numerous executive positions, as directors of training and personnel managers in the stores.

The Graduate Training Course requires two years for completion and combines THEORY and PRACTICE as follows:

Mornings to study and lectures at the University.

Afternoons and vacations to PRACTICAL BUSINESS TRAINING.

YOU ARE PAID A SALARY WHILE YOU LEARN!

Graduate Fellowships, each worth from $700 to $1,000 yearly, are awarded each college man or woman accepted for the course. You have a bona fide business connection with the cooperating stores during training, and you are given an opportunity to study all departments in many stores.

For further information write or call on Dr. Lee Galloway, New York University, Room 803-C, 32 Waverly Place, New York, N. Y.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Executives and Managers.

DO YOU KNOW THIS MAN? HE IS NORMAL, but by no means a perfect man; fairly educated, but not a college man. He is not timid, likes to meet people, but is not too forward; a good fellow, but not of the old school of good fellows; old enough to assume greater responsibilities [at least 26], but not beyond the age of adaptability to changing environment. This man has made progress, but is not situated where the positions ahead are sufficiently attractive to wait for. I am directed by the head of the progressive organization I associate with to find such a man and employ him when his present position can be filled. We want a man who can assume managerial responsibilities as soon as he has mastered the first rudiments of our business and we are willing to invest time and money in training him. If the reader is not conformable in every respect, kindly pass this to an eligible party, who may not be reading these columns. Address confidentially by mail only, E. M. LAW, 63 E. Adams-st.

A SPECIALTY SALESMAN
TO MANAGE DISTRIBUTING BRANCH.
Nationally known Chicago corporation, manufacturing line of superior phonographs, wants energetic, high grade, experienced specialty salesman to place line with one dealer exclusively in each town. We carry on an extensive and effective direct by mail selling campaign for each dealer at our own expense, which is bringing sufficient new buyers into the store to make our dealers at least $3,000 profit per year in small towns and more in larger towns. Our new salesmen are successful from the start because we thoroughly teach them how to properly present our proposition, and furnish each of them with names of at least 3 merchants each week that have writen for our agency. When salesman has territory thoroughly established with dealers, he must manage distributing branch in his territory, for which reason we would only engage capable man, who is desirous of permanent connection. Position will pay $7,000 per year and expenses, with a big future opportunity to right party. State age, nationality, and selling experience in application. Address C H 574, Tribune.

A DOUBLE SALARY.
WHY NOT?
After you have called on your regular trade in each town, would you be willing to make a pleasant short call, in order to draw another fair size salary each week? Any merchant, manufacturer, or banker is your customer with this new item. It's the BIG COMMISSION-GETTER and sales winner. The wonderful FIVE-MINUTE SALES TALK and pocket sample is yours upon receipt of your letter or postal. Just say "Send me your money making offer." By answering NOW you will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that you have not passed up a DOUBLE SALARY offer without investigation. Good-Will Advertisers Company, Des Moines, Ia., 408 L. SALESMEN.
"WHO HAVE THE MAKIN'S."
This ad interests salesmen who want to earn good money now, with the assurance of a permanent future and increased yearly earnings. Our 15 successful salesmen originally knew nothing of our line, but they "had the makin's," were thoroughly trained and backed with a sound advertising and selling campaign. We finance our men. 80 per cent of the business is closed on "live" leads furnished by us. Average yearly earnings are well over $8,000 and expenses the first year. The product is high grade, sold through dealers only; is in great demand, and in its infancy of exploitation. The firm is old, located in Chicago, has a high commercial rating, and are "live wires." Men of good personality and appearance, who can think quickly, reason soundly, talk forcibly, and do not object to traveling, can permanently connect and make this money "right off the go." Give age, nationality, and sales experience. Address A A 326, Tribune.

SALES MANAGER—
A RARE OPPORTUNITY.
Largest specialty manufacturer of its kind, whose product is nationally advertsied, wishes to appoint an exclusive distributor.
To the right man an income of from $18,000 to $20,000 annually is herewith assured.
Our article repeats itself thereby insuring you a permanent income; we are also protected by strong patents.
We want to hear only from a business man of good standing, financially responsible, and anxious to make a profitable and permanent connection.
Sales Manager will be in this city for personal interview.
In reply, state full particulars and phone number.
Address L 245, Tribune.

SALESMEN—REAL ESTATE.
Full or part time; with or without experience; 4 new subdivisions for you; $100,000 to be spent in display advertising to back you up. If you are wise, you will come in with a responsible firm that gives its buyers profits and homes instead of a lot of promises. If you are open for proof, we can give it to you. We are proud of our subdivisions, for we build them up and there is no guesswork about them. We are the owners of all the property that we offer for sale, and we are not through with the buyer when we get a few dollars from him, but stand back of him until we put up a home on the lot for him. If you can sell without any misrepresentations, we want you to join us at once. See Sales Manager, 111 W. Washington-st., Franklin 2446.
WM. ZELOSKY COMPANY.

SALESMEN—
Are you interested in making money? Would you be willing to follow my instructions for two weeks, if I can prove to you that I can direct your efforts so you will earn $50 to $200 per week?
No previous selling experience necessary. This opportunity affords you a sales training that will be invaluable throughout life. This position is permanent and your earnings should increase from month to month.
You can start immediately either part time or full time. We have openings for men of all nationalities.
You should at least take advantage to personally investigate this opportunity. Call and personally meet many men with our organization now earning $5,000 to $10,000 per year, who were formerly employed as bookkeepers, boiler makers, clerks, machinists, etc.
Call Room 849 First National Bank Bldg.
ASK FOR EUGENE L. SWENSON,
General Manager.
Open every evening until 8:30.

SALESMEN—
ARE YOU PROGRESSIVE?
Would you connect with a high class subdivision organization of 4 years' successful business service?
Our record shows $23,740 paid out in 60 days to 10 salesmen, or $2,374 each.
NO INTEREST on high class property with more leads than you can handle are the reasons for these big earnings.
This is where the production is big and the organization small, giving more to the individual.
Come ready to work.
Call 9:30 to 4 p. m.

WOMEN—
The constant, rapid growth of our business makes it necessary to increase our sales force. We offer permanent positions with liberal remuneration. If you are married and home, had previous business experience, and you have a few spare hours you would like to devote to profitable occupation, we want to hear from you.
We would likewise like to hear from single ladies, with and without experience, who are ambitious and who want to get ahead, who want to be independent.
We give you an opportunity to learn, to grow, to develop. Remember, we will train you thoroughly, equip you for the duties. It matters not what you are doing or what you have done, if you have ambition and self-confidence you can earn money with us while we train you. This may be your ONE opportunity. For personal interview address D Y 298, Tribune.

WOMEN—
To prepare for increase in new business, old reliable firm offers few ambitious women, married or single, experienced or inexperienced, opportunity they have never had. We will require a few hours of your time days or evenings. This will not interfere with your present occupation or home duties, and you can earn $40 or more per week.
We will coach you in our business and in a short time give you the opportunity to come into the firm at increased remuneration. The work is dignified and pleasant. A personal interview will convince you this is bona fide, and that there is no reason why you should pass up this opportunity. Address D Y 296, Tribune.

HOME BUYERS, DO YOU REALIZE

That home building is practically at a standstill, and that there will be no homes or flats available by Oct. 1. Prepare yourself now by buying one of our remaining bungalows at last year's prices, and be assured of a home.

We have a few 5 and 6 room bungalows left, close to "L" road, surface lines, and steam road, on Carmen, Winona, and Foster-av., between Oakley and Leavitt-sts.

Immediate Occupancy

Our buildings will bear the most expert criticism as to construction, and have every most modern appointment, all hot water heat.

HAS YOUR DREAM of a home COME TRUE?
If not we will make it come true for you.

We will build you a home, any style or size you want, in any one of our elegant North West Side Building properties, and you may pay for it like rent—no more.
A great boon for the wage earner, the salaried man, and those of smaller means.
For particulars write

CHICAGO.

ENVIRONMENTS OF HOME.
WHAT DO THEY MEAN TO YOU?

Are you satisfied with your present home? Are you paying high rent for cramped living quarters?
Would a home of your own with beautiful lawns and gardens appeal to you if you were satisfied that you could be paying for it the same as you are now paying rent?
Our co-operative plan will give you a home in Chicago's best developed residence section, on PAYMENTS THAT WILL MEET WITH YOUR APPROVAL.
Write for detailed particulars on HOW TO BE HAPPY IN YOUR OWN HOME. Address F P 374, Tribune.

DON'T MAKE A MISTAKE.

I am doing more to actually put people in their homes in well built up districts with good transportation and shopping district than any one else in Chicago. My proposition is a new one and very unique. It will put you in your own home in a better, more developed district, and on a saner plan than any one else can possibly do it.
This is a brand new idea that will no doubt be imitated as soon as universally known. But they can't imitate the location, for there is only one like it in Chgo. Write for further particulars or if you'll give your phone number I'll call you up. First come, first served. Address F P 373, Tribune.

RIGHT HERE IN THE CITY

We have purchased a small tract of land on the Northwest Side, located in the center of a beautiful built up section, surrounded by schools, churches, parks, and playgrounds, with good transportation, 35 minutes from the loop. This will be sold WITHOUT INTEREST, at very low prices, on the monthly payment plan, including sewer, water, cement sidewalks, and shade trees. It will be about 20 days before we have our prices arranged, plats printed and property in shape to show. This is exceptionally good and will be all sold out the opening day. Get your name on our waiting list for prices and plats as soon as they are off the press, so you may be there the opening day. Take advantage of this. WRITE NOW. Address A E 91, Tribune.

EVERY ONE REALIZES THAT WHEN the building situation adjusts itself, prices on vacant in a desirable location will go soaring.

Our subdivision can't be beat for beauty, exclusiveness, and location. Prices here will double and triple.
You can get your homesite here now on easy terms and get an INCOME
on every lot you purchase, as the property is under lease to a golf club at the present time and all rents collected will be distributed among lot owners until May 1st, 1921, when the lease expires. Lowest rent on smallest lot amounts to $2.50 per month, or 15% net on your investment!
We will start building next year and let you pay like rent for your home. We only help a few. You owe it to yourself to investigate. Address F F 266, Tribune.

Farms on Credit

WE OFFER FOR SALE some 40,000 acres of as good land as can be found anywhere. No swamps or stones. It is located in Kalkaska and Antrim counties, Mich. "BACK TO THE FARM" investors from every section are coming into this district and snapping up the fine bargains. We offer these excellent lands at prices which are only one or two year's rent in the central states.

ALMOST ANY CROPS that thrive in Indiana, Iowa, Illinois, and Ohio will do well on our lands, besides many other crops those states do not produce. It is also ideal land for orchards, vineyards, cattle, sheep, truck farming and poultry raising.

WE ARE SELLING these lands at $15 to $35 per acre in tracts of from 10 to 160 acres or more on very liberal terms, a small cash payment down and easy monthly payments, or annual if preferred. Liberal discount for all cash.

WE LOAN MONEY to settlers to build and buy live stock when the land is paid for. With each purchase we furnish insurance free, which protects your family in case of your death. Warranty deed and abstract of title furnished with every purchase.

WE MAINTAIN expert farm advisers the year round for the benefit of our customers. Our big illustrated booklet will be cheerfully mailed to you upon request, and you need feel yourself under no obligations whatever in requesting it.

IF INTERESTED IN THESE SPLENDID LANDS write for this booklet today or call on us personally. Ask us about our excursion rates and dates.

"HELP"

Most of the farms in this great dairy section of Wisconsin are OPERATED WITHOUT HIRED HELP. Our Mr. Joe Loeb of Medford writes us: "I don't think that there are 5 per cent of the farmers here employ help except during haying time. The reason for this is that the farms are small—mostly 80 acres, and can be handled by the owner alone.

Our Mr. H. D. Boyd of Merrill writes us: "Not over 10 per cent of the active operating farmers employ help outside of that furnished by their own family. The average farm here is 80 to 160 acres. The farmer here has employment the whole year around—farming and milking in Summer, wood cutting, clearing land, and milking in Fall and Winter. The cream and cheese check here are the great mortgage lifters."

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Wisconsin.

OTTER LAKE SETTLEMENT

you will find low priced timber land and good soil. Good farm lands in districts where climate and rainfall are favorable may be bought only at prices beyond the reach of the average man. To get good land at low prices in such districts you will have to buy undeveloped land or land that must be reclaimed. This means swamp or marsh lands, dry farming lands, irrigated lands, worn out farm lands or timber lands. Dry farming lands mean uncertain crops; irrigated lands require a large investment; swamp and marsh lands lack potashes and necessary soil elements, while the worn out farm lands require years of rebuilding. Your best bet is good timber land.

A NEW CHANCE.

We are just putting thousands of acres of cutover hardwood lands on the market in Forest county, Wisconsin. The beautiful Otter and Deer Lakes lie in the midst of this district. Otter River and its tributaries supply inexhaustible watering facilities. Splendid fishing is a feature. The soil is a Kennan silt loam. The mechanical analysis shows 18% of clay, 40% of silt and 29% of sand. Here you get a soil that is equal to your high priced lands of Illinois, Indiana and Iowa. This land will be sold under our Credit System: We furnish building material and require after the first payment no payments on principal and interest for five years. Prices range from $25 to $32.50 per acre for agricultural land and $8, $10 to $15 per acre for grazing land, in tracts of 80 to 160 or more. Write or call for futher information.

REAL ESTATE—TIMBER AND COAL.

FOR SALE—EXTRAORDINARY OPPORTUnity! If you could secure from the owner millions of feet of lumber at a cost f. o. b. cars of $35 per thousand would you be interested?

This lumber is still in trees on 20,000 acres of land in fee simple, located in southwestern North Carolina, contiguous to three lines of railroad, and the other item of this property is a high class band mill, now ready for business. This property owned by the WRIGHT-BACHMAN LUMBER COMPANY of Bostic, N. C.

On account of the death of F. M. Bachman, president of the company, whose estate owns a controlling interest in this property, it has been arranged that the entire holding shall be sold on these terms: $35,000 cash and an obligation of $35,000 yearly for nine years, with 6 per cent interest.

By a careful cruise of this timber it has been demonstrated that the timber stand in species and quantiites is as follows: 60% hardwood, 30% virgin rosemary pine, 10% white pine. The hardwood is largely white oak and poplar—the balance of this classification other native wood.

This timber is situated so that besides the lumber the operator can realize profitably on the bark, acid wood, pulpwood, and railway ties.

W. N. Wright, present manager and stockholder, will consider any reasonable proposition for continuing the operation.

Rare Merchandise

OFFERED BY THE HOUSE OF HARRIS & RODGERS

1920 Pierce-Arrow [brand new], 4 pass. sport model, 6-38 dual valves. Seat covers, extra cord tires, etc. The most beautiful Pierce-Arrow in Chicago and the only one of its kind for immediate delivery.

1919 Locomobile 6-48, 4 pass. Sport model, with special $4,000 body. Westinghouse shock absorbers, plate glass winter inclosure, seat covers, cord tires. Carefully driven only 7,000 miles and cannot be distinguished from brand new. Perfect in every detail.

1919 Packard 3-25 twin six 7 passenger touring car. A wonderful car for your trip this season through the Adirondacks, that will take you there and back in comfort and without annoyance. Driven only a few thousand miles and refinished in black and two-tone French gray.

1919 Mercer—One of those smart looking, powerful 4 passenger sport models—the kind you see at the country club for a "foursome." In its original finish of Burgundy wine, this car has been used so little and handled so carefully that it presents the appearance of new.

1919 Daniels—In New York you see many of these custom built "Distinctive cars." 4 pass. sport model with trunk on rear. One of those tailored looking affairs that the moment you see it only one word occurs—"Class."

Standard new car warranty with every purchase.

A FUR AND FAIR PROPOSITION.
Shop around town first, if you like, then come here, and if we can't save you at least 20% on a fur neckpiece or next winter's coat we will make you a present of any garment in the store. Being manufacturers, combined with low upstairs rent, makes this saving possible, and while 20% pay not sound very big, it's a downright honest saving, and will really pay you to investigate. Charge accounts invited.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

OWN SOMEBODY ELSE'S HOME AS WELL AS YOURS

That's Slogan in Unusual Housing Project.

"If homes are built in proximity to the plants, they will attract employés who are now compelled to live at a distance; they will bring into the neighborhood those not already employed here, and thus create a future supply of workers, and they will increase the interest of employés in the future of this section. If these homes and the surroundings are made attractive the entire community will respond to the improved conditions.

"The morals, industry, efficiency and above all the contentment and happiness of the individuals will be materially improved. These conditions will increase the labor supply, improve the quality of the worker, and will be of great commercial value to the industries of the district."—Comment made to the employers of the central manufacturing district by H. E. Poronto, industrial agent of the district, and one of the principal movers in the project described below.

BY AL CHASE.

"Be somebody else's landlord as well as your own," is the jazzy slogan back of Chicago's newest and in some ways most unusual housing project, which is expected eventually to care for several thousand employés of fifty-five concerns in the central manufacturing district.

"'Own your own home,' is a fine little group of words for the renter to memorize and then live up to," soliloquized an official of the district recently, "but it'd put a lot more pep into things if it read 'own your own home and someone else's too.'" That started something. Instead of making it possible only for a family to buy its own home, this newest housing project makes it possible for a family to buy a two flat building, living in one and renting out the other.

Work to Start at Once.

Work is to start in a few days on the first hundred two flat buildings. Options have been secured on 125 lots within easy reach of Ashland avenue and Thirty-fifth street and others will be secured in desirable locations shortly. Homes will be sold pratically at cost—$7,500—and on easy terms.

Another unusual feature of this central manufacturing district housing project is that instead of being backed by one big industry and built for that industry's employés, houses will be built for the employés of fifty-five concerns, who now total 12,500. Of these 30 per cent already are home owners. At present thirty-four firms and individuals in the district have subscribed for stock in the $125,000 Home Building Real Estate Improvement company, the organization which is back of the project.

Naturally the employés of these thirty-four stockholders will get first choice of homes. The $125,000 fund is to be revolving, however, so that it is estimated that it will be only a few years before enough houses are built to care for all the employés in the district. No attempt will be made to sell the two flat buildings to two families. One family will buy each building and rent out the extra apartment.

All the buildings will be fireproof, of brick, trimmed with terra cotta. Plenty of light and air will be assured each building, for the plans call for a space between structures of not less than six feet. Parkways and yards will be sodded and trees and shrubbery planted and walks and fences built. All the work will be supervised by a committee of architects, with S. Scott Joy as the chairman. No fee will be charged for this work.

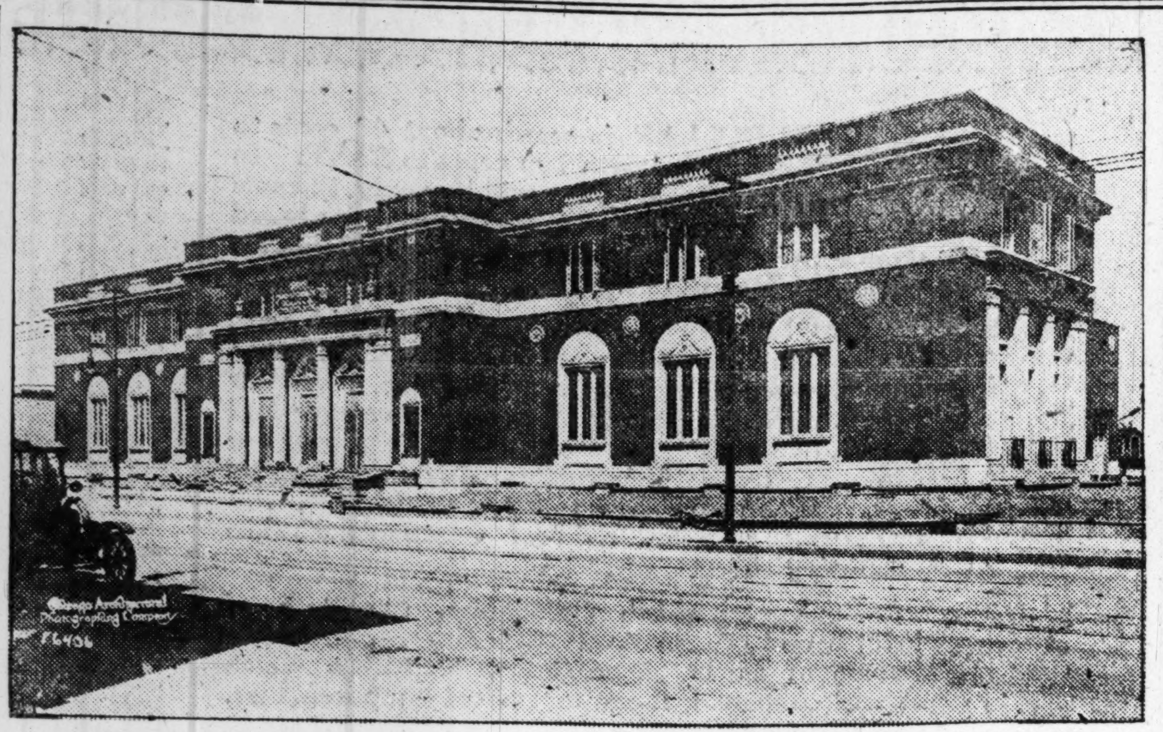
Lumber, steel, and concrete and other building materials have been ordered. It is expected that, owing to the large purchasing power of the company, the buildings can be put up much cheaper than by an individual. It is planned in the event of any saving being effected in the expected price of homes this difference between the selling price and cost will be divided among the purchasers and credited on their contracts.

Financing Cost at Minimum.

The houses will be sold by contract, secured by first mortgage. The cost of financing will be kept at a minimum. Only such charges are to made as are necessary, including insurance, expenses, etc., and to maintain the capital stock as a revolving fund.

The company is to be managed by the man who was one of the biggest factors in the development of the United States government's army supply depot in Chicago from a capacity of 25,000 square feet to 25,000,000 square feet in less than three years—Gen. A. D. Kniskern. This officer, now retired, is a graduate of West Point, 1886, and with the exception of a few years has been continuously in the quartermaster corps, having seen service in many parts of this country, Cuba, China, and the Philippines.

Following are the firms and individuals who own stock in the Home Building Real Estate Improvement company: Sefton Manufacturing company, Haggard & Marcusson company, Midland Warehouse and Transfer company, Feinberg & Kahn, Rittenhouse & Embree company, Machinery Warehouse company, United States Cold Storage company, Henry Bosch company, Larkin company, Silberman & Sons, William Wrigley Jr. company; Spiegel, May, Stern company; Cross, Roy & Saunders; Viscosity Oil company, O. W. Richardson company, Straus & Schram, Harris Brothers company, E. W. Sproul company, Central Forwarding company, Johnston & Jennings company, Boynton Wool Scouring company, Albert Pick & Co., H. P. Smith Paper company, Dennett-O'Connell company, John Magnus & Co., Brady Foundry company, Oppenheimer Casing company, S. A. Maxwell company, Gage Structural Steel company, Service Station Equipment Co., Inc., Oscar M. George, Pullman company, S. Scott Joy, and the trustees of the district.



West Side to Have One of Finest Branch Libraries in the World

Preparations are under way for the dedication of the Henry E. Legler Regional branch library at West Monroe street and Crawford avenue. The buildings will have cost the Chicago Public library board about $200,000, and it is the first of a series of five so-called regional branches designed to serve as the center of administration and distribution for all public library service in their respective regions.

The Crawford avenue branch is said to be one of the finest branch public libraries on the continent, and was pushed to completion largely through the efforts of President Alfred E. Barr and Col. James J. Healy, Charles E. Schick and Elliott W. Sproul, members of the building and grounds committee. Col. Healy, noted soldier in the civil and Indian wars, is vice president of the board, since his appointment to which over six years ago he has become totally blind.

A Memorial to H. E. Legler.

The branch is named after the late Henry E. Legler, librarian of the Chicago Public library from 1909 to 1917, who outlined the regional program to the board of directors, but to whom it was not given to see its realization.

The building, which is designed by Architect Alfred S. Alschuler, will be 183 feet long and 80 feet deep, and two stories. It will have a stack capacity for 100,000 volumes and storage capacity for as many more, the latter for distribution to other west side branches.

Library for the Blind.

There will be two reading rooms, one for adults and one for children, a story hour room, study alcoves and seminary rooms. Special efforts will be made to serve the students in colleges and professinal schools, as well as the grammar and high schools.

A library of books in raised type will be installed, and weekly hours for reading to the blind will be instituted. A garage and complete auto truck service are included in the plan.

SHERIDAN ROAD RESIDENCE SOLD FOR $135,000

Joseph E. Tilt, president of the J. E. Tilt Shoe company, and representing the "T" in the Diamond-T Motor Car company, again figures in the week's largest residence sale. He has purchased through Cremin & O'Connor, from Frederick T. Haskell, vice president of the Illinois Trust and Savings bank, the three story brick house at the southeast corner of Sheridan road and Barry avenue, for a reported $135,000. The property fronts 166 feet on Sheridan and 115 on Barry. Mr. Tilt will make this his home during the summer months and spend his winters in California.

As already announced Mr. Tilt has sold his former residence which fronts 409 feet on Brompton street, 234 on Broadway and 274 feet on Addison street, and which he built in 1914 at a cost of $300,000. The Salvation Army has purchased it.

The Salvation Army has given a trust deed, secured by the former Tilt residence, to the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings bank, for $100,000, three years at 6 per cent.

Albert W. Harris, of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, has sold the residence at the northeast corner of Kimbark avenue and East Fiftieth street, lot 68x129, to Gertrude G. Sutcliff for an indicated $38,000.

In La Grange the twelve room stucco residence of Joseph M. Lyon, has been sold to Herbert H. Taylor, of the Taylor Coal company, for an indicated $35,000. The lot is 200x135 at Waiola and Maple avenues.

Another suburban residence sale was the eleven room house at 261 Hawthorne avenue, sold by Lydia H. Hess to Helen B. Mercer for an indicated $36,000.

Plans Questionnaire on Available Apartments

Just how many flats are available for renting now and how many will be available next fall? An attempt to answer both questions is being made by the Association of Commerce. Its committee of fifteen has requested J. K. Brittain, chairman of the real estate division, to supply the association with a survey of conditions. Mr. Brittain has appointed a committee consisting of William Zelosky, chairman; William D. Murdock, and John Hoggins, to take charge of the questionnaire to be sent to real estate agents.

J. R. Thompson Co. Opens First South Side Grocery

The John R. Thompson company, which has opened twenty grocery stores on the north and northwest sides as part of a city-wide chain, has just leased its first store on the south side through E. F. Keebler & Co. from Charles H. Bromann at 839 East Sixty-third street, for ten years at a term rental of $18,000.

$200,000 Warehouse Being Built by Steel Sales Co.

Work started yesterday on an unusually designed warehouse for the Steel Sales company, to cost $200,000. It will be ready for occupancy in October. It is at 3322 South Crawford avenue, on a thirty-four acre tract, across the river from the big Peoples gas plant now being built. There will be two head houses with cross houses connecting. Steel will be received at one head house and moved by crane to one of the cross houses for storage. For shipping it will be moved on to the other head house—thus always moving in one direction. There will be 85,000 square feet of floor space. F. A. McNally is engineer and H. A. Durr & Co. are mechanical engineers.

La Salle Extension U. Plans $250,000 Building

A six story administration and office building to cost in the neighborhood of $250,000 is planned by the La Salle Extension university on the 50x177 vacant in Michigan avenue, west front, 100 feet south of Forty-first street, purchased from Michael W. Murphy for an indicated $9,000. The university is at the northwest corner of Michigan avenue and Forty-first street.

CHICAGO HEIGHTS PLANT SOLD.

The Western Foundry company, now at 3634 South Kedzie avenue, has purchased the three acre plant improved with several one story buildings at Wentworth avenue and Sixteenth street, Chicago Heights, for an indicated $37,500.

COL. JAMES J. HEALY.

18 BUILDINGS NOW GOING UP IN MOTOR ROW

Motor row shows no signs of slackening—from the viewpoint of the real estate man. For instance, there are under construction on Michigan avenue at the present time eighteen buildings for automobile purposes.

Adolph and Albert Halperin have purchased through Oliver & Co., the vacant at 2540-44 South Michigan avenue, for a reported cash price of $55,500 and are having plans drawn for a two story, 60x179, building, which already has been leased. This is the fifth recent sale of Michigan avenue frontage within a block.

Cafeteria Planned for West Madison Street

West Madison street is to have a big cafeteria, one of the first good sized ones on the west side. The Mid-City Cafeteria company has leased from Martin A. Ryerson the first floor of the building at 728-30 West Madison street, just east of Halsted street, for ten years at a reported term rental of $80,000. The upper floors have been rented to Warner Bros. company, A. B. Segur & Co., Willens company, and the Monarch Textile company for five years at a term rental of $60,000. The owner is remodeling the entire building at a reported cost of $25,000. W. F. Conlon & Co. and O. D. Dodge were brokers.

OTHER CITIES TO JOIN CHICAGO IN CONVENTON TRIP

If you're thinking of going to Kansas City on the special train of the Chicago Real Estate board next Saturday to mix business and pleasure for seven days, at the convention of the National Association of Real Estate boards, you'd better call up Herbert A. Cole, executive secretary, 126 North Dearborn street. His phone is Central 2904.

Present plans call for five Pullman drawing room cars, two compartment cars, two diners and an observation car. So far 125 reservations have been made through Mr. Cole. In addition there will be a delegation of about twenty-five from Detroit, probably fifteen from Milwaukee and others from downstate cities. More cars will be arranged for if necessary.

The train will pull out of the Union station over the St. Paul at 9 p. m. next Saturday evening. It will arrive at Excelsior Springs, Mo., on Sunday morning. Then begins the fun of half the week's tour. There'll be golf, concerts, dinner dances, a ball, motor trips, and other outings for three solid days.

On Tuesday evening, June 1, the party will move over to Kansas City and on Wednesday morning settle down to work—the principal work of the Chicago delegation being to get next year's convention for this town.

The convention will be in session on Wednesday, June 2, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, the Chicago party leaving for home Saturday evening at 5 p. m., getting back here at 8 a. m. Sunday, June 6.

Meanwhile, Mr. Cole announces that open house will be held at the Chicago Real Estate board rooms all day next Saturday, for local and visiting realty men.

Trinity Methodist Is Leased by Auto Laundry

Another south side church has succumbed to the onward march of business. Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, at the southeast corner of Indiana avenue and East Thirtieth street, has been leased to the McRoy Auto laundry from July 16, 1920, to July 15, 1935, at a term rental of $36,000. The lease, which is dated May 10, calls for immediate possession after signing. The lessee has option to purchase premises for $40,000.

State St. Shoe Company Leases Outlying Shops

Two outlying shops have been leased by the Feltman & Curme Shoe Stores company, which operates several State street branches. It has rented through Marks & Co., from Morris Drosdowitz, the entire building at 1227 Milwaukee avenue for ten years at a reported approximate term rental of $70,000. It also has leased through the same brokers the store at 3403 Roosevelt road, owned by Jacob May, for ten years at a reported term rental of $51,00.

County Realty Board to Make Its Rooms Clublike

When the present program of the house committee of the Cook county real estate board is completed, it is expected the quarters in the Conway building will look more like a club than a business office, as they do at present. The refurnishing already has cost $2,000 in initial expenditures. The development of the several service departments will involve an additional expenditure of about $2,500. When the plans are all completed a smoker will be held.

Evanston Author Sells Apartment for $75,000

Edwin Balmer, author, of Evanston, has sold the twenty-one apartment building at the northeast corner of Indiana avenue and Fifty-seventh street, lot 80x162, to Adolph Innerfield, dealer in woolens, who lives at 5329 Prairie avenue, for an indicated $75,000, subject to $29,000.

119 U. S. Government Houses for Sale

At Hammond, Ind., Saturday and Sunday, May 22-23

Workingman—Investor—Small Capitalist

Here Is the Opportunity of a Lifetime

These houses, together with large lots, concrete streets, all public utilities, grounds sodded and landscaped, all of which is included in the prices asked, cost Uncle Sam a million dollars a year ago. If built today they would cost $1,250,000.00. They are now to be parceled out to the home buyer, the investor, on the easiest terms for a total of only $660,000.00.

This Is Part of the Salvage of War on Which Uncle Sam Loses $340,000

The Standard Steel Car Company had a Ten Million Dollar Government Contract. Homes for Workingmen, Sewers, Streets and Sidewalks had to be built. A small city arose in a single year. This city, house by house, is to be sold May 22 and 23.

And the People, the Small Investors, Get the Benefit

Offering includes Bungalows, Two Story Houses, Double Houses and Four Apartment Houses. Terms—Ten per cent cash, one per cent of balance a month. Monthly payments include interest at six per cent a year on all unpaid balances. Most any house may be bought for $360.00 to $500.00 cash. Down payment of $50.00 to $100.00 required on day of sale.

Rents in Hammond are going up. Buy a Government House; make the first payment, and the chances are your rents will pay out the balance due the government.

SALE STARTS 9 A. M. SATURDAY

How to Reach the Houses: Take Hammond street car at South Park Ave. or South Chicago, South Shore Electric at Illinois Central Suburban Stations, the Nickel Plate, Michigan Central, Monon or Erie trains to Hammond, Ind. In Hammond take East Hammond street car to the U. S. Government Houses.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Action of the corn market late yesterday in advancing 3⅝c after a break of 6⅝c suggested an oversold pit condition, with eastern interests regarded as the principal shorts. Many of the local traders, who pressed the selling side all week, had handsome profits and took them around $1.55 to $1.56 for July. They said at the close that, as prices were off 25c for July and 27c for cash within a week, it was not wise to follow the short side too far. A few of the houses in close touch with the country said that interest had been largely reduced, and was nearing the end of its selling.

Sentiment among a number of the big interests remains bearish, and they can see nothing but temporary rallies, due to shorts covering, and to be followed by sharp breaks on corn and all grains. Others, however, made the point that with the seaboard exporters asking for refusal of wheat, corn and rye over Sunday, they were not disposed to advocate the bear side, except on a good advance from the present level.

The short interest in oats was greatly reduced by scattered unloading by small holders, while in corn one of the largest holders has been a heavy seller for several days. Industries took the cash corn; mostly at $1.90 for No. 2 grade and 1c less for No. 3. Deliveries on May contracts yesterday were 75,000 bu oats, making 255,000 bu in the past two days, which were paid for by Knight & Co. and Logan & Bryan. Shaffer & Stream paid for the 5,000 bu rye on delivery, and have taken in the bulk of the rye the past two weeks.

Cash barley market has been without buyers of consequence for the last two days and 25 cars were carried over unsold yesterday. A car of choice pearling barley sold at $1.65.

"Price action in provisions during the declines in corn values simply proved that in a general way hog and provision prices had already been fairly well deflated," said W. L. Gregson, a provision specialist. This is no unusual happening as it is well understood that provision values are supersensitive to change conditions as they are naturally under discussion by the whole human family at least three days. Hog values may sag a little, but they are on a healthy level and breaks are not liable to hold. The British are fairly well supplied for some time, but may be buyers of lard as the season develops trade. We think lard will have the best of the argument on its merits."

A report that 500,000 bu oats had been sold for export at the seaboard attracted considerable attention yesterday, being the first mention of business in many weeks. A New York wire, however, said it probably was a garbled view of the sale of 350,000 bu by one exporter to another, and that there were no foreign bids.

That economic conditions cannot be disregarded indefinitely, says Simons Day & Co., has again been demonstrated by recent developments in the corn market. Crop conditions are favorable on the whole and prices are attractive. The greater part of the present supplies will have to come from country elevators, which have sufficient to relieve the strain until farmers have completed planting.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Butter prices lowered ½c with the news bearish and buying restricted. Eggs were off ½c for current receipts and buyers more indifferent. Arrivals for the week were 152,007 cases, or more than 20,000 cases short of the previous week and May 40,000 cases under last year's. Cold storage stocks are 888,000, against 1,088,373 cases last year. Fresh firsts were 38½@40½c, with standard northern cases 41c. Live fowls declined 1c, to 33c, and broilers sold at $7.00@12.00 a dozen, despite the moderate offerings.

For old potatoes the market was firm, with a good trade and only 15 cars in. Arrivals for the week, 160 cars, or 36 cars less than the previous week and compared with 319 cars last year. White stock ranged at $7.50@7.65 per 100 lbs in car lots for Michigan and Wisconsin and $6.00@6.50 for the best Canadians. New potatoes were in better supply and market easy at $17.00@17.50 a brl for No. 1 from Florida.

Strawberries brought better prices, $9.00@10.00 for good to fancy Illinois in 24 qt cases. Arrivals were 8 cars and 550 qt cases.

HAY RECEIPTS LARGER

Arrivals of timothy hay yesterday were 35 cars, southwestern prairie 11 cars, Nebraska prairie 1 car, Illinois prairie 2 cars, and wheat straw one car. Demand was good at recent prices. Dealers, however, say that values are likely to decline in the near future with any material increase in receipts, and country advices reported an enlargement in loadings. No. 1 timothy was $50.00 and other grades of timothy $44.00 to $49.00. Sample hay, $42.00 to $44.00. Nebraska prairie, $34.00 to $35.00; Kansas, $32.00 to $38.00; Illinois, $30.00 to $33.00; rye and oat straw, $22.00 to $24.00 per ton.

Watch the Interstate Commission.

The preliminary steps thus far taken by the interstate commerce commissioners toward putting the new railway law in effect give some ground for encouragement to holders of securities.

The commission is approaching the question of rates from an angle it never before used. First, it has been figuring out just how much additional revenue will be needed to yield an average return of 5½ per cent on the $19,000,000,000 or more of railway bonds and stocks outstanding. With that figure as a basis, hearings will be held in the effort to adjust rates so as to fill the big gap between present net earnings or deficits and the amount needed, plus any increase of wages that the labor board may approve.

In the past the commission always had to be convinced of the necessity for an advance in rates before it would do anything whatever. Now it recognizes that a big increase must be made and has started by figuring up the amount needed. Commissioners are holding informal conferences with railway officials, instead of insisting on formal procedure as formerly.

While these indications are favorable, they are, of course, only a small beginning in the restoring of credit and prosperity to the railways. The future of these properties is in the hands of the commission, and investors should watch its methods and decisions with untiring vigilance. They should use their influence freely in the effort to get fair treatment. Shippers and various other interests have always been active in getting every concession possible. The fact that investors have been unrepresented in the past is one of the main reasons for the sorry condition into which their properties have fallen.

Detroit Edison.

M. M., Kalamazoo, Mich.—The Detroit Edison company is issuing $10,000,000 of 6 per cent bonds secured under its refunding mortgage. This increases the total of refunding bonds to $26,665,000. There are $14,000,000 of underlying liens, while, junior to the bonds are $9,970,900 of convertible debentures. Earnings have increased steadily for years, and are now more than twice the interest on mortgage bonds. The new bonds are well secured.

Gillespie Coal Company.

C. F. L.—The Gillespie Coal company was formed in 1918. As of Jan. 1 last it had issued $155,800 of stock and owned a mine which, with buildings, machinery, etc., it valued at $195,712. It had a floating debt of $66,689, and its balance sheet showed a deficit of $17,225. In the latter half of 1919 it produced and sold $30,444 worth of coal at a cost of $36,194. This is a business venture which was not on a paying basis at last accounts.

Have Your Bonds This Protection?

Who holds the title to the property pledged as security for your First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds?

Has it been examined and insured?

Have your bonds been certified as genuine?

Few investors appreciate the importance of the trustee's position—why it should be a highly reputable trust company and a disinterested third party to the making of the bond issue.

In every Chicago bond issue offered by us, the Chicago Title and Trust Company is appointed Trustee.

In out of town issues the leading local trust company is chosen. The trustee examines the title and signatures of the parties to the transaction and issues a Guarantee Policy.

The trustee also certifies the validity of the bonds. In fact, no expense is spared by us in safeguarding our clients' interests.

There are no better, safer or more satisfactory investments available for your savings than our First Mortgage Real Estate Gold Bonds.

WANTED—

Man with Brains and Some Money

One of Chicago's well-known investment houses has an exceptional opportunity for a man of broad experience, capable of managing its first mortgage bond department. Gentile preferred, between the ages of 25 and 40. To one who can qualify in regard to character and ability and has at least $25,000 open for investment an unusually profitable and safe proposition will be submitted. Tell us in strict confidence all about yourself and what you have accomplished.

ADDRESS B O 484, TRIBUNE

YOUR DOLLAR is worth about 42 cents to SPEND. It is worth 100 cents to SAVE. In other words, a Dollar will buy only 42 cents worth of food, clothing or other commodities based on pre-war prices, but it will buy 100 cents worth of prime 6% securities.

Due to economic conditions the world over, investors in First Mortgage Real Estate Gold Bonds have the opportunity now of securing a greater return, with 100% safety, than they have ever had before, and perhaps greater than they will ever see again. Gilt edge investments which, before the war, returned only 4½% to 5%, now yield 6%, with increasing security, as real estate values are enhancing almost daily.

Banks, Insurance Companies, Executors of Estates and other conservative investors are large buyers of H. O. Stone & Co. securities, which should commend them to individual purchasers.

Will you spend your Dollar now, receiving only 42 cents in pre-war values for it, or will you save your Dollar and invest it in high grade First Mortgage Real Estate Gold Bonds, receiving in the meantime a full 6% income—no worry—no risk—100% Safety?

We now have a particularly attractive list of First Mortgage Securities, all secured by Improved Chicago real estate.
